George Moore, the youngest son was about as tall as his father. He spent some years in the west. He returned to Pocahontas about 1841, and was a pupil at the first session taught in the Pocahontas County Academy, at Hillsboro, in 1842. The Rev Joseph Brown was principal. He had the profession of medicine in view, and was studious to a fault in his efforts to qualify himself. Mr Brown thought his natural endowments were equal to any one he had ever seen, and took much interest in the quiet and exemplary student so intensely anxious for intellectual improvement. After all his intense labor, the young man was seized with pulmonary disease, aggravated by his close application to books, and died at the home of his sister, Mrs Rebecca Irvine, on Back Creek, some time in the forties. The writer remembers him well and esteemed him highly, and he feels the pathos of "The Epitaph" in Gray's Elegy of a Country Churchyard.

Levi Moore, senior, located 575 acres of a "British survey" on the headwaters of Knapps Creek. After the Revolution new requirements were made in order to secure permanent possession. It was to pay a requisite fee, a warrant would be laid, and a patent granted by the federal government. The new papers are dated 1798 and attested by Henry Grimes, Allen Poage, and signed by James Madison, Governor of Virginia.

Previous to this survey George Poage had laid a warrant on two thousand acres, which would have included the 575 acres claimed by the Moores. At first the Moores contested for the British right, but when they found such was not valid they then availed themselves of the provision authorizing exchange of warrants. Levi Moore, junior, appears in this new arrangement as assignee of Levi Moore, senior, for lands adjoining the lands of Aaron Moore, who was living at the time on the Herald place. So when a warrant held elsewhere was exchanged for the warrant on the land adjoining Aaron Moore was agreed upon by Poage and Levi Moore, it came about that when the patent was applied for George Poage stated the fact that there had been an exchange of warrants, and at Poage's request the title for 575 acres was vested in Levi Moore, junior, as assignee of Levi Moore, senior.

This transaction is interesting and instructive as showing the spirit of the times, and how business men acted on the principles of an enlightened and pure conscience. So far as the letter of the law went, Poage could have held the 575 acres with all the improvements and good qualities of the land; yet within his breast there was the higher law of a conscience void of offense toward God and men, and he keeps his fellow citizens from suffering the consequences of the mistake he made when he relied on the validity of British right which had been declared null and void by the results of the Revolution. At the time the warrant elsewhere here so exasperate to and value to the warrant for lands adjoining the lands of Aaron Moore.

The golden rule comes in, and an enlightened conscience decides the matter; the spirit did right when the letter of the law would have been a shield for robbery; now the law tendency in the right of the Supreme Being, the legislated by the laws of the government, duly enforced and construed by the letter. It makes us feel proud of our pioneer people to catch glimpses of what manner of men they were.

It is a sad day for any generation or family relationship to have it said of them that, like potatoes, the best parts of them are in the ground.

The record of this transaction is carefully preserved and may be consulted time and again in the future as a testimony of what it is to be fair and square. We close this paper and lay down our pencil, feeling that we have had something good and instructive to write about.

W. T. P.

Newspaper Ignorance.

Complaint is made continually that the men responsible for the opinions of newspapers are frequently lamentably ignorant of the subjects on which they write, and especially so when they write on subjects pertaining to foreign countries. France and the United States are supposed to be the chief offenders in this respect. Thus the Petit Parisien, Paris, a paper with over 80,000 circulation, and supposed to be the best informed in France (of all the dailies) with regard to things alien, makes some amusing blunders about the American continent. We quote a few instances:

"Canada is a great country. She may well be proud of having given birth to George Washington."

"Among the celebrities present at the review of Russian troops was the brilliant commander-in-chief of the American army, General Nelson."

"It should, of course, be remembered that the masses of the people are only half civilized in America, the dirty power of money making alone rules."

"Klondike is the little country of Alaska, which belongs partly to the United States, partly to Canada. There will be complications, as Russia has always claimed jurisdiction in those parts."

"Venezuela, the country assisted by the American jingoes, is so small that one can hardly find it on the map."

"In Eureka Springs, Arkansas, on a beautiful bay of the Pacific coast. . . . ."

True Hospitality.

The Washington Post prints a true story, told by a retired army officer. The occurrence happened in New Mexico. Col. X. was making a long march, and his provision wagons had gone astray. He was hot, tired and hungry, when he met Major B., who invited him home—presumably to some fort—to breakfast.

The major's fortunes were at a low ebb, and when the breakfast was brought on it proved to consist entirely of rice—rice cooked in the wonderful southern fashion, with every kernel perfect. The hungry guest ate a spoonful. He detests rice. Then he waited for a second course.

"Have some rice, colonel," said the major, whom nothing disconcerts, quite as if the rice had but that moment appeared.

"No!" snapped the colonel. "I'm a Kentuckian, sir, and I don't eat rice, sir. Give me something else, sir."

"Why certainly, colonel, certainly," said the host. "Try some of the mustard; its very fine, sir, very fine."

WEST VIRGINIA can now be carried by the Democrats next year. The result in Ohio is enough to show that. If the legislature on joint ballot is Democratic, then we can send Col. John T. McGraw to the Senate. This strongest West Virginian would take the place of the late Senator Kenna, and it is proper place for a man of his talent and statesmanship. He is undoubtedly at the head of the party in West Virginia, and nothing would be more suitable than his election to this post of honor.

SOMEBODY has remarked that the two most indifferent to the result of the international conference in regard to nothing in the Behring Sea, are the seals and the women of Australia.

Notions.

In casting around for a name for a department for this paper, in which may be gathered such unworthy conceptions as may be sent to the writer, and which may not be classified easily, we have adopted the much-abused word 'notions,' having hesitated a long time over "bone-yard" and "ash-barrel"; and, as we intend the notions to be of our own manufacture, we begin with the mental apprehension that many of our candid friends will say at once and continue to believe that the heading "dry - goods" would have been much more appropriate. But what would you? Should we head the column "pen-thoughts" the worn out newspaper word would have caused the reader to fly the track, and, skipping the "pen thoughts," go and read a legal advertisement with relish. We feel that the time of year has come when the reader can stand a few more essays than in the busy months of the summer.

It was at this season when the first editor of this paper, James Buckhannon Canfield, used to advertise his family newspaper and urge the people of Pocahontas county, now that the long winter evenings had come, to subscribe for the Pocahontas Times so that they could have something to read of nights. It was then too that the wit who carried the mail from Huntersville to Lewisburg suggested when the paper failed to be printed because the paper had not come on that the editor buy a lot of postal-cards and just print on them.

That was after the glamor had worn off concerning the setting up of a printing press in the county. In 1882, when the paper was first set up here, the printer was looked upon as a most extraordinary artist, and the printers grasped the situation and acted the big man as quickly as the traveler always does in the story book when he falls in the hands of savages, and by reason of his false teeth and wig is considered a "medicine man." The people then were not quite sure how many years it took to make a printer, and what his qualifications need be. Rev Marshall, over at Mingo, was connected with the enterprise, and to this day he kind of claims him with us. To illustrate what kind of a man an editor was in those days before he was found out, Aaron Jordan, the dairy keeper, one time took the Hon. James Buchannon to Beverly, his native town, and he said:

"I allus thought Mistah Canfield was somethin' straordanary, but de first man we seed in Beverly said 'Hello! Buck!' and dat's de best name boy of 'em called him."

The Marlinton bar wish it distinctly understood that they disapprove of the late action of the State Bar Association, at Morgantown, which seemed to justify what is known as "government by injunction." They are inclined to think that it is the result of a meeting of big corporation lawyers who had the game of a ticket to Morgantown, to again, and then they wanted to show the big corporations that they had a client. The people at large have a childish interest of how game is fed, without these endearing things the people do not understand, and fear. The one man, the bar be a judge, is dangerous. The one man is not all-wise, therefore he should not be all powerful. It strikes us that the lawyers who voted this salve to the corporations, by passing a resolution upholding the power and extent of the law of injunctions, as it seems to be interpreted now, stand little chance of any material reward in the way of big retainers from corporations. A corporation has a way when it picks a lawyer of killing two birds with one stone. It gets an able lawyer, and converts to its own use a man who would be dangerous to to its interests if left at large.

Henry Watterson, editor of the Courier Journal, is tired of fooling with the gold-Democracy and has come back to the Democratic party, joining the "reptiles" that he was fighting a few weeks ago. He does not swallow any free silver heresy, but he goes into the organization again, in a forbearing sort of way which seems to say that he does not hold the Democratic party accountable for what it says. His joining the standard is the most remarkable, immediate, and noticable result of the late election in Kentucky.

Petitions have been circulated here asking Congress to establish postal savings banks over the country. It is one of the things which the Grange is working for, together with a free delivery of rural mails. The postal bank would be a great convenience. It would tend to the saving of small amounts by providing a convenient place of deposit, and would also influence the spending of small amounts by providing such an excellent means of transmitting money all over the Union.

The Chicago platform may have had its day in court, but one of these days we will meet in another town and amend our bill of rights and present it to the people, and then we will carry the country as Democrats. We will repudiate the name Bryanite, and make the fight on the old and tried principles of Democracy.

Colonel John T. McGraw has put himself on record about injunctions. He says the Chicago platform should stand, if for no other reason than that it pledged itself to remedy this evil.

SOMETHING ABOUT TAMMANY.

The late struggle in New York City has brought the political society known as Tammany Hall prominently before the people, and it is surprising what erroneous ideas exist in regard to this famous organization. This society is one of the oldest and most patriotic of any time or any country. No other local organization has had anything near its power and influence in shaping the history of our glorious republic, and its members have a right to be proud of its history. At times corruption has affected it, but all endeavors to pervert the aims of the society to selfish ends have been of short-lived duration. The eyes of the members were blinded for but a short time, and they promptly excommunicated all traitors. The facts thus we give are from no less authority than the Encyclopaedia Britanica, and works of equal veracity.

During the Revolutionary war the soldiers from the State of Pennsylvania chose as their patron saint the Indian chief Tamenand or Tammany. This chief was the head of the Delewares, who owned the country from the mouth of the Deleware River to the headwaters of the Hudson, and were the Indians whom the whites of that section first came in contact with. They were a tribe of great honesty and were faithful in their treaties with the whites. By this means the pioneers were enabled to establish their homes in the wilderness without danger. The chief Tammany lived to be near a hundred years old, dying a short time before the Revolution. He was held in the greatest veneration by his tribe to the day of his death. It was from this man that the society, chartered by the legislature of New York in 1805, derived its name.

Its primary object was to preserve the liberties and immunities from a monarchical form of government that had been so dearly purchased by the Revolutionary war. Since that time it has been a potent factor in American politics. The idea seems to exist that there is something foreign to our institutions in the nakemp of Tammany, but such is not the case. It has preserved to this day some of the Indian forms and precedents. Aaron Burr was elected vice-President by its influence, tho he was never a member. As soon as he was found out the society brought him down and ended his political career.

Since 1828 the society has been uniformly connected with the democratic party of America." July 4, 1867, the corner-stone of Tammany Hall was laid, and the next year the national convention of the party met in the building and nominated Seymour, of New York, and Blair, of Missouri, as the presidential ticket. About this time came the darkest period in the career of the society. It fell in the power of the Tweed ring, and fraud and open stealing were practiced. In a year or two prominent Democrats succeeded in indicting Tweed and his satellites, and effectually destroyed the ring.

It has belied the Democracy when it has felt like it. It secured the defeat of the Democratic nominee for governor of New York in 1870, and defeated Hancock in 1880. In the eighties members of the organization in office in New York were accused of malfeasance in office, but even if the charge be true, the organization cannot be blamed.

It seems to be particularly just that this great society organized by the Democratic party of New York City, with the exception of the Jeffersonian single taxers, should be placed in power the first administration of the reactionary governors of the second city in the world. The society was raped when the Republicans party came in existence. It has had a long, clean record for honesty, tho it has been the victim of misplaced confidence, and it is the best representation of the American spirit that is to be found in the great city. It has kept under the right thing in the case with most organizations that have such machines to carry out their policy by other governments.

The Boston Republican plead has been purchased by the Greenbrier Valley Democrat, and will be run as a Democratic and a paper worthy of support. We hope the Democrat will be successful in its new venture.

Jocky's Neck farm, situated on what is known as the Spratley road about four miles from Williamsburg, has been sold to Mrs Perry, of Watseka, Ill., for $6,000. The property contained about three hundred and fifty acres.

THE Charleston Gazette of last Sunday contains an extensive account of Bishop Peterkin and his work in West Virginia. He is traveling nearly all the time, and a great deal of his time is spent on the mountain roads of the interior counties of the State. He, by his own efforts, established the Sheltering Arms Hospital, in Fayette; the Light House, a reading room and house of entertainment in the slums of Parkersburg, to afford working men some other place of recreation than the saloon; and a dormitory at Morgantown, where students are placed in the care of those competent to look to their habits. Last Sunday he installed Rev M. T. Turner, at Lewisburg, who will have charge of the work of his church in Greenbrier and Pocahontas.

Mr Croker in Bath.

The daily press prints the following account of Richard Croker's and friend's visit to Warm Springs:

HOT SPRINGS, Va.—Richard Croker is fast regaining his health. When he arrived on Sunday morning he was worn out. An improvement was noticed on Monday, and Tuesday he was in the best of spirits and looked well. He began the day by climbing a hill over five hundred feet high, just south of the hotel. Senator Grady, Miles M. O' Grady, Asa Bird Gardiner and Rudolph Guggenheimer started with him, but Mr Gardiner was the only one who continued with Mr Croker to the top. After the walk the Croker party was driven to Warm Springs, a watering place near by. It is the county seat of Bath county, and yesterday was the opening day of the county court.

After looking at the places of interest around the old hotel, Mr Croker suggested that all hands go in and see how the courts are run in Virginia, little thinking that he would come face to face with what he had enunciated as the paramount issue to the people of New York, that is personal liberty. The case before the court was that of an applicant for a retail liquor license. The attorney for the Commonwealth was vigorously opposing the granting of the license. It was a typical crowd of Virginia mountaineers, rough, bearded, restless and suspicious looking, that filled the court room. The judge, an old man with long white beard, sat with his feet upon his desk, quietly nibbling an apple. The lawyers were on an inclosed platform in the center of the room. They wrangled with witnesses, when disregarding the judge. Messrs. Croker and Grady took seats well forward, and Asa Bird Gardiner the attorney's enclosure. Mr Croker was attentive all the time, gravely watching the witnesses as the case progressed.

Mr Grady was in a reminiscent mood, evidently recalling his days on the bench as a police justice. Mr Guggenheimer watched Mr Croker, reporting on his words. When a witness was asked whether he did not think two saloons enough to supply liquor for the village in question, he replied:

"It all depends upon the size of the thirst."

One witness, when asked if he thought the applicant's house a proper, suitable and convenient location for a saloon, replied:

"Well, it's suitable enough, but personally I don't think it is convenient. Eleven miles from my house."

The partly suppressed laughter of the Croker party at this answer almost amounted to contempt of court. It increased the ill will of the witness against the applicant, and the witness looked as if he wanted to fight. Another witness who had admitted that he took an occasional drink, said, when pressed for a reason as to why he was averse to saloons:

"Well, I do take a drink when I can get it but my credit isn't good in those parts."

After hearing the next witness, a justice of the peace, who testified that he had found it necessary to close his saloon at 10 o'clock, the court adjourned for the day. The Croker party left for the Hot Springs, where they will remain for a few days.

THE YOUTH'S COMPANION.

THE Youth's Companion is undoubtedly the peer of any periodical published in the world. The Companion is too well known to need any special mention, for those who are once its readers rarely give it up, or do so with the greatest reluctance. For this reason it is enabled to offer an endless variety of useful and beautiful premiums (each worth nearly, if not altogether, the price of subscription) for NEW subscribers. Considering the class and quantity of reading offered, the popular price $1.75 is extremely low. It has departments that will interest every member of the family. The serials and short stories of travel and adventure are strictly high class, and open a wider horizon of thought and culture to every ambitious youth. The Companion originated a field of its own eighty years ago, which it has occupied exclusively. Address the Youths Companion, Boston, Mass.

Commissioner's Notice

Office of S. B. Scott, Jr., Commissioner, Marlinton, W. Va., November 19, 1897.

Pursuant to a decree of the circuit court of Pocahontas county, made in a cause therein pending on the 8th October, 1897, entitled—

Thomas L. Conlehan et als., vs.
Daniel O'Connell,

I will proceed at my office in the town of Marlinton, W. Va., on the 20th day of December, 1897,

to take, state, and report to court the following matters of account viz:

1st—The liens against the land in the bill and proceedings mentioned, with their respective legal dignities and priorities, and especially whether or not the lien retained by N. P. Aldo-man is an existing lien.

2d—Whether or not the said land will for five years rent for enough to pay out the liens thereon.

3d—Any other matter, etc.

Respectfully,
S. B. SCOTT, Jr.,
Comm'r. in Chancery.

NOTICE to LIEN HOLDERS.

To all persons holding liens by judgment or otherwise on the real estate or any part thereof of Daniel O'Connell:

In pursuance of a decree of the circuit court of Pocahontas county, made in a case therein pending by and between the said estate of the said Daniel O'Connell as the defendant of the liens thereon, you are hereby required to present all claims held by you and each of you against the said Daniel O'Connell which are being agreed upon as a lien or any part of it, for adjudication as to the said land is now vested by forfeiture or otherwise, and who if any one is entitled to redeem.

4th—Such other matters and things as said commissioner may deem pertinent and as of the parties interested may require.

And it is further ordered that said commissioner before proceeding to execute the duties above set forth in the parties interested and all unknown owners and claimants of said land of the time and place when and where he will proceed to execute the duties above set forth, which notice shall be published in the Pocahontas Times, a newspaper published in Pocahontas County, for four successive weeks before commencing said account.

Commissioner's Notice.

Office of Commissioner in Chancery
Andrew Herold
vs.
Amos Barlow and others.

All parties interested in the above styled cause will take notice the undersigned commissioner will on the 20th day of November, 1897, at his office in the town of Marlinton, Pocahontas County, West Virginia, proceed to take, state, settle, and adjust the following accounts:

1st—An account of all the debts against said H. M. Lockridge existing on the 19th day of September, 1891, showing in said account what debts or charges were liens or encumbrances on the land conveyed by deed from H. M. Lockridge et al to Amos Barlow et al, of date September 19, 1891, together with their priorities; together with all other debts against said Lockridge existing on the day aforesaid, which may be properly approved before him.

2d—An account of the real estate conveyed by said deed of September 19, 1891, showing its annual value on the 19th day of September, 1891, less taxes and permanent improvements, and also its fee simple value.

And report to court together with any other matter specially stated, deemed pertinent by himself, or which may be required to be so stated by any party in interest.

At which time and place you may attend.

ANDREW PRICE,
Commissioner.

NOTICE TO LIEN HOLDERS

To all persons holding liens, by judgment or otherwise, on the real estate or any part thereof of H. M. Lockridge:

In pursuance of a decree of the Circuit Court of Pocahontas County made in a case therein pending by and between the said H. M. Lockridge et al. and H. M. Lockridge to the satisfaction of the liens thereon, you are hereby required to present all claims held by you and each of you against the said H. M. Lockridge, which are liens on his real estate or any part of it, for adjudication as to the said land is now vested by forfeiture or otherwise, and who if any one is entitled to redeem.

4th—Such other matters and things as said commissioner may deem pertinent and as of the parties interested may require.

And it is further ordered that said commissioner before proceeding to execute the duties above set forth in the parties interested and all unknown owners and claimants of said land of the time and place when and where he will proceed to execute the duties above set forth, which notice shall be published in the Pocahontas Times, a newspaper published in Pocahontas County, for four successive weeks before commencing said account.

LEVI BEVERAGE, of Clover creek, came to this place to do some trading last Saturday, and made some purchases at D. Pullins & Bro's. among them was a superior pair of pants. He left the goods he had bought in a basket in front of the store while he went to another store, and when he came back the watch prized pair of pants was gone. Levi's well-disposed party had evidently lifted up the article, something very unusual for our community.

ONE half of some advertisements are misleading. I have left that half out. I want to save you some money on your wraps if you will let me. Here are a few pointers: Ladies' black capes worth fully $1.50 I sell for 88c; black cloaks, worth $2.00, I sell for $1.48; nice beaver double capes, worth $3.85—2.78. I have a lovely line of plaited black capes trimmed with braid in dark navy and green, they are the latest. Come and see my bargains. PAUL GOLDEN, the price cutter.

A FLOCK of wild turkeys flew into Lexington Tuesday, and slighted on the parade grounds of the Virginia Military Institute, where they proceeded to make themselves at home. Soon a wild turkey hunt was in progress and royal sport was furnished for nearly a whole day. A resident of that neighborhood said that it was like war times again, for nothing but a continual roar of firearms could be heard. The fowls were hunted with almost every kind of a fire arm in existence, except the old flint lock. The total damage done to the flock was three fine fowls out of thirteen, the remainder making their escape to the high cliffs along the river.

THIS has been called the advertising age. When a man starts in business, rejuvenates old business, or has something special to offer to draw custom and create "talk," or dispose of unseasonable goods at cut rates, the people have come to expect to be conveniently informed of the fact in some way or other. They have not the time nor will they take the trouble to investigate such matters for themselves. The people of Pocahontas are not much behind the times in this respect, and many of them not at all. The best way is to advertise in a newspaper that reaches all the people whose custom is worth having in your neighborhood. Its the quickest, cheapest, and surest way. John Wanamaker, the prince of store keepers, says he wants to be on friendly terms with the man who can set the types and talk to a thousand people the next day. Advertising is the life of the great department stores of the city. The country store is its counterpart. Why should not energetic advertising bring them results? But remember not to try to fool the people. Be honest in your advertising; make genuine offers of bargains and stand to them. It will pay in the long and short run.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Col D. O'Connell was in Marlinton, Wednesday.

Mr and Mrs W. A. Bratton left last Monday for a visit to Marshall Virginia.

O. E. McKEEVER, of Huntersville, assisted by George Beard and Letcher Barnes, is at work on the new school house near L. J. Fyles' on Beaver Creek.

J. M. Hutchinson, of Summerville, W. Va., spent Sunday in Huntersville. He represents the Payne Spice Company, of Charleston, W. Va., and carries eleven hundred samples.

Mr William McComb, head of Beaver Creek, died Thursday, November 17, aged about sixty-five years. He was a worthy industrious citizen, and his useful services will be missed. He was a brick-mason and stone-mason by occupation.

S. J. McClung, of Summerville, who represents a Delaware firm, reports that there are four thousand canneries in a radius of ten miles of Natrona Coast House. The stocks have at least nine of ten on an average.

Mr and Mrs William E. Johnson, near Marlinton, would hereby render their very grateful acknowledgements for the sympathy and valuable assistance rendered by friends and neighbors in relieving the losses suffered in the burning of their home.

S. J. Boggs, of Huntersville, has a large and handsome stock of goods and clothing for fall, and will be pleased to have you call and examine them. Remember the place is at the sign of the big boot.

The Railroad.

A notice is published in this issue calling for a meeting of the Greenbrier Railway Company at Huntington. This is significant that matters are shaping themselves to get the construction under way. The Greenbrier Railway Company is a corporation chartered five or six weeks ago by the Secretary of State, and its object is the railway development of the Greenbrier Valley.

As far as we can learn, without speaking authoritively, this corporation is formed to build the road, and they will issue bonds for the purpose, which will be taken by the owners of the immense tracts of lands which have recently been acquired by capitalists within the bounds of this county.

The route is not permanently decided upon. It is reported that ex-Senator Camden has made a proposition to the company that if they build a road up the Greenbrier, he will extend his line of railway up Cherry River and meet the road at Spring Creek or Hillsboro. The lands purchased, however, point to a route down the river to Marlinton, by Huntersville and Driscol to the White Sulphur Springs.

This county is rich in natural resources. A railroad extended into to this county would have an immense amount of work to do from the start. Our most despised timber is the white-oak, pronounced by competent judges to be the finest of its kind in the State. Tanbark is here in almost unlimited quantities. No substitute has ever been found for tan-bark and it is a necessity. Any point would supply a large tannery for years.

Here too is iron ore close to inexhaustible supplies of coal and limestone. An iron mountain extends from Green Bank to White Sulphur, a distance of sixty miles.

In the western and northern portions of the county the timber at many places is equal to a jungle The doom of this section was pronounced twenty years ago, when prospectors said that the land had better be sold, as the trees were too big and stood too close together to admit of the land ever being cleared with profit. "There would not be room on the ground to pile the logs and burn them." But viewing it from a lumberman's standpoint the estimate of the value of the land would be just the opposite.

Big Lambs.

To the Editor of The Times: In your last paper there is an article relating to the number of good lambs that have gone, from our county this fall. This is all very encouraging, since this industry, which brings more money to the taxpayers than the cattle trade, has been built up in the last ten or twelve years. We note that A. D. Bruce sold 95 lambs that averaged 75lbs. E. N. Moore beats that record, having sold 100 lambs that averaged 90 lbs., 37 of which drew the scales to 3710 lbs. Who comes next?

We are confidently expecting the railroad at an early day. Col. (colored or colored) Sam Stewart interviewed the chief engineer, who asked him if he (Stewart) knew where they could buy 50 or 60 mules to work on the road. ***

Dunmore, Nov. 11, 1897.

THE hanging of Albert Voiers took place last Friday, at Fayetteville. The execution was public and passed off without special incident. Voiers died protesting his innocence of any crime for which he should be hanged, and said he had no hand in any of the murders. He said he had no part in the murder of John Cochran, yet it was because of his confessions of this crime that he was reprieved from hanging on June 25. He afterwards escaped and was recaptured till an adjoining county. About 10,000 people witnessed the execution.

Lobelia.

Peter McCarty, of Dilleys Mill, was in town a few days.

Luther Sharp and family, of Elk, have been visiting here for several days.

There have some parties around who claim to be Pinkerton men, but we have our own opinions.

Warm and mudy at this time. Corn shucking over, and hog killing in full blast.

We hear that two bears were killed near Falling Springs, and that there was more people than bear hides, and further trouble is expected. There are plenty of turkeys and some bears down here.

A large crowd attended the quarterly meeting, last Saturday and Sunday, by Rev D. C Hedrick, Pointt, has been visiting in this vicinity for the past two weeks. She is a daughter of Abram Hill. Also she is seventy years old, she has many kind words to drop among her friends.

OBSERVER.

Items from the Greenbrier Independant.

Messrs Preston and Wallace have formed a partnership for the practice of law.

Invitations have been issued for the marriage of Mr W. R. Shisler and Miss Mary Pickering, which will take place at the residence of the bride's father, John Pickering, Esq., the Falling Springs district, on November 24, at 6 P. M.

A. W. Arbuckle weighed six yearling heifers for A. M. McLaughlin, Esq., that averaged 933½ pounds. One weighted 1,100, one 1,010, one 950, one 870, one 844 and one 836. Five of these heifers are thorough-bred Shorthorns and one a graded, and were raised by Mr McLaughlin on his farm north of Lewisburg.

On Wednesday last week, as Mrs M. P. Farrier, in company with another lady, was driving along the road in a buggy, near Fairview Church, five miles north of Lewisburg, she met a bear that frightened her horse, making him jump about in the road. This frightened the bear, which took to the woods. Lacy Johnson and Guy Darnell killed a bear on Weaver's Knob, near Mr Farrier's residence last Thursday. It dressed about 100 pounds.

Russell Edgar Yeager.

At 2.15 yesterday afternoon, Russell Edgar, the little son of Mr and Mrs Walter Yeager, died after a brief illness, death being caused by marasmus. He was two years, 1 month, and 8 days old, and was a bright little fellow, but had never been real strong. His death is a sad blow to the parents, who have the sympathy of all.—Cheyenne (Wyo.) Tribune.

Meeting of Stockholders.

NOTICE is hereby given, pursuant to the Code of West Virginia, chapter 54, section 36, that the first meeting of the stockholders of the Greenbrier Railway Company, for organization and such other proceedings as may lawfully come before the meeting, will be held at the office of Simms and Enslow, attorneys at law, Huntington, W. Virginia, on Thursday, the sixteenth day of December, 1897, at the hour of 12 M.

J. M. GILL, H. C. SIMS, F. B. ENSLOW } Majority of Corporators

JUDGE JOHN PAUL, sitting at Abingdon on Monday granted an injunction in a novel postoffice muddle in Montgomery county. The owners of land in the vicinity of Pilot postoffice declined to rent or sell a site for postoffice purposes to Postmaster W. Thomas Payne, a recent appointee of the McKinley administration. To meet the emergency, the postmaster procured an omnibus which he located on the public highway and proceeded to open business on Uncle Sam's account. B. M. Guerrant sued out a writ of unlawful detainer in the County Court and placed it in the hands of a deputy sheriff for execution. The Federal Court was appealed to, and Judge Paul issued a temporary injunction restraining Guerrant and the deputy sheriff from hindering or interfering with the postmaster in any way in reference to his omnibus postoffice, which is located on a post road of the United States. He also issued against the same parties a rule requiring them to appear before the court to show cause why the temporary injunction should not be perpetuated.—Rockingham Register.

Marlinton, W. Va., Oct. 29, 1897.

State of West Virginia, Plaintiff versus
J. B. Lowe, Orsmel Barrett, James C. Sneedegar, John E. Roller, Samuel Curry, and A. J. Hooks
Defendants.

The plaintiff and each and all of the above named defendants and all to known owners and claimants of any part or parcel of the land mentioned in the plaintiff's bill in the above entitled cause, will take notice that on the 30th day of November, 1897,

at my office in the town of Marlinton, in the county of Pocahontas, W. Va., I will commence the discharge of my duties under the decree of reference in the above entitled cause, a copy of which decree is published with this notice.

At which time and place, you, and each of you, can attend and be heard and defend any interest you may have in the lands or any of them in question in this suit.

Given under my hand this 29th day of Octr. 1897.

S. B. SCOTT, Jr.
Commissioner.

(Copy of Decree)

State of West Virginia
versus
Jno. B. Lowe et als,
In Chancery.

This cause came on this day to be heard upon the bill and exhibits therewith filed, summons returned duly executed as to home defendants, order of publication duly published posted and completed as to nonresident defendants, bill taken for confessed and was argued by counsel.

Upon consideration whereof, it is adjudged ordered and decreed that this cause be referred to S. B. Scott, Jr., one of the comrrs. of this court to enquire into and make report to a future term of this court to the following matters and things concerning the lands alleged in the bill to be forfeited, viz: A tract of 40 acres, a tract of 82 acres, a tract of 5 acres, a tract of 40 acres, a tract of 30 or 40 acres, a tract of 30 acres, a tract of 20 acres, a tract of 30 acres, a tract of 165 acres, a tract of 450 acres, a tract of 230 acres, a tract of 360 acres, a tract of 150 acres, a tract of 500 acres, and a tract of 250 acres.

1st. For what year or years the said tracts or any of them have been forfeited for the non payment of taxes due thereon, and whether the said tracts or any of them have become forfeited to the State of West Virginia for the non payment of taxes due thereon, and subject to be sold for the benefit of the School Fund.

2nd The amount of taxes, interest, damages and costs due on said tracts, or any of them, unpaid.

3rd Whether the location of said tracts are ascertainable and if so their several location.

4th In whose the titles to said tracts are now vested by forfeiture or otherwise and who if any one is entitled to redeem.

5th Such other matters and things as said commissioner may deem pertinent and any of the parties in interest may require.

And it is further ord ered that said commissioner, before proceeding to execute this decree, shall give notice to the parties in interest and all unknown owners and claimants of said land of the time and place when and where he will proceed to execute this decree which notice shall be published in the Pocahontas Times, a weekly newspaper published in Pocahontas County, for four successive weeks before commencing said account

For thirty years Tutt's Pills have proven a blessing to the invalid. Are truly the sick man's friend.

A Known Fact

For bilious headache, dyspepsia sour stomach, malaria, constipation and all kindred diseases.

TUTT'S Liver PILLS AN ABSOLUTE CURE.

A Drunkard's Change.

The following "news item" printed by the New York Sun is by itself a pretty good temperance lecture. We copy it verbatim:

A carriage containing four well dressed young men in four stages of intoxication stopped in Union Street, near Seventh Avenue, Brooklyn, about three o'clock yesterday afternoon. On the curb stood a wheelman bargaining with a peddler for fruit. He bought ten cents' worth of bananas, and offered in payment a two-dollar bill which the pedle reould not change.

The wheelman asked the men in the carriage if they could change it. The least responsible one of the four at once drew a handful of paper money from his pocket, handed two one-hundred-dollar bills to the wheelman, stuffed the two dollars into his pocket with the rest of his money and called to the driver to go ahead.

In a moment the carrage was going down the street. The wheelman stood gazing in frozen wonder at the two hundred dollars in his hands. Then he fumbled the bills as if to restore his mind to working order, jumped on his wheel, and spun after the carriage.

He caught it at the corner of Sixth Avenue, returned the money with some difficulty, as the party of four seemed slow to comprehend the situation, and got back his two dollars. The only loser in the transaction was the peddler. In a agitation the wheelman forgot all about the bananas.

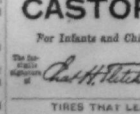
TIRES THAT LEAK.



The Morgan & Wright single-tube quick-repair tire must be regarded as a distinct improvement in bicycle tire construction. It has the following advantages:

While punctures in it can be repaired with plugs, or semi-liquid injections, as well as in any other single-tube tire, it can be permanently repaired by using the quick-repair strip inside the tire. See cut No. 1.

No. 1.

By inserting M. & W. quick-repair cement through the punctures, and then pressing down on the tire with the thumb. As in cut No. 2, the repair strip inside is picked up by the cement, thus closing the punctures, as in cut No. 3.

No. 2. No. 3.

The Morgan & Wright single-tube quick-repair tire is guaranteed not to come off the rim of the wheel on which it is made. Bottle every rider has heard of tires that "leak like a sieve."

Many tires are, because water gets into the fabric between the two layers of rubber. The Morgan & Wright fabric is proof against moisture.

Repairing tubes now unobtainable Morgan & Wright can not, and will not, have anybody they possess. This is due to the labor.

Any one having doubts whether either one tool or long or Morgan & Wright tires, had better write the Morgan & Wright guarantee means. Morgan & Wright tires are repaired free of charge at the factory in Chicago or at one of the Morgan & Wright fine repair shops located in

MY FIRST NINETY DAYS,

Or the Blunders of a Confederate Captain.

BY COL. R. H. JONES, AUTHOR OF "THE SUNNY LAND."

IN THREE PARTS.

PART III.

(First published in 1868.)

Having recruited and reorganized his command, Gen Wise again advanced toward Gauley while Gen Floyd, taking the Sunday road, moved toward Summersville. Wise encountered Cox at Big Creek, a few miles beyond the Hawk's Nest and, after a brisk skirmish kept up until evening, owing to the failure of a part of his program, fell back four miles to Woodville, and went into camp. Floyd, having crossed Gauley at Carnifix's Ferry and entrenched himself on the cliffs, awaited Rosecranz, who, advancing from Cheat Mountain, attacked him with great impetuosity. The Confederates, the outnumbered by at least six to one, resisted successfully every attempt to carry their position until nightfall, when they withdrew with so much secrecy, that the Federal Commander received the information of their retreat about sunrise the next morning, when his troops stormed and carried the undefended entrenchments. Floyd did not lose a single man in this battle—two men were slightly wounded, one of them the General himself. Rosecranz must have suffered severely, as his men repeatedly assailed the works with great and persevering gallantry. Having recrossed Gauley, Floyd fell back to Dogwood Gap, at the junction of the Sunday road with the James River and Kanawha turapike. Here he was rejoined by Wise; and Cox and Rosecranz, continuing to advance with at least 15,000 men, while the Confederates did not exceed 3,500, the latter fell back slowly to the top of Big Sewell Mountain. Halting here a day or so, Floyd began to fortify, but suddenly changing his mind, he retired toward Meadow River, in Greenbrier County, and ordered Wise to follow, which he positively and indignantly refused to do, avowing his determination to oppose his 1,500 men against Rosecranz's 15,000, and thus make a Thermopylæ of Sewall Mountain. He accordingly named his position "Camp Defiance," and coolly awaited the advance of the enemy.

It is not necessary to recount how, in a few days, Rosecranz came up and went into camp in an equally favorable position about a mile west of "Camp Defiance;" how General Lee came down from the Cheat Mountain region, bringing reinforcements; how he examined Wise's position, approved his course and ordered Floyd to return; how for three or four weeks he rival host surveyed each other from their respective strongholds without coming to an engagement; how, confident of the issue, we, from day to day, prayed for the advance of the federals; and how, finally, one bright Sunday morning, when Gen. Lee, we were assured, had made up his mind to execute on the following Tuesday a grand strategic movement that promised to result in the complete discomfiture of the foe, we got up and found he had struck his tents and precipitately retreated. I merely wish in this connection to relate one other of my adventures as a Confederate Captain.

I was officer of the day. We were expecting Rosecranz to attack us. "I wished to see the old officer of the guard. I did not know who had acted in that capacity the day before, and had not been able to find out by enquiry. I went to the guard tent and mentioned that I wished to see the old officer of the guard. A drummer suggested that if he were to sound his drum, perhaps the individual wanted would come to the guard tent. I cannot understand why I thought the beating of the drum would produce such a result, or why the drummer thought so. I know, however, I caught at the suggestion and when the drummer asked me if he should sound the long roll, I answered affirmatively, adding that I supposed that would do as well as any thing else. The fact was I had never heard the long roll before, and did not know that special significance attached to it. He commenced beating the "long roll." There happened to be one or two officers in camp who knew that the long roll was a call to arms to repel an attack, or something of that character. In their minds it was an alarm. They seized their swords, sprang out and called on their men to fall in, instantly; other officers caught the infection and followed the example. In a moment the whole camp was in an uproar. It looked like a Rebel attack. From every tent officers buckling on their swords, and privates with cartridge box in one hand and musket in the other, streamed forth the angry hive, from so small a germ, while above all other sounds were heard the excited commands and the officers, "Fall in, men—fall in! Back on the left!" "Shut up that drum!" "Stop that drum!" "Who ordered that?" "Who already fired?" "Right dress!" etc. etc.

Had I been capable at that moment of remembering anything at all than I had ever been, it would have been Byron's Wellington:

"Hark! hark! what horror breaks the midnight air,
And thunder-like rolls on the affrighted ear?
And louder, louder, drums and fifes awake,
Till in the town the sleeping rumor grows,
Each burgher to his dark'ning street repairs,
And to his gates and walls the flock full fast,
Ere yet the warning peal had ceased to sound,
All were prepared to meet the coming foe."

But cries of "the long roll!" "the long roll!" arising on all sides, assured me that I was the author of the mischief, and in the extremity of my mortification, I was senseless and dumb; and then Col. Spaulding came rushing from his quarters, calling for his horse, and demanding in an excited manner, "what all that meant?" If ever man desired

"A lodge in some vast wilderness—
Some boundless contiguity of shade," deep, dark, impenetrable shade, at that—one of the Bengal variety—I was certainly that man.

In reply to his question, succeeded, by a desperate effort, in stammering out that there was nothing serious the matter; that I had told the drummer to beat for the old officer of the guard, and he had with my sanction, beat the "long roll"—I being ignorant of the import and probable effect thereof.

For a moment, anger and a keen sense of the ridiculous appeared to struggle for the mastery; but the latter triumphed, and, directing his orderly to tell the captain to dismiss their men, with a smile on his face, he invited me into his tent and their good humoredly explained to me the mysteries of the long roll. Brave, accomplished, generous Spaulding! Two weeks later his body, a bloody corpse, was borne in a blanket to camp by four of his men. He had approached too near the pickets of the enemy, and received two balls through his breast.

A few days after the retreat o the Federals from Sewall, G ne Lee sent out two famous scouts—one of them afterwards Cavalry William Heffner, who was killed at the battle of Lewisburg, in May 1862. They found the enemy encamped in a field belonging to Colonel George Alderson. Under cover of the brush the scouts crept up to the fence enclosing the field, and while lying there Generals Cox and Rosecranz rode up within thirty yards, halted, and on their horses engaged in conversation for some time. Captain Hefner told me that they could have counted the buttons on their coats. Had the scouts carried their guns, the careers of the two Federal commanders would have ended that bright October morning—William Heffner and comrade were dead shots with their long mountain rifles at two hundred paces.

Suffice it to say that I afterwards saw much service and endured much suffering, for I was in the field from the beginning to the close of the war, excepting from the 5th of June, 1864, to June 19, 1865, during which time I was a prisoner of war at Johnson's Island. I was with Lee in swamps of South Carolina, on the sandhills of Wilmington, in front of McDowell at Fredericksburg, in the Seven Days battles on the Chickahominy. With Jackson, at Cedar Mountain; with Loring, in the Kanawha Valley; with Ransom, in the Shenandoah; with Tiger John McCausland at Piney, Princton and the Narrows; with Jenkins at Cloyd's Farm, and William E. Jones at Inland Piedmont; but during those first ninety days with Wise in the Kanawha Valley and on Sewall Mountain, I underwent more real suffering and hardship than in all my after military life.

And the "Dixey Rifles!" where are they now? Alas! some are sleeping beneath the Magnolias of South Some sleeping on the hills of old Fredericksburg; some at Mechanicsville, Cold Harbor and Frazier's Farm; some at Piney, Princeton and the Narrows; some at Piedmont, Winchester, Kernstown, Cedar Creek, Fisher's Hill, and on the banks of the Opequon; some at White Sulphur, Richmond and Lynchburg; some at Point Lookout and Elmira; some at Camp Chase and Morton; some have gone home with broken constitutions, and some maimed and crippled for long for life. With their gallant comrades of the glorious old 60th, that every where bore their full share of suffering and danger and death; and when at the close of the war they, with unmeaning eyes and aching hearts turned away from the Conquered Banner, which,

"Though gory,
Yet is worn and scarred with glory,
And will live in song and story,"

Though its folds are in the dust, For its fame on brighter pages, Penned by poets and by sages, Shall go sweeping down the ages, Furl it, furl it, let it rest!

In that sad hour and more than a dozen of the original Dixie Rifles answered to roll-call.

SPRING-TOOTH HARROW.

The frames are made in one piece of steel angle bar, and formed to withstand all strain without buckling or warping. The teeth in this harrow are so spaced that they will not trail each other. Pulverizing the ground thoroughly. The steel pipe tooth bars are mounted in malleable boxes secured to the frame, and will not bend or break. The peculiar shape of the teeth curling twothirds about the bar gives the greatest amount of spring possible without straining the bolts, and because of their shape and fastening are stronger than used on any other harrow. By the levers the depth of work can be regulated while the harrow is in motion. The draft is steady and direct as the harrow has no side motion.

THE HUNTERSVILLE PIONEER.
WILLIAM SHARP, Sr.

This paper is in memory of William Sharp, senior. It appears from such information as the compiler has been able to obtain that this person was the pioneer settler of the Huntersville vicinity, and was the first to open up a permanent residence. Traces of the building he erected yet visible near the now road around the mountain, a few rods from where the mountain road leaves the Dunmore and Huntersville road. Mr Sharp located here in the seventies of the previous century, and saw service as a scout and a soldier. It is believed he came here from Augusta county, and had probably lived in the vicinity of Staunton. His wife's name was Mary Meeks. She was a very amiable person, lived to a great age, and died at the home of her son, James Sharp, Esq., many years ago. In reference to their sons and daughters the following particulars have come to hand.

Nancy Sharp was married to Levi Moore, junior, near Frost.

Margaret Sharp was married to John Kelley, and lived on Michel's Mountain. Her children were William, John, Anthony, Nancy, Polly Rachel, Jennie, and Margaret.

Nancy Kelley was married to Robert Sharp, son of James Sharp on Thorny Creek, and migrated to Iowa.

Mary (Polly) Kelley was married to Daniel McCarty, son of Timothy McCarty, and lived on Brown's Mountain.

John Kelley, a Union soldier, and died on the Kenawha during the war.

Rachel Sharp, daughter of William Sharp, senior, was married to Jonathan Griffis, and lived near the head of Stony Creek on the farm now owned by Colonel Levi Gay. Her children were Abraham, Bennet, Jonathan, and Mrs Chas. Buckaun.

Mary Sharp became the wife of Arthur Grimes, and settled in The Hills overlooking the head of Knapps Creek. In the Grimes memoirs special mention was made of all her children except one, Sally Grimes. She became the wife of the late Hugh McLaughlin, and lived near Huntersville, at the Bridge. One of her sons was Lieut James Hutchison McLaughlin, who died in Winchester of a wound, during the war in 1864. He was on picket at the Bejeddo River. He was of a very jovial disposition and was joking the federal pickets, and having for fun with them. By way of agent to touch out his foot and it an inward his ankle was shattered by a minnie ball. He was taken to Winchester and was doing well, until one day the surgeon was arranged with before bringing all sorts of nice things for the wounded soldiers. The lieutenant indulged too freely for the good of his health, and died a victim of well meant sympathy and kindness. He was one of the few Confederates that was killed by kindness. Mrs C. L. Moore, on Brown's Creek, is their widow's daughter.

John Alexander McLaughlin, a widely known citizen near Huntersville, is another of her sons.

Mrs Mary Ann Hogsett, wife of William Perry Hogsett, on Browns Creek, is Sally McLaughlin's only daughter.

John Sharp a son of William Sharp, upon his marriage with Sarah McCollum, settled on the farm near Verdant Valley, now occupied by his grandson, John Wesley Irvine.

Rebecca, who became Mrs John R. Duffield; Nancy, afterwards Mrs William Irvine; Ellen, who married Amaziah Irvine; and Mary, who became Mrs Josiah Friel, were the daughters of Mr and Mrs John Sharp.

William Sharp, junior, was another son of the Huntersville pioneer, and settled Verdant Valley. An entire paper was recently published in reference to his family in which mention is made of his children. He died in 1890 nearly 90 years of age. He and his resolute young wife, Elizabeth Waddell, built in the woods, opened up a fine estate, and reared a worthy family highly respected for their industry and good citizenship.

James Sharp, Esq., late of Beaver Creek, was another of the sons of William Sharp, senior. His wife was Ann Waddell, sister of Mrs William Sharp, just mentioned. He opened up a home on Cummings Creek, a part of the Huntersville homestead. The property was recently owned by the late Joseph C. Loury, Esq. Upon disposing of his property to the Hon William Cackley, Mr Sharp located on Beaver Creek, on property known as the James Sharp place. He opened up an extensive area and prospered in worldly affairs and reared a worthy family. The names of his children were Mary, Rebecca, Margaret, Martha, Nancy Ann, Rachel, Lucinda, William, Andrew, and James.

Mary was married to William Pyles.

Rebecca became Mrs James Lewis and lived in the Levels. Mrs Ann Clark, at Hillsboro, is a daughter of Mrs Lewis. Mrs R. C. Shrader and the late Mrs Davis Kinnison are her daughters also.

Margaret Sharp was married to Jacob Civey, on Authony's Creek; Martha Sharp was also married to a Mr Civey, of the same locality. Nancy Sharp was married to Robert Ryder, and lived on Anthony's Creek.

Ann Sharp was married to Levi Cackley, junior, and lived on Anthony's Creek. The Rev A. M. Cackley, D. D., is her son.

Rachel Sharp became Mrs Robert Gay, and lived on Beaver creek at Beaver Creek Mills, lately in possession of Wallace Beard, Esq. Hamilton B. Guy, upper Elk; Sam Guy, Williams River; Mrs William Jordan, on Elk, are her children.

Lucinda Sharp was married to Jonathan Jordan, near Hillsboro.

William Sharp married Susan Bussard, daughter of Solomon Bussard, of Glade Hill, and settled in the West.

Andrew Sharp married a Miss Bussard.

James Sharp married Mary Byrnsides, on the Greenbrier east of Lillistorn, and settled at the old homestead. He died during the war, and Mrs Sharp went to Ohio, or, Missouri, where some of her family now reside. Mrs Hanson McLaughlin, of that place, is her daughter.

James Sharp, Esq., was a member of the court under the old arrangement, was high sheriff of the county, a conscientious member of the Presbyterian church, and was held in high esteem for his patriotism and strict, scrupulous integrity. The members of the court had much confidence in his judgment and he had great influence in framing decisions. He was much in the habit of hunting at the proper season, not so much for the sport as a matter of business, for the proceeds were useful in lessening the family supplies for the comfort and sustenance of his household.

While living at his fine home on Cummings Creek he had a very exciting adventure on Buckley Mountain. It was growing late and was near the time to set out for home. He was passing leisurely along when a panther suddenly mounted a log but a few yards in front of him. He shot the animal, but when the smoke cleared away another stood in the same place on the log. This performance was repeated nine times, and the hunter became panic stricken and flanked out for his home. Some time during the night the remainder of the pack followed his trail to his house and killed a yearling calf. Properly reinforced, Mr Sharp went back to the spot where he had fired nine times and there beheld what no hunter had seen before or since. Nine panthers, but they were all good panthers now; every shot had told with fatal effect. It appears there were seasons when these animals went in packs of fifteen or twenty, and this happened to be one of the times.

One of the most interesting things about Squire Sharp's personal history were his religious views. He had noticed with thoughtful attention how it was made the duty of Hebrew parents to impress the commandments upon the minds of their families, in the 6th chapter os Deuteronomy: "Hear, O Israel: The Lord our God is one Lord. And thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul and with all thy might. And these words which I command thee this day shall be in thy heart. And thou shalt teach them diligently unto thy children and shalt talk of them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest by the way, and when thou liest down and when thou risest up. And thou shalt write them upon the posts of thy house and on thy gates."

Then our Savior's words in the sermon on the mount impressed him deeply: "Think not that I am come to destroy the law and the prophets; I am not come to destroy but to fulfil."—Mathew 5: 17.

And then while reading the Bible through he noticed that in the gospels and epistles so many important references are made to the law and the prophets, to illustrate and explain the doctrines of the New Testament. He was so impressed by all these things that he very tenaciously held the opinion that the doctrine of religion as taught in the discourses of our Savior and the writings of his apostolic helpers could not be understood as Christ and the apostles would have them understood without a familiar acquaintance with the writings of the Old Testament.

Now it so happens that this very opinion is vehemently disputed by Roman Catholics positively denied by several large and influential denominations, and so dimly perceived by multitudes of other protestant churches as to be virtually ignored in practice, the verbally acknowledged as true. Persons holding this opinion are liable to be decided as "Lotterday Judaisers" by their protestant brethren.

Hence it appears that more than 50 years ago Squire Sharp was impressed with the idea that if such religious tendencies were not checked the time would come when the controlling masses of the religious people of our country and the world generally would be influenced and governed by grand, pompous, imposing systems of a christianity so called with Christ left out, in consequence of the doctrines of religion not being understood and practiced as the Redeemer of the world would have them understood and made use of.

It must have been that like Nathaniel under the fig tree, James Sharp in some calm retreat or secret shade prayed without ceasing, prayed to his Father who is in secret, and his Father who seeth in secret rewarded him openly by making him an humble indeed, to whom was no guile, hypocrisy, or self-deception.

SENATOR MARK HANNA is fighting his battles over again. It is a pity that it should be so, for boy, and being an ardent partisan, there is nothing especially objectionable in Mr Hanna.

New York Letter.

The annual Horse Show is now on at the Madison Square Garden. This show is a society affair. The horse is worshipped a little bit; but swell gowns and the latest imported millinery have the call. The attendance on the first day was estimated at 8,000. Here is an idea of the different kinds of horses on exhibition: Horses in harness; roadsters, hackneys; carriage horses; ponies under saddle; trotters; four-in-hands; jumping horses; green hunters; saddle horses. Prizes in money are offered for best showing, ribbons and commendation given to the next best. Following this show come the Dog Show, Fowl Show, etc. In fact this great city gives entertainment of one kind or another all the year round.

The weather New York and vicinity is enjoying is something remarkable. Of course, we have had a few days of cold, but the major portion has been likened to a continuous Indian Summer. And the weather is a God-send to the poor of Greater New York. The reason so many people are out of work in this city is: People in other countries flock here with a little money. They spend all they have looking for work and when it is gone they are left high and dry. They do not consider in the start that we have men of our own town living from hand to mouth, (citizens of the United States), and it is our duty to give our own the preference. No, they come over here, the nearest port, and settle down. Of course this is a so-called free country, but I emphatically say we need an emigration restriction law, and we need it badly. This country is becoming the Mecca of all the riff-raff of foreign countries. The majority of the foreign element who do receive work hoard their money and in the course of a dozen or fifteen years return to their fatherland, motherland, or whatever they call it, and live for the remainder of their lives like kings. These people are thrifty. Nine out of every ten do not take out their naturalization papers. This is wrong. They should be made to do so. This government is altogether too easy in this respect.

Spain is still at Cubs. The unnecessary slaughter should stop. The outrages reported by the correspondents of our great dailies are blood-curdling. When one stops to consider the misery in more ways than one inflicted upon defenceless old men and women and children, right at our own doors, it seems to every right thinking citizen of the United States that the war should come to an end, and the only way to stop the butchery is for Uncle Sam to put his foot down good and hard.

Football is now on. This game is claimed by some to be dangerous. Judging from the reports throughout the country in the list of players injured it is a very dangerous pastime. James J. Corbett the pugilist, in an interview the other day, says that there is less brutality in the prize ring than on the gridiron. And I think he is right.

The Princeton-Yale game, which takes place at New Haven, Conn., Saturday of this week, has aroused a great deal of excitement. Tickets have all been sold. Special trains will be dispatched. The Princeton boys have chartered a train to themselves. The attendance has been estimated at from 15,000 to 20,000. In the betting Princeton has the call. It is understood that ex-President Grover Cleveland will be on hand to "root" for the Princetons.

The Brooklyn Bridge is being equipped for the managers with trolley poles. The work of laying down tracks has begun. When this is done all Brooklyn people will have to do is jump into their car on the New York side and be carried home direct. There will be no more changing for those who patronize the surface roads. And all this for one fare—five cents. Now a dozen passengers have to pay extra to ride across the big bridge. Three cents for a single ticket; excursion, 5c. The bridge cars will be maintained as usual. A great many prefer the old system, and will still use it, notwithstanding the extra cost, as the bridge cars are the quickest. Another bridge is being built across the East River further up. This new bridge will land people further up town in New York, and will tend to divert some of the heavy travel from the Brooklyn Bridge. These bridges are a great boom to real estate in Brooklyn, and is fast making Brooklyn a city of homes.

AYER'S ARGUMENT.

If there is any reason why you should use any sarsaparilla, there is every reason why you should use Ayer's. When you take sarsaparilla you take it to cure disease; you want to be cured as quickly as possible and as cheaply as possible. That is why you should use Ayer's: it cures quickly and cheaply—and it cures to stay. Many people write us: "I would sooner have one bottle of Ayer's Sarsaparilla than three of any other kind." A druggist writes that "one bottle of Ayer's will give more benefit than six of any other kind." If one bottle of Ayer's will do the work of three it must have the strength of three at the cost of one. There's the point in a nutshell. It pays every way to use

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Notions.

Reading the the lesson concerning the profoundest example of humility in the annals of the word, "If I then your Lord and Master, have washed your feet; ye also ought to wash one anothers' feet," caused the mind to turn to that sect so numerous in the Valley of Virginia, known as the Mennonites, who are so proud of their humility. Their churches are without any ornamentation whatever; a fence is built down the middle of the building to seperate the sexes; the women are made to wear the plainest clothes—the hat of the milliner is especially prohibited, and on their sacramental occasions they wash each others feet in the church, the men washing men's feet, and the sisters performing that service for each other. There was a time when, if I was not wholly converted to the doctrine of feet washing, I was shaken by the arguments of a sectarian.

It was when I was big enough to rake wheat, too big to gather sheaves, and not quite old enough to bind a sheaf. Preachy Limewarper had a small crop of wheat to take off; and he got Martin Barkholder, from Needmore, to work the cradle; myself, from a little town near by, to rake after him; while Preachy himself bound the sheaves and overseen the raking. That was the first work I ever did that paid me fifty cents a day, and I was very well satisfied with myself. The wheat harvest before I had worked twice as hard gathering sheaves for a quarter.

Martin Barkholder was no uncompromising Mennonite, and a very good man. The tenents of his church forgot every thing to him and he was a jealous guardian of them. I had been raised in the church which was next somewhat strong in that community, and was an active member of the debating society. Preachy Limewarper was full of his nonsense. In the first half-day he had the cradle and I tagging in the doctrine of feet washing, while he acted as judge and general promoter of the fun. The debate lasted for days with all the courtesy and calmness that characterizes a conference of Indian chiefs. As the grain was gathered in by long sweeps of the cradle, Barkholder would reel forth a long sermon and hear my answer. I honestly tried to instruct him better. At night both parties would read up as much as we could find, and the debate would open at sunrise and close at sunset. It continued for a week, in which time we had incidentally discussed all the merits and shortcomings of our respective churches, and, as I remember it, no one had a distinctive advantage.

It was early one morning about the last day of the harvest that I went down before the guns of the enemy. Martin had been able to fortify himself with authority that could not be disputed. Taking a leather-bound hymn-book out of the hind pocket of his overalls he read the following verse with a flourish. I give it here from memory for someway it has stuck by me ever since:

"Of Christian churches which have heard
The teachings of the Holy Word,
The faith of them is not complete,
Who don't believe in washing feet."

My natural reverence for a hymn book left me without a word to say against this long metre asservation and the umpire, Preachy Limewarper, was also very much impressed by the authority quoted. It virtually ended the controversy which will never be renewed by me for maturer years have brought the belief that there is virtue in the washing of feet in whatever manner it may be performed.

What a beautiful dispensation of nature it is that enables the barefooted boy these frosty mornings to chase the cow out of her warm, warm spot, where she has lain all night, and standing there, feel the grateful warmth about his feet! It is no great hardship to go barefooted in November if you are used to it. The boy's first duty of a day is generally connected with the cows. In summer he must drive them to the milk-gap, and in the fall go to the fodder stack and after working in the frost ankle his feet are aching to the bone. The cows get up reluctantly and stretch themselves, and the boy jumps into a "cow-heel" with a whoop. Having sufficiently warmed himself, he finishes his work and breaks away for the home.

A prisoner, named Sam Welch, who escaped from the Putnam county jail, has thought fit to apologize for doing so by post-card from Ohio. He said that it was the loneliness of the place which drove him to it. To keep from going mad he ran away. The county court of Putnam should provide some amusements for their prisoners or their jail will become a decidedly unpopular place. The numerous jail breakings in West Virginia are probably due to the want of the State. Misdemeanors are ever free.

EIGHT deaths and 268 injured players was the list of killed, wounded, and missing for one week's football playing in western Pennsylvania, where the game is deservedly popular. Yale defeated Princeton, and Pennsylvania, Harvard, last Saturday. No fatalities reported. West Virginia University defeats Bethany at Fairmont, score 30—0. Yeager kicked every goal. No loss of life, but a good deal of bloodshed.

LONDON has just experienced the most disastrous fire since the great fire of 1666. The fire started from an explosion of a gas engine. Twenty minutes elapsed before a fireman was on the scene. The fire was in the ware - house region. The loss is estimated to be at least $25,000,000. It is the largest fire the world has experienced since the great Chicago fire of 1872. The church of St. Giles, which contains the tombs of John Milton and John Fox, was badly damaged.

PRESIDENT MCKINLEY has had it in his power to provoke a war, and yet he has wisely refrained. It, would have been very unwise to have gone into a large and terrible war to end a little war, comparatively. Then, too, our American young men are more precious in our estimation than anything Cuba could furnish out of the miscellaneous misegenated elements that make up its population, and some sympathy should be exercised to keep them from scenes of confused noise and garments rolled in blood.

LAST week arrangements were made to resume work at the Buena Vista Cloth Mills. They have been closed for some time. Messrs Timberlake and Miller, the proprietors have contracted to furnish the government forty - two thousand yards of cloth. A cloth-manufacturing firm of Philadelphia has furnished the money to enable the Buena Vista company to meet their contract. And if the work proves satisfactory, the Philadelphians will purchase the mill and will run it in the future. Quite a number of persons will be given employment.

THE grand lodge of the I. O. O. F. of West Virginia was in session at Clarksburg last week. Wheeling is the place of meeting in 1898. It was resolved to build a $50,000 home in West Virginia, and a committee was appointed to choose a site. The election of officers resulted as follows: Grand Master, George C. Sturgiss, Morgantown; Deputy Grand Master, W. E. Rutt-ucutter, Kanawha county; Grand Warden, Dr C. M. Cummings, Fostlick; Grand Secretary, E. A. Billingsley, Fairmont; Grand Treasurer, Henry Seaman, Moundsville.

AT the Lord Mayor's banquet a few days since the British Premier made a speech which would be the sensation of the day were it not for so many other exciting events now transpiring. In reference to British policy, he said: "Our objects are strictly business. We wish to extend trade, commerce, industry, and civilization; to throw open as many markets as possible, and to bring together as many consumers and producers as possible, and to open the grand natural highways and waterways of Africa. In doing these things, while we wish to behave in a neighborly manner and to show due consideration for the feelings and claims of others, we are resolved to see that there is a limit to the exercise of this particular set of feelings, and we cannot allow one party rights to be over-ridden." This seems 'get what you can and keep what you get' in reference to all the great areas of Africa, except probably the Congo. Other powers, notably France, Italy, and Germany, want the same territory, and they will not regard this as 'neighborly' way of spending and doing. Lord Salisbury is to be congratulated for his honesty in saying that his policy is strictly business, and not talking in high sentimental way about civilization, christianizing the natives of Africa, or so many pious platitudes as are in the habit of using.

ARMSTRONG & CUMBERLAND.

The article printed below, from the Charleston Gazette of November 19, will occasion a good deal of apprehension among many of the people of Pocahontas county, who fear Alex. Armstrong as they do nothing else in the world:

"Governor Atkinson had before him yesterday the most difficult case which he has had to determine since he has been Governor. It is the question of whether or not he should pardon Frank Cumberland and Alex. Armstrong, two negroes who are serving sentences of fifteen and eighteen years, respectively, in the penitentiary for the robbery of Colonel Edgar, near Mill Point, on the night of January 4, 1894.

"Armstrong formerly lived in Pocahontas County, and was well-known there. He went from there to Marietta, Ohio, but a few days after the robbery he was arrested in Pocahontas county, along with Frank Cumberland, whose home was in Marietta, and they were convicted. At their trial the depositions of some ten or more persons in Marietta were read, some of these parties swearing that they saw both the negroes in Marietta on January 3, others that they saw them on the morning of the fifth. Their testimony was very strong, and is said to have been given by reputable persons, both white and colored.

"On the other hand, some twenty witnesses from Pocahontas county testified just as positively that they recognized the prisoners as the men who committed the robbery. Many of them knew Armstrong, and their testimony was just as strong as that of the Marietta people. There is the most direct and positive evidence that the negroes committed the robbery on the night of January 4, and there is the most direct and positive evidence that they were in Marietta on the third and fifth, and one man thinks he saw them there on the fourth.

"Mill Point is 40 miles from the nearest railroad and more than 350 miles from Marietta, so that they could not have committed the robbery on the night of the fourth and been in Marietta either the day before or the day following.

"Judge W. H. Keeper, of Marietta, was in conference with the Governor several hours yesterday, and gave him additional testimony from Marietta people to prove the alibi. But with such conflicting testimony the Governor could not determine whether he should pardon the men or not, and left the case open until he could ascertain which evidence was true."

To understand the case fully the Governor should know that in the early nineties this county experienced a series of bold robberies that bore the marks of being committed by the same hand. The proceeding was very much the same in all the cases. In 1891 two men attempted to rob the store at Bo keye. The store-keeper resisted, and a negro named Underwood who lived near came to the rescue and was killed by the assailants. In 1892, N. J. Brown was attacked in his store at Mill Point, just as he was about to close for the day, who beat him into insensibility and robbed his safe of a large amount of money. In 1893, the house of Andrew Dilley, at Dilleys Mill, was ransacked one evening about 8 o'clock. In 1894, the family of Captain Edgar was held up at the point of a pistol, terrorized, and robbed by two men just after dark. In the Brown robbery and the Edgar robbery the thieves stole horses from the same farm each time and rode them to within a few miles of the railroad and abandoned them.

In 1895, two negroes walked through the Levels one wintry, snowy day, but stopped to speak to any man or enter any store or house either in Hillsboro or Mill Point. It came in Greenbrier had not recognized Alex. Armstrong, who was raised in Pocahontas they would in all probability have escaped notice. He sent word that "Alex." was coming, and Alex. had been expected. A large posse was formed and they were arrested. They were armed to the teeth, and if their mission here was a peaceful one, their appearance and their arms belied it. Armstrong had passed the houses of his kin and his color without speaking across. He had spent the most of his life in the county, and had worked at most of the farm houses, but he slunked through the community in which he had claimed not to have visited for a dozen years, without speaking anyone. Their force was swelled up, but that could be accounted for by the excitement of the day. On the persons of these negroes was found a bottle of gun powder, a bottle of tobacco, a bullet mould, and a pistol. It is said that they explained that they had come here to play cards at the lumber camps for money, but Armstrong must have known there was not a woodsman in Pocahontas county that would sit down to a game of cards with a negro.

It is very significant that since the arrest of Armstrong and Cumberland there has not been a robbery committed in the county. There have been one or two cases of sneaking burglary committed, but no more of the "Stand! Deliver!" sort that not only robs a man of his money, but terrorizes him for life. Nearly four years have passed without any re-occurrence of the sort.

The alibi produced by Armstrong was torn all to pieces at the trial, and unless additional affidavits have been filed it does not prove more than that Armstrong and Cumberland were in Marietta in January, 1894, which is not denied.

That Alex. Armstrong and Cumberland were seen in Pocahontas and on the road to and from Pocahontas on the dates when he claims to have been in Marietta was proved by witnesses who must be believed. Men who had known him, his colored friends, swore to have seen him; and a restaurant keeper at Ronceverte gave him his breakfast at daylight on January 5, '94, and swore to him positively, as did his colored waiter.

A good many citizens in the Levels fear that Armstrong will pay off all scores. Those acquainted with the vindictive character of the man believe that he cherishes resentment for years. The writer has heard the threat many times, and he is of the opinion, that if Armstrong ever shows his face in this county again, after all the circumstances that throng the history of his life here, that there will be one negro less in the world very soon.

If the Governor can get a petition to exercise mercy from the judge who tried him, from the prosecuting attorney, or jury, then we will join in the petition. If he relies on the assertion that the prisoners were in Marietta at the time of the robbery, we can assure him that their presence here was proved by all classes and conditions of witnesses, who fixed the date by the startling occurrence of the robbery at Captain Edgar's.

Governor MacCorkle refused to pardon these men on the evidence presented. He had lived in Pocahontas, and knew the witnesses who swore to Armstrong's identity.

AMONG the notable deaths of recent occurrence is that of the Bishop of Majorca. His fame rests upon the fact when he excommunicated Senor Revertor, the late Spanish minister of finance, he really brought about the late change of administration in Spain that has made matters so interesting the past few weeks between the United States and Spain.

WEST VIRGINIA STATE NEWS.

HINTON, W. Va., Nov. 19.—One of the most diabolical attempts at robbery ever made in this county was that of three men last night, when they tried to obtain money from Eli Ballenger, who lives in the suburbs of this town.

The robbers went to his door, knocked and asked him for a drink of water. He started toward the kitchen to get the water, and then the three men jumped upon him. They knocked him down, bound his hands and feet and gagged him by stuffing a handkerchief into his mouth.

Next they proceeded to search the house for money, but only found 60 cents. Becoming enraged and believing that a large amount was hidden somewhere on the premises, they told Mr Ballenger that they would burn him alive unless he revealed the hiding place of his treasure. He told them that 60 cents was positively all the money in the house, but they did not believe him. They proceeded to remove his shoes and applied fire to his feet in an effort to force him to tell.

After calmly watching him writhe in the flames, and, as he still persisted that he had no more money, they put the gag back in his mouth, and, locking the door, left him. He succeeded after several hours in freeing himself, and then gave the alarm.

Mr Ballenger is over eighty years old and has lived alone for the past twenty years. He is in a critical condition and it is feared that he cannot survive the shock. He can not give any description of the robbers, except that they were white men and all young. The County today offered a reward of $150 for the capture and conviction of the three men.

AGAINST FOOTBALL.

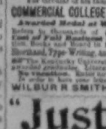
The Georgia legislature has passed its famous foot-ball law the unusual majorities of 31 to 4 in the Senate and 96 to 2 in the House. The Governor does not wish to append his name to it and the bill will become a law by default. The bill strikes its deadly blow at foot-ball by prohibiting games at which an admission price is charged. It would seem that a Georgia team might train and pursue the vendetta by coining to the University of Virginia and avenging their slain comrade. As is well known the immediate cause of this decisive action was the killing of Richard Von Gammon of the University of Georgia in a game with the University of Virginia. Strange to say his mother worked against the measure because she said her son loved the game better than he did his life.

For the hundredth time we take the liberty of informing the reader that the college game, wrongly called Rugby, is a different game from the game we play in Pocahontas which was played hundreds of years before the college game was thought out, and which will continue as a manly sport, long after the former has been suppressed by the intervention of international law, which will prohibit the game as a barbarous species of warfare which is not to be tolerated.

The fourth rule of the international code requiring a humane system of war is constantly being violated.

Rule 4—That the smallest amount of injury, consistent with self defense, and the sad neccessity of war is to be inflicted.

The Pocahontas game is a better game than the other. We are content to put the ball over the back line and score, but in the other game the side has to put the man and ball over. With us it is a foul to touch the ball with the hand, with them it is against the rules to touch it with the foot. There are many points in favor of the Association game but it is needless to enumerate them. The college youth has blood in his eye and will not be satisfied by any less bloody game after having become habituated to a sport in which there is all the excitement of war with one hundred per cent of the danger.



We feel pretty safe in asserting that foot-ball legislation is so bizarre, that had the Constitutional Commission of this State met in foot-ball season, they would have proposed an amendment prohibiting the playing of football in West Virginia.

"Just as Good as Scott's and we "sell it much cheaper," is a statement sometimes made by the druggist when Scott's Emulsion is called for. This shows that the druggists themselves regard of Cod-Liver Oil with Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda as the standard, and the purchaser who desires to procure the "standard" because he knows it has been of untold benefit, should not for one instant think of taking the risk of using some untried preparation. The substitution of something said to be "just as good" for a standard preparation nearly always results in disappointment and sometimes disaster.

A citizen of the Levels is having some trouble with a Cincinnatti carriage company. This firm had filled several orders for Greenbrier parties, and he ordered a surry, and sent a check for $80, last August. The check turned up in bank and was cashed, but the surry has not arrived. Investigation proves that the firm has no real existence and seems to be a sort of agency, having no factory or storerooms. The orders they filled have been supplied by other factories. The matter remains in this unsatisfactory state.

Now that the various drovers of sheep and cattle have passed for the season, the owners of flocks and herds are counting the cost. Several farmers have some sheep missing and one man has a bell-ox gone. Sheep are especially bad to join a passing flock, and the drivers are so blinded by the dust that they cannot see that they have acquired some new recruits. If the sheep are bound for market every "stray" that goes along of his own accord is that much richer, and the temptation is very great to induce drovers to be most extraordinarily careless with the sheep along the road.

The notice of publication of the first meeting of the stockholders of the Greenbrier Railway Company, at Huntington, December 16, is made under the code requiring all railroad companies, incorporated under the provisions 54 of the code, to give such notice. At the meeting they elect a temporary board of directors who afterwards meet, as soon as practicable after their election, and organize by appointing from their own body a president and such other officers as they may deem necessary, who hold office until others are elected at annual meeting. But before the temporary directors are appointed the corporators is required to open books of subscription and at least one-twentieth of the capital stock must be subscribed for, and at least five per cent actually paid in good faith paid in on each share of stock so subscribed for. And we hope they soon become.

News Items from the Greenbrier Independent.

As intelligent farmer remarked to us this week that Greenbrier lacks 100,000 sheep. The county can graze this many more than we now have.

The Standard Oil Company has put up an oil tank at Ronceverte, and now delivers oil, with its own teams, to dealers in Ronceverte and Lewisburg. J. D. Horton and C. R. Graves have charge of the business. The delivery tank holds nine barrels of oil.

Wednesday evening at the residence of the bride's mother, Mrs Sallie Gilliam, three miles north of Lewisburg, Edward B Hansbarger, formerly of Bath county, and Mrs Blanch Harper were happily united in marriage, Rev. T. W. Brown officiating. We extend congratulations from this to the married life of Mr Hansbarger and he has wood and won one of Greenbrier's most estimable ladies. We trust that their pathway thru life may be strewn with flowers.

Col. A. J. Fleet called in last Thursday to inform us that there was one honest man still living. "Here may be others, but I am certain there is one," said the Colonel. He stated for the proof of this assertion, that some twenty years ago a McDowell minister bought provisions from him to the amount of $13 on credit, and the minister failing to pay from year to year, he finally destroyed the account, and had almost forgotten the transaction, when one day last week he received a register letter for $13 to pay the debt.

HOW TO FIND OUT.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty four hours: a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What to Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy fulfils every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold urin and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following the use liquor, beer, or wine, and ever comes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists, price fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet both sent free by mail. Mention The Pocahontas Times and send your address to Dr Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Tee proprietors guarantee the genuineness of this offer.

State of West Virginia, Plaintiff
ver-us
I. B. Lowe, Oramel Barrett, James Snedegar, John E. Roller, Samuel Curry, and A. J. Hooks
Defendants.

The plaintiff and each and all of the above named defendants and all unknown owners and claimants of any part or parcel of the lands and used in the plaintiff's bill to be above entitled cause, will take notice that on the 30th day of November, 1897,

at my office in the town of Marlinton, in the county of Pocahontas, W. Va., I will commence the discharge of my duties under the decree of reference in the above entitled cause, a copy of which decree is published with this notice.

At which time and place, you, and each of you, can attend and protect and defend any interest you may have in the lands or any of them in question in this suit.

Given under my hand this 29th day of Octr. 1897.

S. B. SCOTT, JR.
Commissioner.

(Copy of Decree)

State of West Virginia
versus
Jno. B. Lowe et als.

In Chancery.

This cause came on this day to be heard upon the bill and exhibits therewith filed, summons returned duly executed as to home defendants, order of publication duly published posted and completed as to nonresident defendants, bill taken for confessed and was argued by counsel.

Upon consideration whereof, it is adjudged ordered and decreed that this cause be referred to S. B. Scott, Jr., one of the comm'rs. of this court to enquire into and make report to a future term of this court in the following matters and things concerning the lands alleged in the bill to be forfeited, viz: A tract of 40 acres, a tract of 15 acres, a tract of 5 acres, a tract of 40 acres, a tract of 30 or 40 acres, a tract of 30 acres, a tract of 30 acres, a tract of 165 acres, a tract of 450 acres, a tract of 230 acres, a tract of 360 acres, a tract of 150 acres, a tract of 500 acres, and a tract of 250 acres.

1st For what year or years the said tracts or "Boy of them have been forfeited for the non payment of taxes due thereon, and whether the said tracts or any of them have become forfeited to the State of West Virginia for the non payment of taxes due thereon, and subject to be sold for the benefit of the School Fund.

2nd The amount of taxes, interest, damages and costs due on said tracts, or any of them, unpaid.

3rd Whether the location of said tracts are ascertainable and if so their actual location.

4th In whom the titles to said land are now vested by forfeiture or otherwise and who if any one is entitled to redeem.

5th—Such other matters and things as said commissioner may deem pertinent and any of the parties in interest may require.

And it is further ordered that said commissioner, before proceeding to execute this decree, shall give notice to the parties in created and all unknown owners and claimants of said land of the time and place where and when and where he will proceed to execute this decree, which notice shall be published in the Pocahontas Times, a weekly newspaper published in Pocahontas County, for four successive weeks before commencing said account.

A Poser in Arithmetic.

A Chinaman died leaving his property by will to his three sons as follows:

"To Fuen-huen, the oldest, one-half thereof; to Nupin, his second son, one third thereof, and to Ding bat, his youngest, one-ninth thereof."

When the property was inventoried it was found to consist of nothing more or less than 17 elephants, and it puzzled these three heirs how to divide the property according to the terms of the will without chopping up 17 elephants and thereby seriously impairing their value. Finally they applied to a wise neighbor, Suen-punk, for advice. Suenpunk had an elephant of his own. He drove it in the yard with the 17 elephants and said:

"Now we will suppose that your father left these 18 elephants Fuen-huen, take your half and de part."

So Fuen-huen took nine elephants and went his way.

"Now Nupin, take your third and go."

So Nupin took six elephants and traveled.

"Now Ding-bat," said the wise man, "take your ninth and be gone."

So Ding-bat took two elephants and vamoosed.

Then Suenpunk took his own elephant and drove him home again.

Query: Was the property divided according to the terms of the will?—Selected.

No Evidence.

There is always something new in the courts. If there are no new crimes, there are new ways of escaping punishment. One of the latest of such novelties finds a record in the San Francisco Post.

A Chinese fisherman was on trial at Sausalito on a charge of catching striped bass that weighted less than two pounds. The constable who had made the arrest testified to catching the Chinese with the fish in his possession.

"Where are the fish?" asked the attorney for the defendant.

"Why, they wouldn't keep," answered the officer.

"What did you do with them?"

"Oh, I disposed of them."

"What did you do with them?"

"Well, I knew they would not keep, so I—I—disposed of them."

"But, what did you do with them?"

"My wife cooked them."

"And you ate them?"

"Yes."

"Your Honor, I ask that this case be dismissed."

"Charge dismissed and defendant discharged," ruled the justice of the peace, "on the ground that the arresting officer ate the evidence."

A Small Boy's Predicament.

The Chicago Record reports a pretty lively adventure which befell a five-year-old Iowa boy last summer. He had gone out to the wheat field where his father was driving the harvester, and had begged to be taken up on the high seat by his father's side.

The harvester was one of those wonderful labor-saving machines of which farmers use so many in these days. It cut the wheat, swept it into sheaves, bound them and tossed them aside.

For a time all this was very interesting to the little fellow. Then he grew tired of sitting still, and began to squirm, and, before the father knew what was going on, the boy had tumbled off.

He screamed as he found himself going; but before the horses could be stopped the machinery had caught him, rolled him up in a bundle of wheat, bound him about the legs and the neck with twine, and there he lay on the ground.

He was not hurt. A little skin had been scraped from one of his shoulders, and he was so thought he was almost choked. That was all; but he was very much frightened.

TAKING THE FIRST DEGREE.

BY ROBERT EARL.

Some twenty boys were sitting about the big study in dormitory C of Cascade school where, according to the school catalogue, young men enjoyed the combined advantages of "quiet home life and military discipline." Neither the quiet nor the discipline was very much in evidence at this exact moment, but a certain amount of liberty is allowed the first night of the year.

Stubby Fields was the first one to receive anything like a general attention when he asked:

"Any new boys, Bob?"

"Only one," said Bob, who was gradually and with much dignity releasing the information he had picked up by coming back a week earlier than any of the others.

"What sort is he?"

"O, very decent chap, I guess. Quiet and offish, and doesn't look very strong."

"Then I suppose we'd better go easy with him at the start. We don't want to scare the poor thing to death. Besides, we don't know the new monitor, he might be shocked if we were rude. Suppose we give the new boy the first degree tonight. Is he in now?"

"No," said Bob, "and he won't be back until late, for he was excused to go down the lake."

"'Tis well, then; disperse ye conspirators, and return with all dne speed."

The twenty-five boys filed out of the study, and a few minutes later twenty-five silent forms crept into the new boy's room, each bearing in his hands a small alarm clock.

Jimmy Clark was very tired when he climbed the stairs to his room, after his long row on the lake. He was a bit homesick, too for he had seen the other boys greeting each other earlier in the day, and the thought that he knew no one made him very lonely. "But they are nice looking fellows and I will soon get acquainted with them" thought Jimmy hopefully as he fell asleep.

It was midnight, and the house perfectly quiet, except one or two audible snores from the upper landing, when Jimmy was awakened by a persistent "ting-a-ling" that seemed to come from the depths of the closet.

He was just doning off again when he heard another and much louder ting-a-ling that seemed to come from right under him and fairly lifted him out of bed.

He sat for a few minutes thinking, and then he started upon an investigation. Jimmy overhauled every corner of his room, and the result of half an hour of hard work was an array of twenty-five alarm clocks standing in the middle of the floor. Jimmy looked at them thoughtfully for a few moments, then cautiously opened the door and looked out. There was still no sound, but the subdued snoring from upstairs. The new boy went back and carefully wound all the clocks again.

"Let's see, if I set them a minute apart, they'll last half an hour" he said.

Soon afterwards a white robed figure might have been seen making frequent trips up and down the short staircase. It was not seen for the very good reason that everybody else in dormitory C had his eye tightly closed, but the result of the trips was a line of twenty-five alarm clocks placed close together just outside the senior monitor's door, all set to "go off" between 5 and 5:30 o'clock.

The senior monitor was a nervous, funny young man. He had been much worried as to what he should do with the boys to stop them from playing tricks on each other. He had not believed it possible that they would outrage his dignity by putting up a practical joke on him.

It was therefore with some astonishment that the monitor was awakened early in the morning by what was unmistakably an alarm clock just outside his door. In a moment it was joined by another, and then another, until there was a rattle like an explosion of a pack of giant firecrackers and an uproar that resounded thru the house.

The monitor reached to the door and seized one of the chorus of alarms. Immediately another started in, and the monitor's hair rose in frenzy at the sound.

Finally, in desperation, he seized the large rug from the floor, and throwing it over the rattling clocks jumped up and down on it till the last one was silenced. Then he retired to his room uncomfortably aware of stifled giggling from the upper building. And then it all. Jimmy Clark slept peacefully.

Before breakfast the porter went thru the house and announced that the alarms were missing from all of the rooms except that of the new boy. At the end of the chorus of alarms. Immediately another started in, and the monitor's hair rose in frenzy at the sound.

"I regret, young gentlemen," said he, "that you have seen fit to begin the term with an overt breach of discipline. I must say, too, that the childish trick of which you were guilty does no little credit to your intelligence as it does to your good taste, if you though its author would not be discovered. You will all, with the exception of Jasper Clark, spend the week end in extra study hour. Jasper Clark will be excused for the next two weeks."

Every adherence for the next 5 weeks as the 25 culprits of dormitory C lined up for their extra hour of drill Jimmy Clark strolled past them on his way to the football field.

But at the end of it all the boys voted Jimmy a good fellow and took him into their fraternity.—Selected.

This amount of space newspapers are devoting to the discussion as to whether football shall be played is something marvelous. Foot-ball suffers from the present American game. The attractions of that game to the spectator is that which causes the crowds to assemble around the prize-fighter's ring. The skill exhibited is the same—that of best applying a vast amount of brute force.

TIRES THAT LEAK.

The Morgan & Wright single-tube quick-repair tire must be regarded as a distinct improvement in bicycle tire construction. It has the following advantages:

While punctures in it can be repaired with plugs, or semi-liquid injections, as well as in any other single-tube tire, it can be permanently repaired by using the quick-repair strip inside the tire. See cut No. 1.

No. 1.

By injecting M. & W. quick-repair cement through the punctures, and then pressing down on the tire with the thumb, as in cut No. 2, the repair

No. 2.

No. 3.

strip inside is picked up by the cement, thus closing the punctures, as in cut No. 3.

The Morgan & Wright single-tube quick-repair tire is guaranteed not to puncture. This is on account of the way in which it is made. Nearly every rider has heard of tires that "look like sieves."

Many tires are, because water gets into the fabric between the two layers of rubber. The Morgan & Wright fabric is treated to prevent moisture.

Everybody knows how comfortable Morgan & Wright tires are, and yet how seldom they punctures. This is due to the fabric.

Ask any reliable dealer whether using tires that so long as Morgan & Wright tires. Ask, also, what the Morgan & Wright guarantee means. Morgan & Wright tires are repaired free of charge, at the factory in Chicago or at any of the Morgan & Wright branch houses, handled in the principal cities.

N. B.—When you have a puncture, get right off. Nothing is the first, stops & Wright's quick repair strip. Any dealer is competent to apply it.

IT is said that the millinery styles this year call for the plumage of birds to a greater extent than ever, and a crusade has been begun by the Audubon Society of New York for the preservation of the birds. Their plan is to create a public sentiment so strong that no woman will wear a hat with feathers that cost the bird from which they were taken its life. The birds which are being killed are all marsh and maritime birds.

Biographic.

This chapter of the Biographic Notes is devoted to members of the Bussard connection, a relationship identified with this county for a century passed. The name indicates French origin, hence these people are very probably descendants of the Huguenots, who refugeed from France after the revocation of the Edict of Nantes, in 1685. History tells how some of these people found refuge in Germany and Holland and afterwards numbers of them came to America among the early colonists.

Reuben Bussard, the progenitor of the Bussards, was the son of an emigrant from Germany, who settled at an early day near Lancaster, Pennsylvania. Upon his marriage with a Miss Sicafoose, in Pendleton County, he settled on lands, now in possession of his descendants, near Glade Hill, or rather between Glade Hill and Frost. These early settlers were the parents of five sons and four daughters, as we learn from Morgan Grimes, Esq., near Mt Zion. Susan, Fannie, Hester and Martha were their daughters. The sons were Eli, Solomon, Henry, Reuben, Jr., and Sampson.

Fannie Bussard was married to Benjamin Bussard and lived in Greenbrier county.

Hester Bussard became Mrs Henry Grimes and lived in The Hills. He was a son of Arthur Grimes, of Felix Grimes, the pioneers. Their children are Peter, Frank, Zane, Hugh, Susan, Mary Ann, Alcinda and Martha.

Martha Bussard, daughter of Reuben, was married to Charles, son of Felix Grimes, the pioneer, and lived in the Hills, near Mt Zion. The names of their children were Wesley, Morgan, Davis, Susan, Margaret, Elizabeth, Lorette, Rachel and Martha. In the Grimes memoirs, already published, all these are specially mentioned.

Eli Bussard married Margaret (Peggy) Moore, daughter Pennsylvania John Moore, and settled on a part of the home place, now occupied by his son, Arminius. In reference to to their family the following items are given:

Arminius Bussard married Frances Kelley and settled near Glade Hill. He was a Union soldier, a member of Company D, 10th West Virginia Infantry.

Morgan Bussard married Rhoda Sims, daughter of John Sims, from Pendleton county. Their children are Sherman, Ellis, Perry Lee, Cora, now Mrs William Shinneberry, near Driftwood; and Alcinda, who was married to Embry Shinneberry, near Clover Lick.

Peter Bussard, son of Eli Bussard, married Nancy Moore, sister of Eli Bussard's wife, and lived near Glade Hill, where John Lind say now resides. Their daughter Sarah was married to John Lindsay. Virginia was married to Jacob Phillips, of Barbour county. He was a Union soldier, 6th West Virginia Infantry, and was killed in the affair at Bulltown, Braxton county. Martha became Mrs Hedrick, and lived in Preston county but now lives at Grafton. Mr Hedrick was a Union soldier.

Perry Bussard belonged to Company I, 3d West Virginia Cavalry, and died in a Maryland hospital in the early spring of 1864.

Laura and Phœbe were the names of Eli Bussard's daughters.

Solomon Bussard, son of Reuben Bussard, married Miss Rachel Grimes and settled on a section of the homestead. Their children were Wesley, who married Miss Matheny, of Highland county, and settled in the Big Valley; Jesse Allen lived in Highland; Susan married William Sharp, and went West; Mary was married to David Kincaid, and settled in Highland county, near Bolar Springs.

Henry Bussard married Mary Hannah, daughter of Joseph Hannah, on Elk, and lived on Cummings Creek near Huntersville. Their daughter Sally became Mrs J. B. Fyler, Simon Mrs Tillotson Ashbridge; and Asbury married Miss Burnsides and went West.

Henry Bussard's second marriage was with a Miss Perkins. Of the two sons of this marriage, Moses lost his life four or five years since near Windy Cove church in Bath county, by the overturning of a wagon he was in charge of. George is a carpenter and lives on Cummings Creek.

Reuben Bussard, junior, married Mary Ann Waugh, daughter of Samuel Waugh in the Hills, and after living some years at Dilley's Mill, went to Iowa. The names of their children were Arthelia, Rachel, Samuel, and Adolphus. Samuel Bussard is a prominent physician in Lucas county, Iowa.

Sampson Bussard was another son of the pioneeer. His wife was Eleanor Knapp, daughter of the late Caleb Knapp, and he settled on the place purchased of Solomon Bussard. Their children were Cornelius, Cronin, Mildred, and Jerusha. Cornelius married Miss Wanless near Mt. Tabor school-house and settled on the Arbogast place near Glade Hill. Mildred was married to Abram Shenneberry, and lives near Clover Lick. Jerusha became Mrs Isaac Shinneberry and lives near Glade Hill.

Where Reuben Bussard, the ancestor, made a selection for a permanent settlement was far from being an inviting spot in pioneer days. His idea seems to have been that tho the lands were deemed of little value, yet these glades and marshes could be made into valuable meadows. The mountains around afforded good range for stock for much of the year, and by blending the facilities for ranges and meadows live stock could be handled to good purpose. By making moderate gains and saving what would come in hand he saw there was a living in reach of the hands of the diligent. Were Reuben Bussard now to revisit the scene of his pioneer toils and privations he would see more than realized the highest expectations he may have ever cherished in reference to the development of this sequestered vale amid the mountains where he selected a place for his permanent habitation.

Moreover, it turned out that this vicinity was well adapted to fruit-raising. A supply of good fruit adds very much to the comfort of a home, and the time will be when such land, heretofore deemed of compartively little value, will be greatly prized for its fruit producing qualities. There is plausible reason for believing that the largest apple-tree in Pocahontas county, and it may be even in West Virginia, can be seen near the place where Reuben Bussard built his frontier home. It measures 3 feet and 6 inches in diameter. The branches were about forty feet long. Seventy-five bushels have been gathered from this tree at one time.

In reflecting upon what is suggested by the story of this pioneer, one recalls the old saying that used to be so much in vogue among the early settlers:

"A little farm well tilled;
A little wife well willed;
A little house well filled."

The three rhymes just repeated recount the three nickles that make up the best of muckles, a well-ordered, quiet, and well provided home in the country. And such will it be regarded by us all in the rounding up of life if we retain our senses.

From what we can now gather from Reuben Bussard's personality he seems to have been a man that pondered Agur's prayer to a good purpose:

"Two things have I required of Thee; deny me them not before I die. Remove far from me vanity and lies; give me neither poverty nor riches; feed me with food convenient for me. Lest I be full and deny Thee, and say Who is the Lord? or lest I be poor and steal and take the name of my God in vain." Proverbs xxx 7-9.

S. T. P.

HAYDEN looked over his shoulder and observed that no one was following Colonel Waterson home directly decided to stop loafing.—The Detroit News.

Notions.

Almost every day some one turns up who has been induced to buy a gilded brick for gold, or some one who has invested some thousands of dollars in a bag full of brass filings and sand for gold dust. A man in Cleveland, a Jew, paid some other Jews $12,000 in cash the other day for sixty-seven pounds of brass filings.

Let us suppose that there was once a man named Smith, and it is not hard to stretch the imagination that far. And this particular Smith had been descended from a hard-headed race of people who spelled the name with an 'i' single. But this Smythe lived in New York and had a job that paid him ten dollars a week, and he was a nice man, scented and well dressed and he had taken the liberty of spelling his name "Smythe" when used in a social way, tho when he signed for the boss in the business where he worked he had enough of inherited shrewdness to add "per S.," which stands for both Smith and Smythe.

Smith lived at Mrs Thompkin's boarding-house, which was very exclusive for the price, and for a small man had quite a dangerous speck-to-me-at-your-peril air about him. He was one of those ordinary men who are so well pleased with themselves that they do not succeed in pleasing any one else.

To this boarding-house came two young men who were evidently from the country, and of whom Smith showed a little too plainly that he had considerable contempt, and he almost snorted when one of them addressed him as "pard" before the lady boarders. Smith gave him a look that was supposed to freeze any further efforts at familiarity; and the both young men whose names were Hawkins and Jones, tried to be good natured, he was very cold and unresponsive.

Hawkins and Jones proved to be from what was worse than the country, and that is the Rocky Mountain mining regions, and their talk was interspersed with mining phrases and terms. They told the boarders that they were in the city trying to negotiate a sale of their mine, which they said they had named for their sweethearts, getting the composite name 'Daisy Belle.' They stopped there some weeks, and all the boarders, with the exception of Smith, showed a great interest in the progress of the sale. Smith took occasion to hint darkly that he knew their kind and that they would be wanting to dispose of a gold-plated brick to somebody before long.

This was told to Hawkins and Jones, and after a conference in which they had their misgivings, they decided to make Smith a proposition because he had remarked sirily that he thought he was a judge of human nature.

Hawkins knocked on Smith's door one day, and entering took a seat on the edge of a chair and twirled his big soft hat in his hands.

"Well," said Smith dryly.

"We've got a deal we purpose to make to you," said Hawkins. "Me and my pard is down on our luck, and we haint the money to settle our board bill at this shebang and git back to the 'Daisy-Belle,' but we've got a bag of the dust here that we'll sell to some man at half-price, for we've got to raise some money this evening or we cant git inter the game for the last chance before we go."

Smith could hardly believe his ears. Here his cubicles were delivered into his hands. He was a vindictive little soul, and he had often thought how nicely he would deliver the villians into the hands of the police and bonded if anyone ever attempted to sell him gold-dust.

"Well, Mr Hawkins," said Smith "how much gold-dust have you got?"

"High onto twenty pounds, and you kin have the whole caboodle for $300," said Hawkins, "and you kin have this enuph assayed."

"Your pills are the best in the world. I used to be annoyed with constipation until I began using them. Now I have no trouble of that kind any more and I attribute my recovery to the use of your valuable medicine. In the springtime of the year I always take your Pistols and Pestles.

The duelling pistol now occupies its proper place, in the museums of the collector of relics of barbarism. The pistol ought to have beside it the pestle that turned out pills like bullets, to be shot like bullets at the target of the liver. But the pestle is still in evidence, and will be, probably, until everybody has tested the virtue of Smith declared it unnecessary as he had known Mr Hawkins so long, and he told him and his partner to come to his room that evening with the gold and get the money.

It is hardly necessary to relate that Smith had two policemen in plain clothes concealed in his closet, and when the parties arrived they appeared on the scene and arrested the two miners and scooped the bag of dust on the table as evidence.

"Be keerful of that there bag," says Jones, who was watching the policeman very closely as he handled the bag.

"Never mind about that, my man. You would be better off if we were to lose it," replied the officer.

They were taken to the station-house and Smith went along. When before the police sergeant Hawkins demanded to know what they were arrested for, and the policeman then explained that they were trying to dispose of bogus gold-dust. The sergeant remarked that "gold could never be bought of honest people at a discount," and was about to order them to be locked up until an examination could be held in the morning, when Hawkins said the gold was theirs and that it was the real stuff. "Jest feel the heft of it, captin!" he said.

Then a lawyer who was standing near looked at the contents of the bag, and suggested that it was just possible that it was gold, and maybe they had better send for a jeweler. This was done, and the jeweler examined the contents of the bag carefully and tried different portions with acids. He pronounced it very fine gold. He said further that there was about twenty pounds of it, and that altogether it was worth about $4,500.

A peculiar noise attracted the attention of those in the room, and there was Smith with his eyes bulged out having some trouble with his breath.

"What have you to say to this," said the sergeant rather sternly.

"An old fortune teller told me once that I would some day miss the chance of my life," said Smith very sadly.

Then Hawkins told the sergeant all about it. He explained they had been boarding at Mrs Tompkins several weeks, and how they had been snubbed by Smith. They owned a mine which they could only work to advantage by machinery, and had slowly taken out in the past year by hand that bag of gold. They came to New York to sell their mine to a syndicate who could put in a stamping mill, and the day before they had closed out, and had money to burn. They had heard what Smith had said about their being probable swindlers, and had determined to play a joke on him. When asked if Smith had taken them up whether they would have closed by their offer.

"In course we would," said Hawkins. "That's the thing my pard insisted on, but we decided to trick it, and didn't think as how there was any great risk about, for while we aint any big judge of human nater, like Smith here, we thought as how we had sized him up."

When Smith came down to breakfast the next morning he heard sounds of laughter as he neared the dining room, which ceased as he entered and a moaning figure was surreptitiously dropped on the floor.

Hawkins and Jones breakfasted at the Fifth Avenue Hotel in their new clothes.

AUSTRIAN TROUBLES.

Some months since in some remarks on the signs of the times, reference was made to the renowned Paris correspondent of the London Times, M. Blowitz. He claims to have prevented two international wars, since the Franco-Prussian war, by what he wrote on one occasion, and what he did not write upon another occasion. This correspondent says that the international trouble pends on one event, the demise of the Austrian Emperor, now verging seventy years of age, and in precarious health.

Such a remark coming from the source it does, makes all news about Austrian affairs more than ordinarily interesting. In the past few weeks, scenes have been witnessed in the Austrian Parliament that surpass anything that has happened since the stormy scenes that ushered in the French Revolution.

Austria is what may be called a composite nation, made up of many different races and antagonizing factions. In no European country are so many languages spoken as in the Austrian Empire; seventeen millions of Slavonians; seven millions of Hungarians; nine millions of Germans; between two and three millionsof Wallachians; one million Jews; and a half million of Italians, about 38 millions in all.

The other races have failed to agree on a common basis of action, but have been mutually distrustful of each other, and the consequence has been that the united German element has controlled governmental affairs and the German has been the official language. Nine millions thus have had the mastery over twenty-nine millions. It appears that in the last two or three years, the Slavonians and Hungarians have been doing some thinking for themselves; they are feeling the pulsations of national aspiration; and have about come to the conclusion that it is a shame and outrage not to be submitted to any longer, to be dominated and dictated to by the Germans.

Thus the opposition to the Germans is bringing about something like definite policy and concert of action. The struggle is now on for the control of the Austrian Empire between the Germans and the anti-German elements.

The old races must eventually win, and the dominant control of the German minority cease, and the German language give place to the language of the majority. Before this is done however horrible scenes of riot and bloodshed may be anticipated. It is a revolt of the masses against a dominant minority, who have been using the government for their own use and enslavement. The Germans have long been entrenched in their position and it will require hard work to dislodge them. They have the army in hand and the governmental machinery. S. T. P.

THE wine grounds of Steuben county were destroyed by a Virginia conflagration who recently went and a young girl in her room.

The Pocahontas Times.

ANDREW PRICE, EDITOR.

Marlinton, Friday, Dec. 10, 1897.

Entered at the post-office at Marlinton, W. Va., as second class matter.

THE aged mother of President McKinley has suffered a stroke of paralysis.

A CONFEDERATE ten-dollar bill passed through four or five hands in McDowell county recently before the discovery was made that it was not United States money.

WE behold a heading in a newspaper the other day which would give joy to a Chicago Democrat. It was "Injunction Refused!" But reading down the column we discovered the injunction was refused by an English court, and that the tide has not turned in America.

PRESIDENT MCKINLY has given out that his civil service rules apply to reducing an employee from a higher position to a lower, as well as to removals from the service. Thus is seemingly settled a question that has been discussed so much quite recently.

MRS MILLER, the wife of the jailor of Lincoln county, scolded a little girl, named Rena Asher, whom she was raising. The child rushed into the jailor's room, picked up a revolver and shot herself thro the right breast, the wound proving fatal.

ROYAL decrees have been published by the Spanish government granting autonomy, or self-government, to Cuba and Porto Rico. It is reported the insurgents are near enough to hit the palace at Havana with their bullets, and, if so, these decrees will do no good towards settling the trouble.

IN Kanawha there are on the docket about 1400 indictments of the city of Charleston against retail liquor dealers. Judge Guthrie quashed an indictment in the test case on the grounds that the indictments were insufficient. The case will be appealed to the Supreme court.

EIGHTY thousand females find employment in the postal service throughout the United States. More than seven thousand are post - masters. Except as letter-carriers, railway postal clerks and post - office inspectors, they are found in every branch of the service, and the Postmaster General reports them as competent and faithful.

THE legislature of Virginia is apt to pass a law prohibiting "foot ball." The innocent legislators seem to be wholly ignorant that there are a dozen games of football some of which are free from the the faults ascribed to American foot-ball. Their numerous bills should stipulate the games they mean. The West Virginia University team has played against seven other colleges, defeating four, tieing one, and being defeated by two.

THE Cubans seem to be widely awake and evidently aiming to make an impression on our Congressmen. The Cuban constituent assembly recently held a session and issued a manifesto, and they want our Senators and Representatives to read this section with all possible care and believe it if they can: "No special laws, no political reform, or autonomy,—nothing in short that the Spanish government may be willing to grant that means Spanish sovereignty over Cuba,—shall be accepted by the Cubans as a settlement of the war. Independence or death is and shall be the unalterable motto of the Cubans."

THE Government is very much dissatisfied with the leniency shown Captain Lecering who recently abused a stockburn soldier very terribly. The soldier absented himself without leave and then would not walk to the guard-house. He was hauled there with a rope around his feet, and his captain prodded him deeply with his sword and kicked him repeatedly. The soldier cried like a child. The court-martial of brother officers found him guilty of the slightest offence. The administration will punish to the full extent of its power. The life of a private soldier in the United States is worse than a dog's, and he is subjected to the tender mercies of men brutalized by that terrible school, West Point, which is itself a disgrace to America.

AN AVOWED BRYANITE.

Our esteemed contemporary, the Webster Echo, glories in the name and proudly asserts that it is a Bryanite, and yet it would probably also claim in its misty way that it stood for principles, not men. There is no cool - headed man, however deeply imbued with a fanatical zeal for some great and good man, who will willingly make him keeper of his conscience and follow him blind. The one-man rule does not suit any American party. No man is great enough to *give a party a name—not even Jef*ferson, the most able of the expounders of Democracy who have ever lived. Even the divine right of kings, that most presumptious of all presumptions, was exploded after much blood was shed and lives lost. There is nothing good in any one man issue. The Democratic party hurled to the skirts of Cleveland like besotted fools until even his head was turned and he wounded his party in every vital part. When a party becomes so wound up and identified in the person of one man, then the party suffers from the weaknesses and mistakes of that man. Bryan's head is turned. He does not realize that he ranks no higher than the most insignificant of his fellow partisans. He is a brilliant speaker, but he is not a thinker. He is too brilliant a man to ever be President, and he has saddled on us by his indiscreet course since the election a term which is one of reproach. All the "ites" are bad, from the Dannites to the Bryanites.

The Echo man claims that Colonel John T. McGraw is a Bryanite first and a Democrat second. We think that this brainy West Virginian is tied to no man's political coat-tail, even tho he be the star speaker of the west.

The Echo villifies the Times in its efforts to discriminate in what is good and what is bad in the party. After the policy of the party is adopted for a fight we can follow, and we believe that with all its faults we loved the Democratic party of 1896 better than any other. But we may both live to see the next campaign fought on different lines. There will be no more leaguing with the jealous Populistic party. The Jefferson-Jacksonian principles of Democracy will receive a better interpretation than the platform of 1896, or at least one not so capable of misconstruction by thousands of conscientious people. We may both live to see, too, a man nominated for President who will know when the fight is over and not go on any $50,000 speaking tour, and get stranded in Texas like a troupe presenting a ten-cent show.

WERE it not that one is prepared to hear most anything strange and startling these days, the news from Turkey would be very sensational. Five thousand Albanians have revolted against the Turks. A battle was fought week before last at Diakova. Albania borders the Adriatic Sea in the western part of Turkey in Europe, and northwest of Greece. The fighting is in the northern section of Albania, near the boundaries of Bosnia. The Albeoian Governor has had to seek safety in flight.

IT looks as if tea might be scarce before so very long, for the Chinese government have called on Russia to compel Germany to evacuate the fortifications on the Shan Tung peninsula. These forts were captured about a month since by German troops to secure satisfaction for the murder of two German missionaries. The China authorities claim that something was done towards punishing the murderers *before the forts were taken. Ger*many holds on and names no date for the withdrawal of troops. It is believed instead of one ship at Shan Tung there will soon be eight ships and between three and four thousand troops in China waters to enforce what the Germans are after.

*SENATOR T. P. DAVIS, of Fay*ette, deputy marshall of Alaska, has returned from a summer spent in Alaska and talks about the country. In a letter to his colleague, Senator N. C. McNeil, of this town, his advice is to "stay at home, live honest and keep warm." He thinks if a man does go on a prospecting tour there that he should have at least $700 cash. He predicts that next season there will be a great rush for gold, but that provisions will be forwarded in such quantities that living will be comparatively cheap. He proposes to invest what money he has to spare in the Kanawha Prospecting Company, as he believes that it is only by combined effort that success will be a certainty.

SOME visitors in Virginia hired an old negro on a plantation to drive them to see the Natural Bridge. So says the Toronto Saturday Night.

On nearing the bridge they asked the colored man its height and width, and if he really thought it such a wonder, after all. His replies were so vague that one of them said:

"Now, Sam, confess; you have never been so near the bridge before."

"Lord, suh!" he replied, "I member comin here to help de day dey lay de corner stone; but I ain't seen nuthin 'bout how high de bridge was built, nor how far 'cross 'twuz. Ol co'se, I aint come heah much sence; but dis nigger never goin' to fergit dat day."

Wheeling Intelligencer

West Virginia's Leading Family and Political Newspaper

The INTELLIGENCER is in its forty sixth year, and throughout the period of its existence it has been carrying information to the homes of the State. The year 1898 will be a history making year scarcely less in importance than those which have preceded it. The first regular session of the Fifty-fifth Congress will be notable, as it will witness the debates and action on vital questions that affect the people - the proposed reforms in our monetary system, the Cuban question, Hawaiian annexation, and many foreign relations now pending.

The year will be important politically. A new State legislature and a new Congress will be elected. The campaign will involve vital State and National issues, and in West Virginia the choice of a U. S Senator.

Continuous Advertising.

Continuous advertising is the best advertising. Keeping your name always prominently before the people and your goods always in their minds is real, live advertising. Spasmodic publicity is cheaper in dollars and cents, but its results are correspondingly less. "Keep everlastingly at it" is a good motto to hang over the advertising desk.—Shoe and Leather Gazette.

Important Notice to Raisers of Poultry.

Here is the place to market your Turkey and Chickens. I give 5c a pound for turkey dry picked, with head and feet left on, undressed; for chickens the same way; which equals 12½c and 10c dressed chickens for kegs, 12½c for butter, 25c for eggs. Pure and all other kinds of Produce taken at fair prices, and goods sold as cheap as store bills, or cheaper. I take poultry every Wednesday and Thursday. Remember I will give goods with 15 per cent off. All trade goods sold 10 per cent off for cash. Yours for business,

R. J. McKEE,

Local Events.

THE grocery store of R. M. & C. A. Nottey, of Clifton Forge, was broken into last week and $1,554 taken from the safe.

TEDD MCLAUGHLIN, son of G. H. McLaughlin, aged twelve, was thrown from a horse last week and broke his arm.

An oyster supper has been spoken of for the benefit of the Daughters of the Confederacy, to be held at this place during the holidays.

H. S. RUCKER and N. C. McNeil were at Green Bank last Saturday to try a justice case against E. O. Moore, in which judgement was rendered on a note.

An appeal has been allowed in the case of Williams and Patterson, trustees, vs W. H. Overholt and others from Greenbrier county.

ONE of the tallest men in the State is probably at Shepherdstown. His name is John Henry Thomas; he is twenty-seven years old and measures six feet, nine and one-half inches in height.

THE Editor of the Greenbrier Independent's cow has strayed. The advertisement states that she was fresh. A small boy in Marlinton suggests that maybe she was "too fresh!"

THE worst freight wreck in the history of the Grafton and Greenbrier Railroad occurred between Grafton and Belington, Tuesday. A freight car left the track, tearing up an eighth of a mile and smashing fourteen cars. No one was seriously injured.

MORGAN, the Jackson county murderer, who was sentenced to die on the 16th of December, made his escape but was caught. He is the man for whom Judge Blizzard addressed the mob which came to lynch him, and who was in a few days tried and sentenced to death.

AN ore, which contains silver, tin and other valuable minerals, has been discovered on the lands of Peter Gum and W. G. Rodgers, and a partnership has been formed to develop it. The existence of the mine in Highland Co. has been known for years by one or two persons who used the metal for bullets. Until recently the exact spot has been kept very secret.

THE Bath Enterprise says that the McClintic Mill was stopped the other day, and the turbine being taken out it was discovered that a large eel was so wedged in the mechanism of the same that it could only be removed by cutting it in pieces. This mill is turned by the stream which flows from the Warm Springs. It is supposed that the eel was endeavoring to reach deeper water for the winter.

THE Manufacturers Record in its "construction" department notifies contractors and manufacturers of machinery that railroad companies are now forming to develop that 300,000 acres of land, which is but a new name for Pocahontas county, and that upon the completion of the roads extensive developments will be made in the territory.

MRS WILEY, mother of Mrs G. H. McLaughlin, broke her leg last Monday, by falling out of bed. She has been at the McLaughlin House for several months. She is eighty years old, and has been down with the fever for a long time. She was recovering slowly and it is supposed that she was endeavoring to rise from her bed and had a fainting spell. Her recovery is extremely doubtful.

THE lands of William H. Overholt, situated in this county, have been sold by special commissioner I. J. Williams and the sale confirmed by the circuit court of Greenbrier county. The lands were sold here at public auction, October 14, but upset bids were put in on all the tracts. A. F. Mathews, who held the first lien became the owner of all the land including the mill for $2,300, with the exception of the 50 acre Hall tract which was bought by Mrs M. J. Overholt for $75.

JOHN R. WARWICK, of Green Bank, recovered his horse which was stolen from his stable, November 19, after a ten day's pursuit. The horse is in possession of Isaac Hosmer, of Rockingham county, Virginia, who had bought him from John Wilfong. He had given $95 for the horse and executed his note. Wilfong attempted to store the animal in the stable of Hood and Hoover, hearing of it brought the note himself for $95. He gave the horse up without a struggle. Wilfong went to Harrisonburg and bought a ticket to a neighboring station. It is suspected of that there he went to leave where he lives. Constable Burner and a special constable are still after him. While in Beverly Mr Warwick struck the trail of a large gray horse, Monday, December 20. It is supposed that he had been stolen from Greenbrier county. Circuit clerk Wilson, Beverly, W. Va., can give fuller information. Mr Warwick writes:

PERSONAL MENTION.

H. A. and B. M. Yeager are at home again.

LARRY MAY has gone to Fairmont to work on the court-house being built at that place.

Rev J. D. Martin, P. E., of Lewisburg, preached at Marlinton last Monday, and held the quarterly conference.

Henry Moore, of Stony Creek, has recently imported a pair of blooded fox hounds from Ohio, that are giving the rabbits and foxes no rest, day or night.

Robert Malcomb has moved from Laurel Creek to Nathan Barlow's, near Indian Draft, where he expects to open a grocery and shoe shop.

C. E. Pritchard and family, of Dunmore, spent Sunday with C. A. Yeager, on their return from a visit to the former's brother at the Healing Springs.

Mrs Mary A. McClintic will spend this winter in Lewisburg, as usual. She left last week with her son, L. M. McClintic, who went on to Charleston.

E. F. McLaughlin, from near Dunmore, has moved to the McLaughlin Mill, near Edray, and has taken charge of the same and is running it for all there is in it.

Dr Page Barlow has disposed of his property on French Creek, and is expected to spend some time at his old home, near Edray, this winter.

Douglas McNeil, of Buckeye, has secured a position in Draughton's Business College, at Texarkana, Texas, as prine pal of the penmanship department. He left for Texas last Monday.

John Gibson, of Elk, was in Marlinton last week, and reports that the Grand Old Party will have four new voters in 1898, and should there be female suffrage then there will be one more voter to be counted on.

Highland county has the pleasure of entertaining a number of our young people this week. Misses Maud Yeager, Fannie McLaughlin Hattie Patterson, Daisy Yeager and James Patterson, Walker Yeager and Will McLaughlin are visiting in different portions of that county.

R. M. BEARD wants to buy sheep and those having sheep to sell can correspond with him.

MR ALLEN WILSON, a son of Hon Wm. L. Wilson, and Miss Frances Wilson, daughter of Dr. George B. Simpson, were married in the parlor of the hotel at Camden-on Gauley, December 2.

TWO negroes were hunting together in Rockbridge county. One took the brown cap of the other for a coon and fired a load of no 4 shot into it. Most of the shot lodged in the shootee's head, but he suffered no special injury therefrom.

ANOTHER fire got started at the Yeager Hotel, Wednesday morning, about breakfast time. Ralph, the four year old son of the proprietor, upset a lamp in a bedroom. The lamp broke and the oil caught fire. It was put out by the prompt action of the boarders, who were at the table.

Two persons, names not learned, were building fence for John H. Poage, quite recently. While sawing down the last tree, they came near being killed. The tree struck the saw out of the hands of one and buried it in the ground, and missed the other persons body by only a few inches. It was a marvelous escape from instant death for both.

CURIOUS that the first snappy weather should come just as I drop the prices on some of my capes. Women who have one for a new cape are to be congratulated for such good fortune as this. Gray Kersy Capes reduced from $2.85 to $2.50. Black and blue double capes worth 3.50 reduced to 2.50. Bring your poultry next Tuesday.

Anniversary.

Sunday, December the 12, 1897, being the fourteenth anniversary of the dedication of the Edray M. E. church, a public service consisting of preaching, experience and singing will be held, beginning at eleven o'clock a. m. promptly. The public are cordially invited. GEORGE P. MOORE.

GILLESPIE.

We have had a fine rain and a few cold nights.

J. E. McLaughlin and Miss Rhoda Collins were married on December 7, at Green Bank, by Rev Eavey.

We are glad to hear that the threshing machine has been repaired and is operating again, after a long delay.

C. M. Acord will move his planing machine from Amos Nottingham's to C. Nottingham's, who expects to build a fine house.

E. Knisely has returned home, after several weeks of engineering.

We are expecting to hear the whistle of a locomotive at any time.

A large number of pheasants and wild turkeys have been seen crossing the Alleghany. JUMBO.

An Elopement Foiled.

Last Thursday night about nine o'clock the town was thrown into a state of excitement by learning that Everet Lightner, a married man, had attempted to elope with Mrs Charles Friel. They lived in the same neighborhood, and there had been some slight suspicion that all was not right. About dusk Thursday evening two boys saw Lightner in the woods near the Friel residence, and when the woman disappeared shortly after dark it was surmised almost at once that she had gone off with Lightner.

Moff Waugh, a brother of Mrs Friel, was there and started in pursuit of them, going through Marlinton; while the husband went to Big Spring to intercept them if they had taken that road. Waugh had chosen the right direction and overtook the parties near Colonel Levi Gay's residence. Lightner had with him as a supporter Chas. Beverage, who resented Waugh's interference and had raised his arm to shoot Waugh, when it was pulled down by the woman. The party was on foot, and it is supposed they had a team waiting for them at some point further on. The night was unpropitious,—a heavy rain was falling and the roads were deep with mud.

Waugh borrowed a horse of Col Gay and brought his sister to Marlinton to a hotel, and had a warrant issued for Beverage.

The Lightners and Friels live in the narrow Greenbrier valley a few miles above Marlinton. Beverage is the man whom Judge McWhorter sent to jail last court for refusing to divulge the name of the man who had sold him whiskey. He was out of jail on his own recognizance to appear at the April term of court.

Lightner was in Golden's store on the evening of the affair and bought 15 cents worth of ginger snaps, 25 cents worth of cartridges, and a bottle of Indian Liniment. This is now regarded as the necessary outfit to elope. The bottle of liniment suggests the possibility of severe bruises.

Mrs Friel returned with her brother. On Monday her brothers brought her to the magistrate at this place, but there was no grounds for taking jurisdiction in the matter. The party was well armed with a Winchester and an old musicle loading rifle that had a bore as big as a small cannon.

The last heard of the eloping Mrs Friels' leaving home are about as follows: Her husband suspected that something was wrong as she had removed part of her clothes. On Thursday evening she left saying she was going to visit a sick neighbor at Bess Wilson's. Friel informed his brother in law, who went to Wilson's and found she was not there. He followed on and discovered her with the two men.

Their explanation of the affair is that they met by accident as they were all bound for Marlinton, and nothing of an improper nature was intended.

LINWOOD ITEMS.

Observing that there has been nothing in your valuable paper from this place for some time, I will endeavor to give you a few items for publication.

After some very wet weather, we have had a change which will more than likely usher in winter.

Our farmers are beginning—in obedience to the weather—feeding their stock winter rations.

Mr Dick Showalter says:

That playing a game of football,
And keeping "bachelors' ball,"
Is far better than
Being a married man,
And nursing babies that squall.

L. Take, who recently purchased a grazing farm near here, is wintering a neat bunch of cattle.

J. P. Tracy has just returned from taking a large drove of cattle to Virginia where they will be wintered.

Our old hero, Dr Lynch, will soon be off for Davis, where he expects to practice his profession in the lumber camps of that place.

George W. Sharp, a prominent citizen of Mill Hollow, expects to move to Skinner's Creek, Lewis county, in a short time. We wish him much good luck in his new home.

Paddy Gay, our young stock dealer, was in this neighborhood a few days since, where he got a fine shepherd pup, which he says by next fall will make one of the finest drivers in the county.

The boys say they are glad to have Professor Burner, of Yelk, visit their society so often, and so do some of the girls. Professor Burner says he can tell a girl's disposition by her eyes, so girls look to your eyes when the Professor is around.

Quite a large number of persons visited our place Saturday, December 4, to witness an exciting game of football which took place between the Linwood and Drybranch teams. The day was a fearful one being wet and rainy. Water stood 6 inches deep over half the field, but the boys played like it was a sunshiny day. Linwood seemed to score almost at will. This is the second match these teams have played this season. Linwood winning both, the first by a score of 1—0 and the second 5—0. Dry Branch has the material for a good team, and with a little more practice will be first-class.

DAVY'S HILL.

Anderson Grimes has moved in to his new house.

The literary society is growing in interest at Cove Hill.

We are having some fine rains, which are welcomed for water was getting scarce.

A man, by the name of Thomas, had a show at Mt Zion school house Thursday night.

The people are requested to meet at the church Wednesday to get wood and clean up the church yard.

Cattle drivers stopping with cattle in this State have no right to kill game. They should be dealt with as the law requires.

Rev Clutterbuck is holding a protracted meeting at the Buzard church and has had quite an interesting meeting and a number of convertions.

The Mt Tabor school house came near being destroyed by fire last week. Some bad person, out of employment, is supposed to have set it on fire. Jasper Dilley, Lanty McCarty and Henry Sampson extinguished the fire.

Yours truly. LELIA ANN.

HOW TO FIND OUT.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What to Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root, the great kidney remedy fulfils every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold urine and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following the use of liquor, beer, or wine and over comes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists, price fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet both sent free by mail. Mention The Pocahontas Times and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Tee proprietors guarantee the genuineness of this offer.

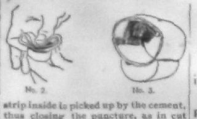
TIRES THAT LEAK.



The Morgan & Wright single-tube quick-repair tire must be regarded as a distinct improvement in bicycle tire construction. It has the following advantages:

While punctures in it can be repaired with pegs, or semi-liquid injections, as well as in any other single-tube tire, it can be permanently repaired by using the quick-repair strip inside the tire. See cut No. 1.

No. 1.

By injecting M. & W. quick-repair cement through the puncture, and then pressing down on the tire with the thumb, as in cut No. 2, the repair strip inside is picked up by the cement, thus closing the puncture, as in cut No. 3.

No. 2. No. 3.

The Morgan & Wright single-tube quick-repair tire is guaranteed not porous. This is on account of the way in which it is made. Nearly every rider has heard of tires that "leak like a sieve."

Many tires rot, because water gets into the fabric between the two layers of rubber. The Morgan & Wright fabric is proof against moisture.

Everybody knows how comfortable Morgan & Wright tires are, and yet how seldom they puncture. This is due to the fabric.

Ask any bicycle dealer whether other tires last as long as Morgan & Wright tires. Ask, also, what the Morgan & Wright guarantee means. Morgan & Wright tires are repaired free of charge, at the factory in Chicago or at any of the Morgan & Wright free repair shops, located in the principal cities.

N. B.—When you have a puncture, get right off. Riding a tire flat, when it has a tack or nail in it, may damage it considerably.

Commissioner's Notice

Office of S. B. Scott, Jr., Commissioner, Marlinton, W. Va., November 19, 1897.

Pursuant to a decree of the circuit court of Pocahontas county, made in a cause therein pending on the 8th October, 1897, entitled—

Thomas L. Cowlehan et als., vs.
Daniel O'Connell,

I will proceed at my office in the town of Marlinton, W. Va., on the 29th day of December, 1897,

to take, state, and report to court the following matters of account, viz:

1st—The liens against the land in the bill and proceedings mentioned, with their respective legal dignities and priorities, and especially whether or not the lien retained by S. S. Aldeman is an existing lien.

2d—Whether or not the said land will in five years rent for enough to pay out the liens thereon.

3d—Any other matter, etc.

Respectfully,
S. B. SCOTT, Jr.,
Comm'r. in Chancery.

NOTICE to LIEN HOLDERS.

To all persons holding liens by judgment or otherwise on the real estate or any part thereof of Daniel O'Connell:

In pursuance of a decree of the circuit court of Pocahontas county, made in a case therein pending to subject the real estate of the said Daniel O'Connell to the satisfaction of the liens thereon, you are hereby required to present all claims held by you and each of you against the said Daniel O'Connell which are liens against his real estate or any part of it, for acceptance to me at my office in the town of Marlinton, Pocahontas county, West Virginia, on or before the 30th day of December, 1897.

Given under my hand this 19th day of November 1897.

S. B. SCOTT, Jr.,
Comm'r. in Chancery.

The Greenbrier Railroad.

The incorporation of the Greenbrier Railroad Company of West Virginia, has brought to light the plans of an enterprise organized by New York capitalists, which has for its object the development of the coal fields of that state. The capitalists interested have purchased from John T. McGraw of Grafton a tract of 200,000 acres of wild land in the northeastern part of West Virginia, for which they paid $500,000.

In addition to this tract, they have obtained control of some smaller ones, making their total holdings nearly a half million acres. Rich beds of coal underlie these lands, and the mining of this coal will soon begin.

The Greenbrier Railroad Company capital stock is $100,000, and the incorporators are M. E. Ingalls, Decatur Axtell, H. C. Simms, F. B. Enslow, and J. M. Gill. The Greenbrier road is to run from the Chesapeake and Ohio road at the mouth of Greenbrier river to a point within ten miles of the lands recently purchased.

The purchasers of the lands are to take the bonds issued for the construction of the road. It is also announced that the New York syndicate has obtained control of the Dry Fork Railroad, which runs through a portion of the recently purchased lands.

The connexion of Mr Ingalls with the project shows that the Chesapeake and Ohio Railway Co is to profit by it. Mr Ingalls himself announced a few weeks ago that he would soon be in position to make rates on Kenawha coal to Duluth and St. Paul, which would shut Pittsburg and Eastern Ohio coal out of those markets.

Mining engineers report that the coal in the recently acquired lands is the finest in the State.—Baltimore Sun.

The Danger of Chewing Gum.

The custom of gum-chewing, which is quite common in this country, as the legions of slot machines for selling chewing-gum testify, seems to have but recently gained ground in England judging from comments in English journals. The following note from The Hospital is especially interesting as controverting the principal claim of advocates of gum on this side of the water, namely, that its use aids digestion by stimulating the flow of saliva. Says the journal just named:

Attention has been called to the danger attending the use of chewing-gum by an inquest which has been recently held at Lincoln on a child aged been seven and eight years old, who died after eating this substance, which it not unnaturally imagined was a sweetmeat. We would point out, however, that, besides such risks as this, the habit of masticating this filthy compound of flavored india-rubber is undoubtedly the cause of much dyspepsia. The constant titillation of the salivary organs kept up by chewing this stuff not only causes a steady drain of saliva, which is most wasteful, but, what is more serious still, in consequence of the frequently repeated stimulation to which these organs are exposed, they fail to respond to the normal excitation which ought to rouse them to action when food is taken. A constant dribble of salivary secretion is substituted for the healthy flow which should only occur at meal times. The glands fail to respond to any stimulant less potent than peppermint, mustard or other constituents found in chewing-gum; and the more insipid foods, such as bread and other starchy foods, pass into the stomach unchanged. This is disturbing to digestion at its very commencement, and it is extremely probable that the indigestion for starchy substances, which is so commonly met with at the present day, is largely due to the wasteful drain caused by smoking and the constant chewing of various substances which we see going on all around. The chewing of gum is thus not only a nasty habit, but it is provocative of ill-health. Unfortunately, when chewing-gum is sold in the form of a sweetm at it may cause still more serious consequences being apt to be swallowed by children, who, like their first parents, when they see that it is apparently good for food and pleas- ant to the eyes, are deluded by the superscription, "not to be eaten."

SPRING-TOOTH HARROW.

The frames are made in one piece of steel angle bar, and formed to withstand all strain without buckling or warping. The teeth in this harrow are so spaced that they will not trail each other. Pulverizing the ground thoroughly. The steel pipe teeth bars are mounted in malleable boxes secured to the frame, and will not bend or break. The peculiar shape of the teeth curling toothirds above the bar gives the greatest amount of spring possible without straining the bolts, and because of their shape and fastening are stronger than used on any other harrow. By the levers the depth of work can be regulated while the harrow is in motion. The draft is steady and direct as the harrow has no side motion.

The young folks of Marlinton who visited Highland have returned and report that Highland is a warrior place than Pocahontas. They were there a week and attended two balls, two receptions and four oyster suppers.

Capt. Simms, of Ronceverte, retired the story in week before last's paper, about the two army officers and the rice and mustard dinner, where the guest refused rice think ing there was more dinner coming, and was pressed to have mustard. He informs us that it was an actual occurrence, his father having heard his friend John Derby, "the father of American Derbys," tell it as one of his experiences. It is told in a much better style in "Pocahontas," by John Derby.

A SAWED-OFF ELOPEMENT IN COURT.

Justice Bird had the whole troupe of performers in the sloping cane before him last Thursday.

Under the rules of this State when a body misbehaves, threatens sudden death, and breaks the peace generally, if a pistol figures in the fracas, the law works its retribution generally by dropping the greater or less charges and goes for the man for carrying a pistol. Charles Beverage, who is a sort of crusty knight-errant, was assisting in the round, and he had flourished a pistol when a brother of the woman came up and took her away from them in spite of the deadly weapon, rescue or no rescue.

Under the charge then of carrying a pistol preferred against the partner in crime, all the dramatis personæ came into court. The guy lothair, Everett Lightner, was there, trying to bide any sober feeling under a laughing exterior, and succeeding very well. He realizes it is a bad thing to fail when you are running away. Beverage, his go between, was taking it very calmly. The woman was quiet and subdued. The abused husband, Charles Friel, was there in a highly nervous state. He is a little man with a quivering chin. At one time the proceedings work ed him up in a towering passion. He made spasmodic efforts to take his cost off, and declared that he was afraid of nobody. A rather unnecessary statement, it would seem, as no one had accused him of cowardice. The brother of the woman, Moff Waugh, appeared as prosecuting witness, and he had done wonders in keeping his sister from taking the irrevocable step. The friends of both sides were conspicuously present, and while on this occasion no one had brought a gun, yet a bulging pocket or two and certain sinister motions led one to believe that all the loose pistols in the country were doing duty there that morning.

N. C. McNeil appeared as counsel for the prosecuting witness. The defendant had no counsel.

Incidentally pretty much the whole trouble came out in the evidence. Lightner testified on the stand that he was trying to run away with Friel's wife, in the presence of them both. The evidence of the witnesses in substance is as follows:

L. M. Waugh.

His brother in law had come to his house and told him that Lightner was going to run away that night with his wife, he thought, and got him to go to Ben Wilson's to see if she had gone there, as she had said she was. Went there but did not find her. Some parties told him that she had gone on with Lightner. He took the Marlinton road and struck out pretty hard. About 8 o'clock came upon them in the dark unexpectedly near Col. Levi Gay's. Saw Beverage, and it was the first he knew that he was mixed up in the affair. Rode by the party for about 100 yards. Beverage suddenly pulled out a revolver, cocked it, and told witness to "Git!" Witness answered: "Boys, some of us'll die right here before I do that." Neither got nor died, but took his sister home with him.

Witness introduced a letter to show Beverage's part in the conspiracy. Beverage produced a letter at once to show that he had been conspired with. The "Squire" did not allow the reporter to read these letters, in a manner more righteous than legal. We are informed there is no law in West Virginia permitting evidence to be sealed, but the Squire did right not to read them himself, as he had plenty of evidence to decide on.

Mrs Charles Friel.

Was present and saw Beverage draw a pistol on her brother. Does not recollect what was said. Was very badly frightened.

Charles Friel.

Was at Hugh Sharp's. Amos Sharp had been out rabbit-hunting and came in and told him that he had seen Lightner going through the woods; witness said: "I bet they are going to run off," and laid aquare to my old mare and went off to Moff's, at a dead gallop. Asked him for his wife while there, went up to Hugh Sharp's after some more of my friends." Witness said that Beverage had acted as go-between for his wife and Lightner all summer, carrying letters, etc.

The testimony of the defense was substantially as follows:

Charles Beverage.

"Squire, I never drawed no revolver in his face. I told him to get down the road." Witness did not deny that he had a revolver with him, and said, "I did not point it at him."

Everett Lightner.

Was present at the meeting the night was shortly, but not dark. Did not see prisoner draw a revolver. Heard no threats made. Said that it was a fact he had met Mrs Friel that night and was trying to leave the country with her. Would not tell any of the circumstances.

The court carefully weighed the testimony and decided that where one side swore practically that the man had a revolver and the prisoner did not deny it, it was not difficult to find him guilty. He imposed the lightest fine, which is $25 and costs.

The parties went home and the matter rests here. Lightner has a nice wife and two children. Mrs Friel has one child. It is a very sad business. Beverage is a never-to-do-well who does not seem to realize that he has helped to break up two families of young people who should be enjoying the happiest years of their lives. The best plan for all concerned would be to forget all that has occurred and try to patch up a treaty of peace, and leave the gay Beverage out of the compact.

Football Notes.

L. A. Yeager, class of '99, was unanimously elected captain of next year's University team.

The Oak Grove team, captain Blake King, has won every game it has played this season,—eight matches.

The Buckeye team is in championship form, and Marlinton football-ists expect to mobilize a team to meet them on Christmas day. Definite announcement will be made in next week's Times.

The Governor of Georgia has wisely vetoed the bill prohibiting football, under penalty of ball and chain. He sets forth his reasons at great length, holding that the matter is out of the jurisdiction of lawmakers and rests with parents and conductors of schools. The game is popular with Americans because of the latent pugnacity and love of fight which is inherent in American character, and which is the greatest safeguard of our national honor.

There are going to be a couple of weddings on the lowlands in the near future.

Harry Beard butchered a hog last week which tipped the beam at 460 lbs. Who can beat it.

Mistake: It was not Newton Mann who was arrested for embezzlement and taken back to Illinois. It was his brother Clint who found more friends waiting for him than he knew what to do with. He was cleared the jury being out only seven minutes. He has turned the tide and says that he will make it too hot for them. Harrah for Clint! The toughest hide will hold out the longest!

S. F. Cochran has gotten up a nice bunch of cattle that will make the shippers' mouths water by next fall. JUNCO.

DUNMORE.

Mrs G. W. Siple is in town.

Billy Sheets is off for Beverly with a load of Jakes.

Frank Taylor brought a load of coal from Huttonsville.

C. A. Yeager was in town last week.

We see wheat hauled to Warm Springs and Mill Point to grind.

William Woeddell is back from the State of Webster.

Mr Otis Warwick has moved to Mrs Carter's.

E. F. McLaughlin was up to see his friends.

George Baxter has surveyed out some large tracts of land near Dunmore,

We see Charles and Bland Nottingham, Alex. Butterbaugh, and others, back from Peter's camp.

The weather seems to be a little moist at this time and the roads a little soft.

Slaven & Arbogast, the Monterey tinners, were doing some work in our neighborhood last week.

Joseph C. Gay, one of the cattle kings, brought over a nice lot of cattle to be fed.

Mrs R. R. Mason and Miss Lucy Kincaid spent Saturday night in Huntersville.

Wash Hoover took a wagon-load of of pork, chickens, and eggs to Huntersville to trade for goods.

Miss Lucy Siple is going to Highland and Bath to be gone 3 months.

Died: At S. B. Hannah's, on the 8th, Miss Maggie Ervine aged about 35 years.

Died, at her home at Frost, Mrs Henry Ruler, aged 86 years. She was a splendid woman.

Harry Taylor is off for the State of Webster to work in the lumber camp.

Peyton Moore and Kemp Sweeker are selling "The First Battle," by William J. Bryan, a book that every man should read.

JOHN SLICKHAMMER.

LOBELIA.

Joseph Snedegar says he has a voter.

Henry Casebolt has not been well for some time.

Mrs Lizzie Hill is on the sick list.

Richard Beard has captured a pet; something in the shape of a donkey, but carries a flag high in the air when interrupted.

Mud, rain and sleet, and hog killing over. J. B. Grimes had one that weighted 396, and P. Henry killed three that tipped the beam at 1104.

Audrew Boggs, of Greenbrier, and Miss Mettie Simmons were married by Rev S. C. Morgan on December 8, and, judging from the noise, there was a big serenade that night.

An agent from Ronceverte in the interest of the Republican paper just started there. He is enrolling quite a lot of subscribers. We wish him much success, but let us not forget our own county paper.

A. W. Hill is taking a business course at Parkersburg.

Coon hunting is the order of the night. Coons are very plentiful almost everywhere; the scarcity of mast in the mountains having brought them in to the cornfields. OBSERVER.

Ferguson's Photograph Gallery is coming to Marlinton. The finest of pictures at lowest of prices. Wait for him.

Please Notice!

I am still here, and new goods coming in every week and go out at the same rate. Come when you will I have something new; and good bargains for cash customers.

If you have but little to buy with it will pay you to investigate my goods and prices.

I am still buying Grain of all kinds, Turkeys, Chickens, Eggs, Butter, &c.

HOW TO FIND OUT.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty four hours a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What to Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root, the great kidney remedy fulfils every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold urin and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following the use liquor, beer, or wine and over comes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists, price fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet both sent free by mail. Mention The Pocahontas Times and send your address to Dr Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Tee proprietors guarantee the genuineness of this offer.

TIRES THAT LEAK.

The Morgan & Wright single-tube quick-repair tire must be regarded as a distinct improvement in bicycle tire construction. It has the following advantages:

While punctures in it can be repaired with plugs, or semi-liquid injections, as well as in any other single-tube tire, it can be permanently repaired by using the quick-repair strip inside the tire. See cut No. 1.

No. 1.

By injecting M. & W. quick-repair cement through the puncture, and then pressing down on the tire with the thumb, as in cut No. 2, the repair strip inside is picked up by the cement, thus closing the puncture, as in cut No. 3.

No. 2.

No. 3.

The Morgan & Wright single-tube quick-repair tire is guaranteed not porous. This is on account of the way in which it is made. Nearly every rider has heard of tires that "look like a sieve."

Many tires rot, because water gets into the fabric between the two layers of rubber. The Morgan & Wright fabric is proof against moisture.

Everybody knows how comfortable Morgan & Wright tires are, and yet how seldom they puncture. This is due to the fabric.

Ask any bicycle dealer whether other tires last as long as Morgan & Wright tires. Ask also, what the Morgan & Wright guarantee means. Morgan & Wright tires are repaired free of charge, at the factory in Chicago or at any of the Morgan & Wright free repair shops, located in the principal cities.

N. B.—When you have a puncture, get right off. Riding a tire flat, when it has a tack or nail in it, may damage it considerably.

Commissioner's Notice

Office of S. B. Scott, Jr., Commissioner, Marlinton, W. Va., November 19, 1897.

Pursuant to a decree of the circuit court of Pocahontas county, made in a cause therein pendi gon the 8th October, 1897, entitled—

vs.
Daniel O'Connell,

I will proceed at my office in the town of Marlinton, W. Va., on the 20th day of December, 1897,

to take, state, and report to court the following matters of account viz:

1st—The liens against the land in the bill and proceedings mentioned, with their respective legal dignities and priorities, and especially whether or not the lien retained by N. S. Alderman is an existing lien.

2d—Whether or not the said land will in five years rent for enough to pay out the liens thereon.

3d—Any other matter, etc.

Respectfully,
S. B. SCOTT, Jr.,
Comm'r. in Chancery.

NOTICE to LIES HOLDERS.

To all persons holding liens by judgment or otherwise on the real estate of any part thereof of Daniel O'Connell:

In pursuance of a decree of the circuit court of Pocahontas county, made in a cause therein pending to subject the real estate of the said Daniel O'Connell to the satisfaction of the liens thereon, you are hereby requested to present all claims held by you and each of you against the said Daniel O'Connell which are liens against his real estate or any part of it, for adjudication by me at my office in the town of Marlinton, Pocahontas county, and Virginia, on or before the 20th day of December, 1897.

Given under my hand this 19th day of November, 1897.

Resources of Genius.

At a suburban church social not long ago each person was required to wear conspicuously upon his clothing some pictorial or other device that should represent in "rebus" form the title of any well known book, and all the others were to guess at the book intended. A prize was to be given for the most ingenious of these devices.

"Paradise Lost," represented by a card upon which five dice had been pasted, and from which two had evidently dropped or been removed, was easily guessed. "Hard Cash" was no puzzle. Neither was it hard recognize "A Pair of Blue Eyes," "Innocents Abroad," "Vanity Fair," or "Uncle Tom's Cabin" in spite of their pictorial disguises.

One of the guests however had a paper. Attached to one of the buttons of his coat was a card bearing simply the inscription:

TON.

Every one at last gave it up, and asked for the solution.

"Why that's easy," he said, "It means 'A tale of Two Cities.'"

"Explain."

"Boston and Washington. Last syllable of both. See?"

"That's not fair!" said the others. "It's the last syllable of Wilmington, Charleston, Coshocton, Kinston, and Yankton. We protest!"

"Well, I wont insist. Try this one."

He turned the card over. It was inscribed on the other side with these three letters:

ANS.

After a severe mental struggle, everybody gave this up, also.

"That ought not to puzzle you," he said. "It's the "Last of the Mohicans'"

He got the prize.—Youth's Companion.

A Little Mixed.

A tall man who had been speaking with another man, and who wondered why the other man acted so queerly, says the Cleveland Leader, saw a boy near his side trying to keep from laughing.

"What are you laughing at?" asked the tall man of the boy.

"I'm laughing at what you said to that man why just shook hands with you," answered the boy.

"I don't remember that I said anything funny to him."

"Well, when he asked you if you didn't know him, you said, 'Your name is familiar, but really I can't recall your face!"

THE beard should be trimmed and not allowed to grow scraggily, and if grizzly or of uneven color, use Buckingham's Dye which colors a beautiful brown or black.

Word Contests Barred.

The post office department has notified Postmaster Van Coot that periodicals containing advertisements of offering prizes by chance will be excluded from the mails The order says:

"For example, incomplete words which the contestants are to solve by supplying the missing letters: Y—E——A, a city in Austria; C—P—N—A—EN, a city in Denmark. CA——N, a city in the United States. The latter can be made into Camden,—Canton, Capron, Carbon, or Canyon, all cities of greater or less importance in the United States. It is a mere matter of chance whether the competitor selects the words designated by the promoter as the 'correct list,' and upon this selection hangs the chance of obtaining the prize.'—New York Herald.

The Christian Herald was one of the worst offending advertising mediums.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. Assisting the Memory.

A new system of mnemonics is described by the San Francisco Post. Like all other systems, it fails of absolute perfection.

John Beckwith, the warehouseman, received a letter the other day addressed in a round business hand, and bearing the Oakland postmark. He glanced at it, rubbed his forehead reflectively a moment, and then, without opening the envelop, tore the letter into bits.

"Why did you do that?" asked the partner. "That might have contained something of importance."

"No, It didn't. I wrote it my self."

"Are you in the habit of writing letters to yourself?"

"Yes, I have to. Now if I had not written this yesterday and mailed it, I should have forgotten that bunch of braid, two dozen pearl buttons and five yards of blue cloth that I've got to go up tow and buy right now. Once, the, wrote a letter to myself about something I wanted to remember and forgot to mail it for two weeks."

West Virginia's Leading Family and Political Newspaper.....

The INTELLIGENCER is in its forty sixth year, and throughout the period of its existence it has been carrying information to the homes of the State. The year 1898 will be a history-making year scarcely less in importance than these which have preceded it. The first regular session of the Fifty-fifth Congress will be notable, as it will witness the debates and action on vital questions that affect the people—the proposed reforms in our monetary system, the Cuban question, Hawaiian annexation, and many foreign relations now pending.

The year will be important politically. A new State legislature and a new Congress will be elected. The campaign will involve vital State and National issues, and in West Virginia the choice of a U. S. Senator.

Biographic.

The progenitor of the McCarty connexion, and one of the earliest pioneers in our county, was Timothy McCarty, a native of Ireland. He settled on Knapp's Creek, previously to the Revolution, and was a soldier in that memorable war for independence. He could speak from experience that hard was the contest for liberty and the struggle for independence. With his humble hand he helped to make the history that forms one of the most instructive chapters in the annals or human endeavors for life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness.

His first marriage was with Nancy Honeyman, and settled on lands now in the possession of Wilson Rider and the Gibson Brothers near Frost, thence moved to Brgwns Mountain and opened up the property now owned by Amos Barlow.

By the first marriage there were seven sons: Daniel, Preston, Justin, James, Thomas,—the names of the other two not remembered. All of these sons were soldiers in the war of 1812, and but one ever returned to Pocahontas, Daniel McCarty, to live. The rest either perished in the war, or went to Tennessee, or Kentucky.

Timothy McCarty's second marriage was with Jane Waugh, a sister of Samuel Waugh of The Hills, whose memoirs recently appeared in The Times. By this marriage there were thirteen children. The names of but eight are in hand: Eli, Reuben, Samuel, Jacob, Nancy, Jane, Martha, and Sally.

Nancy was married to Robert McClary, a saddler at Mill Point, and finally went to Ohio.

Jane became Mrs Harvey Casebolt, and after living awhile at the head of Locust Creek, went to one of the western counties of West Virginia.

Sally was married to Ezekiel Boggs, in Greenbrier County.

Eli married Margaret, daughter of Levi Moore, junior, and lived most of his married life on the place lately occupied by John Simmons, head of Stony Creek. His daughter Jane was married to John Simmons. Robert, Amanda, Margaret, Calvin, Milton, Warwick and Nancy are the children of Mr and Mrs John Simmons.

Reuben McCarty lived and died unmarried.

Samuel Waugh McCarty married Phebe Moore, daughter of "Pennsylvania" John Moore and Margaret Moore his wife. Their children were James, George, Margaret, William, Elizabeth, and Peter. In reference to Samuel McCarty's family the following particulars are available:

James McCarty went to Ohio, married Mary Holden, and thence went to Minnesota. His second marriage was with Melissa Overly.

George McCarty, a Union soldier, 3d West Virginia Cavalry, Company I, killed in 1864 at the battle of Winchester under Sheridan.

William McCarty, a Union soldier, 10th West Virginia Regiment Company A, died at home, 1871.

Margaret McCarty was married to James Curry, and they went to Kansas.

Elizabeth McCarty, a life-long invalid, but an industrious, useful person, died a few years since at the old homestead.

Peter McCarty was a Union veteran, 3d West Virginia Cavalry, Company I. He married Elizabeth Arbuckle Hill, daughter of Aaron Hill, on Hills Creek, and resides on the homestead near Dilley's Mill. The names of their children: James William, Lorenzo Francis, Amos Hendrick, Albert Granville, Carrie Virginia, and Mary.

Jacob McCarty, son of Timothy McCarty, was a member of the West Virginia legislature in the reconstruction period. His first marriage was with Annie Boggs of Greenbrier, and lived on Droop Mountain. There were six children by this marriage: Samuel, Elizabeth, Malvin, Melissa, Julia, and Franklin. The second marriage was with Hannah Brock, of Droop Mountain. George and Fanny are the children by this marriage. George McCarty lives on the homestead on Droop Mountain overlooking the Hillsboro charming landscape.

Miss Susie McCarty and her brothers, James H. and Thomas, teachers in the public schools, are the grand-children of Jacob McCarty. Their parents Samuel and Elizabeth McCarty, of Bruffey's Creek.

Jacob McCarty, Esq., as already intimated was prominent in the political affairs of our county, soon after the war between the States. He seems to have been quite ready at repartee. Soon after his return from Wheeling some one undertook to guy him in this fashion: "Well, Jake, you have been to the legislature and found out what a fool you are."

"Yes," rejoined Mr McCarty, "and that is more than you can say for yourself."

Daniel McCarty was the only one of the seven sons of Timothy McCarty that went to the war of 1812 and returned to Pocahontas permanently. His wife was Elizabeth, daughter of "Pennsylvania" John Moore, and they lived on Brown's Mountain. Their children were George, John David, Margaret, Louisa, and Jane; and in reference to them we learn that George married Eliza Herold and settled where Sheldon Moore, Esq, now lives. The names of George's children were Andrew, Lanty, Catherine, Ella, and Lillie.

John David McCarty married Susan Harper, and lived near Hillsboro. Their children were Ellis, Julia Anise, Mrs George H. Curry, who died August, 1897; Sherman, who perished in a tanvat; Martha and Della dying young.

Margaret McCarty was married to Jeremiah Dilley, and lived near Mt. Tabor. Her children were Jasper, Margaret, who was Mrs C. J. Hill: Sally Jane, now Mrs Martin Hoover, of Kansas.

Louisa became Mrs Warwick Jackson.

Jane was married to Henry Tomlinson, and settled in Iowa.

Daniel McCarty when in service was in the company commanded by Captain William Cackley, living at the time at Mill Point. He was greatly attached to his captain and seemed never to tire in rehearsing the deeds of kindness and careful attention performed by his greatly esteemed captain.

Among his war stories the old soldier seemed to take great delight in telling how the turkeys would make him run into camp when he would be foraging for something fresh to eat for his messmates.

In explaining how this could be for a soldier brave as he claimed himself to have been, Daniel would shut one eye, wink with the other, fix his tobacco, and study awhile and if happened to be in a refreshment room he would have to have a sip of thirty-cent Kerr's Creek whisky. When ready he would tell in slow and measured tones how he would bait fish hooks with grains of corn and then throw the line where the turkeys could see it, and when one would take the bait it would start right for him and he would break for the camp, and the old gobbler would never stop nor let him alone until it was knocked on the head. Then it was his time to tackle the brave old critter and fix him for a turkey roast, for giving him such a scare and hard race

When it was insinuated that it took him a very long time to tell nothing much at last, his rejoinder would come quick as lightning When there is nothing much to talk to, it takes time to say nothing much, as the Preacher tells us.

We have thus traced as well as we could the family history of Timothy McCarty, with such assistance as Mrs Margaret Simmons and James H. McCarty were able to render. The friends of the respectable one their thanks mainly to those for the cheerful and valuable help they gave the compiler. The narrative is brought down within the memory and observation of the living. Some member of the McCarty connexion should take special pains to preserve this paper and collect materials for correction and expansion at some future day. The same ought to be done by the friends of all the pioneers whose family annals may be given in these biographic memoranda, week after week.

One hundred years ago but few persons in our region were more generally known and more talked about than Timothy McCarty. Tho he claimed to be a native of Ireland, his name indicates Scotch parentage. He was one of the renowned Scotch-Irish emigrants who were refugees for conscience sake, and were looking for homes where they might live unmolested by the restrictions that made their lives so unhappy at that period of bloody agitation in the old country. The people of East Virginia wanted a living wall between them and the Indians. They differed from the Chinese. The Chinese made their wall of brick and stone to shut out the Tartars. The East Virginians thought a living wall would be cheaper, sooner built, and serve a better purpose, and so they prevailed on their governor to offer special privileges and inducements to any who might venture to settle the Valley of Virginia and the regions adjacent.

Timothy McCarty was one of the persons that came, one of those who stood faithfully to his post in the struggle for American Independence. He is one of the few revolutionary veterans buried in our mountain land, and it would be well if his grave could be identified and kept from being forgotten.

A LETTER TO THE TEACHERS. THEIR DUTIES, ETC.

DEAR FELLOW TEACHERS:

Considering the importance of brevity in an article that may not be of interest to all the readers of The Times. I shall ask you to accept some of my statements upon faith without presenting details of argument to prove them.

I desire to call your attention to a few thoughts concerning the duties and responsibilities which you have assumed. Lord Bacon, in his "Maxims of the Law," said: "I hold every man to be a debtor to his profession." A teacher certainly is debtor to his profession, and he should cherish an honest pride in it and should never loose sight of the final purpose of his work.

Now, let me call your attention to the following important duties:

It is your duty to see that the Graded Course of Study is properly introduced into your school. If you will turn to page 16 of the Manuel you will find the following: "For you, in compliance with the law, the Manuel and Course of Study has been prepared, for it is thro you it must succeed. It is from the schools in which you teach that the great mass of men and women come who own and control the great enterprises of the day. Here are educated the boys and girls who because of the active life they must lead possess that physical development which, with proper training, insures a degree of intellectual vigor, which needs but proper training to insure to the State that better citizenship and home-life which, to obtain, it has expended millions of dollars." What an interest, therefore, centers in the common schools, and how great the responsibility of the teacher. The public school system should be managed upon business principles. We should work upon a uniform plan, and let me urge upon you the necessity of properly grading your scholars.

It is the duty of every teacher to properly prepare the grade sheet, and, together with the term register, return to the Secretary of the Board of Education. The effect of grading your school will be largely lost unless the grade sheet is properly filled and filed with the Secretary. See that your work on your grade sheet is correct, for without accuracy it is worthless. Remember that your grade sheet goes into the hands of your successor and he will rely on it in classifying his school. Therefore, be sure that your work is correct.

Statistics are worthless unless accurate, and the large sums of money expended by the State in distributing the same is a waste if they are not correct in every particular.

Almost every mail brings to the office of the State Superintendent letters of inquiry from the office of the National Commissioner of Education, or from various institutions, States and Nations regarding our State educational work, and to these interrogations the department is unable to make intelligent reply because of the failure or neglect of those charged with the duty of supplying the desired information. Now, fellow teacher, to make a correct report of your school work is one of your most important duties and there is not a blank handed you but which should be properly filled. The Legislature has made ample provisions for collecting and placing the State in possession of valuable information by furnishing blanks, etc., and the law must be enforced by all whose duty it is to see that it is enforced.

The Secretary of the Board of Education is prohibited by law from issueing to a teacher a draft for his last month's salary until said teacher has delivered to him a properly kept term register.

A correct enumeration of the school youth is one of the most important matters connected with the school work of the State, for it is the basis upon which the distributable school fund of the State is disbursed. The law makes it the duty of the teacher in each subdistrict, before the end of his school and not later than the first day of April in each yar, to make an eunumeration of all the scholars residing in his sub-district. This is one of your most important duties.

Teachers should not use unauthorized text-books. In regard to Grammar, I will say that according to the rulings of the Attorney General the only authorized books on this subject are Hyde's.

Many inquiries reach me regarding the compulsory school attendance law. Some claim the enforcement of the law is impossible, and are willing to violate it. I clip the following from the West Virginia School Journal: "If the law is a bad one it should be enforced all the more rigidly for by so doing its speedy repeal would be rendered very nearly certain. If the law is a good one, it certainly should receive the support of all loyal citizens. But, above all, the law should be faithfully executed by teachers and school officers, because it is the supreme law of the State and as such should be sacredly respected."

So far this year the school attendance has been good, and I believe that an earnest effort on the part of the teachers and trustees will accomplish much for the cause of education.

With best wishes for your welfare, I remain, Your most obedient servant, D. L. Barlow, County Sup't. of Schools.

Notions.

Mark Twain's latest work, "Following the Equator. A Journey around the World," is said to be one of his best productions. He gives an extract from an obituary notice, which all country editors who have vainly tried to express the woe which they did not feel, and write something afecting, will appreciate. It was composed by a native of India, about his uncle, Onoocool Chunder Mookerjee, and published in Calcutta:

"And having said these words he hermetically sealed his lips, not to open them again. All the well-known doctors of Calcutta that could be procured for a man of his position and wealth were brought, —Doctors Payne, Payrer, and Nilmadhub Mookerjee, and others; they did what they could do with their puissance and knack of medical knowledge, but it proved after all as if to milk the ram! His wife and children had not the mournful consolation to hear his last words; he remained sotto voce for a few hours, and then was taken from us at 6:12 P. M. According to the caprice of God which passeth understanding."

There is one Virginia Republican who wants a job and he seems to go after it as a matter of right, to judge from the following letter which he wrote to the President:

Hon William McKinley,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: I helped save this country in 1896 and am anxious to keep it saved; but am now a statesman out of a job and without visible means of support. Unfortunately I am too heavy for light work and too light for heavy work, and unless you hit the civil service a swipe in the solar plexus and come to my relief I am afraid I shall perish.

I am in many respects especially entitled to recognition by your administration. I was born several years ago while quite young, read law part of a while, and have practiced occasionally. I am now the only surviving private of the Confederate Army. Since our flag went down in gloom at Appomattox I have suffered constantly. I have never been married, but have had yellow fever, have been drowned, burned alive, blown up at sea, swallowed by a shark, and served as Republican County Chairman during the campaign of 1896.

If you will call at my office I will confer with you on the problems confronting your Administration, or I am willing to correspond with regularly. Always enclose stamp for reply. If you need me in Washington send ticket, and I will come at once.

Your Administration will be a failure unless I get "something equally as good."

Very truly yours,
Frank Wilson.

The sun has a spot on it which can be observed for an indefinite length of time by means of a smoked glass. A few weeks ago some astronomers said in more or less sensational journals that the sun was about to give birth to a new world that was bound to either destroy the earth or affect it in some fearful manner. They maintained that when the glowing mass passed near the earth it would burn it to a cinder. Still people persisted in saving up money for old age and making arrangements for making both ends meet, rather than for meeting the end. The new world has turned out to be a sunspot 150,000 miles in diameter. Through the most powerful telescopes it appears a dark swirling mass which spreads with great rapidity. It is the greatest seen on the sun since 1892. The effect on the weather is beneficial. It will make the winter more endurable and we are not apt to suffer from any great extremes of temperature during the sun-spot season.

The Use of the Tooth-Brush.

"It is but a little thing," says The Hospital, "yet on its proper use depends much of the happiness of modern man. Why civilized teeth should be so rotton is a question which has often been debated, and probably the true answer is more complex than one would think. Many good mothers are content to put all toothache down to lollypops; but that sugar in itself is not responsible for bad teeth is proved by the splendid ivories often possessed by negroes who practically live upon the sugar cane, and thrive upon it, too, during the whole of the season when it is in maturity. Dental decay is common enough, however, among negroes in towns, and it seems clear that the caries of the teeth, which is so common among most civilized races, is due not to any particular article of diet so much as to digestive and nutritive changes imposed upon us by our mode of life, and to some extent by the fact that by hook or by crook we do somehow manage to live, notwithstanding our bad teeth; whereas, in a state of nature, the toothless man soon dies. Recognizing, then, that until the time arrives when some great social reformer either mends or ends our present social conditions, our teeth will tend to rot, and that, whatever the predisposing causes, the final act in the production of caries is the lodgment of microbes on and around the teeth, we see that for long to come the tooth-brush will be a necessity if the health is to be maintained. It is only by the frequent use of this little instrument that those minute accumulations can be removed which are at the root of the mischief. A few elementary lessons in bacteriology would, we fancy, greatly startle many people, and certainly would show them the futility of trusting to one scrub a day. The fact is, that if people, instead of looking at the tooth-brush from an esthetic point of view, and scrubbing away with tooth-powders (!) to make their front teeth white, would regard it merely as an aid to cleanliness, they would see that the time to use it is after meals and at night, not just in the morning only, when the debris left from the day before has been fermenting and brewing acid all night through. They would all see how inefficient an instrument the conventional tooth-brush is unless it is used with considerable judgment. One of the secondary advantages of spending a good deal of money on dentistry is that at least one learns the value of one's teeth. By the time we have got them dotted over with gold stoppings and gold crowns we learn to take care of them, even altho that may involve the trouble of cleaning them more than once a day and being perhaps more than one brush for the purpose.

"An exchange reports," says Electricity, "that in a recent examination that was made of some 'electric belts' sold by a street fakir it was found that beneath a strip of gauze was a layer of dry mustard. When the wearer perspired a little the mustard was moistened and set up a burning sensation, and the deluded victim believed a current of electricity was passing through him."

That there is no honesty rising superior to business avarice even in this world-cursed age appears from the experience of a Topeka operating man. He wrote to a cigarette company that he had sorted the pictures in 1,200 packages of cigarettes which he had smoked, and asked what price the company would offer for them. His reward an answer saying that the company would give him a carton of his own smoke as many years.

POSTAL SAVINGS BANKS.

The question of postal savings banks, agitated so extensively this year, is one of real interest to country people. We have endeavored to gather some facts in relation to the matter for the information of those of our readers who may not have read up on the question. If a bill is passed by the present congress, there will most likely be at least three postal-banks established in this county. At the two money order offices, Academy and Huntersville, and at Marlinton, which is not a money-order office, but which pays a larger revenue than either of the other; but which, by reason of neglect has never been made a money-order office.

There are pending in Congress three bills, all on practically the same lines, seeking the establishment of postal savings banks. One was prepared by Senator Marion Butler, of North Carolina; one by the Chicago Record, which has flooded the country with literature on the subject; and one by banker Bell, of St. Louis.

The Postmaster General has been investigating the matter, and in his annual message has strongly indorsed the proposition. The system has been in existence in other countries for many years. It was established in Great Britain in 1861; France in 1882; Austria in 1883; Canada, 1868; Italy, 1876; Belgium, 1870; Sweden, 1884; Netherlands, 1881; Sandwich Islands, 1886. It is needless to say that it has worked admirably.

The object is to cultivate the habit of saving. It is almost a national trait that the American can make money but cannot save it. On the other hand, there is a class of people who save hundreds of dollars by hoarding it in their houses. This is dead money, as it remains out of circulation, and most of them if they had the government for security would deposit it and it would draw interest. The postal department has ascertained that thousands of people when they have money on hand will go to a money-order office and buy a money order payable to themselves and keep it sometimes for years, in order that it may be safe. They not only lose all interest, but actually pay for the privilege of having the government use their money.

The bills provide for a rate of 2 to 2½ per cent. on deposits. One of the most serious objections which have been raised by those opposed to the bill is that the government could not use to advantage the immense amount of money which would accrue. This has been successfully answered by those pushing the measure, that the government pays more rent for postal cars and buildings than would pay interest to all depositors. And besides this the national debt could be held in a few years by the people of small savings, in the manner that the national debt of France was conveyed to the people by means of the postal savings bank. There would be no more combinations to cause distrust over the sale of United States bonds.

The People's Party has always advocated postal saving banks, but as it comes up in Congress this session it is not a party measure. Bankers do not oppose the measure, as a rule, for it will tend to educate the people as to the convenience and usefulness of banks.

The United States has proved its stability as a nation, in spite of W. T. Stead's lies in his new book, "Despising Democracy"; and the advocates of these bills point out that the opposition with the government will ever be against revolutionary movements to overthrow the government, and add strength and stability to the nation.

William Fuller, a farmer, dropped dead on the street in Lewisburg, last Friday. Five minutes before his death he said: "I have worked hard for thirty years and am now going to enjoy myself." It is a parallel case to the man who said: "Soul, take thine ease."

RAILROAD TALK.

We can never be happy over railroads. We have been hungering and thirsting for a railroad for years, and now that one is to be built, the engineering corps have surveyed two routes and the people of the county are about to fall out over which line shall be built. Knowing that it is a circumstance over which we have no control, we should all be content to take the goods the gods provide.

Of the two routes the longer is that which runs to the Greenbrier River at Marlinton and thence up the banks of that stream to the forks. The distance from White Sulphur is 82 miles. The other diverges from this route at Driscol and goes up Knapp's Creek and across the country to the river at Sitlington's Creek. This line would be 71 miles long. Those interested in the short line, mainly county land owners, were very confident that Marlinton would miss the road after all, until this week. The newspapers report that the road will be eighty miles long, since the first meeting of the stock holders, and and if this be true the Marlinton route has been selected.

A railroad built across the eastern section of the county would not develop the county to anything like the extent a road up the Greenbrier would. For instance, the Levels, the richest farming section of Pocahontas, if not of the State, would continue to go to the depot at Ronceverte, on the main line of the Chesapeake and Ohio, instead of using a depot at Driscol. With a railroad depot in ten miles at Marlinton "Egypt" would increase her crops of grain threefold. The quarries of marble, the finest in the United States, could be developed. Then take the Elk country. It has been called the land of milk and honey until the expression is trite. A railroad at Driscol could not take her custom away from the West Virginia Central, at Beverly.

On the other hand, the people living on the shorter line would none of them be over ten miles from a railroad depot if the longer line were built. There is no coal east of Greenbrier River, and the iron deposits will be traversed before the routes diverge.

It is thought that the Greenbrier River Lumber Company owns a controlling interest in the stock of the Greenbrier Railway Company. Their lands lie on the Greenbrier River from Marlinton to the Forks. Anyone who has studied the situation of their holdings in this county, and those of Colonel McGraw, know that on the Marlinton route from the town of Huntersville to the forks of the river, a distance of nearly fifty miles, that the bed of the road will be on their lands. This refers to people who have no use for lands in this county unless there is a railroad here to make the land worth paying taxes on.

There is no rivalry between the towns of Huntersville and Marlinton in this matter, for which we may be truly thankful. If one misses the railroad the other will not, and for once we are fighting for the same thing.

Another gratifying circumstance is that this company does not seem at all disposed to skin the county of Pocahontas out of a subscription of $50,000. The stock in the road must evidently be worth having, or else the directors do not believe in making themselves cheap enough to ask for public aid.

Pocahontas with sixty miles of railroad will be a different county from what it is now. It will blossom like a rose, and when the companies and corporations take the timber away, we will see a healthy farming class peopling the county and making this one of the most important districts of the State.

Hawaii Calls Time.

The Hawaiian protest before the Federal Senate against the annexation of Hawaii to the United States starts out as follows:

"PALAPALA HOOPIKUE HOOHUIAINA

"I Ka Moo Mahalonia William McKinney, Presidena, a me ka aha Senate, o Amerika Hoopuia.

"No ka Mahola; No ka pono o waiwai ahi imua o ka Aha Senate o Amerika Hoopuia ke Kalaiaina no ka Hawaii nei o Amerika Hoopuia i hoikeia, aole no nonoiau na kou kanaka iloko o Dekembelo. M. H. 1897, aole o ka Mo...ro

That certainly looks as if it ought to be effective.—Richmond Dispatch.

SALE OF REAL ESTATE FOR TAXES.

Notice is hereby given that the following described tracts or lots of land in the County of Pocahontas, weich are delinquent for the non-payment of taxes for the years 1895 and 1896, will be offered for sale by the undersigned Sheriff, at public auction, at the front door of the Court-house of said county, between the hours of ten in the morning and four in the afternoon, on Tuesday, the 4th day of January, 1898. Each tract or lot, or so much thereof as may be necessary, will be sold for so much cash as is sufficient to satisfy the amount due thereon, as set forth in the following table:

NAMES OF PERSONS CHARGED WITH TAXES.	QUANTITY OF LAND.	LOCAL DESCRIPTION.	All publication, commissions and fee.	All Sheriff's costs, interest, costs and fee.	Total amount of taxes, interest, costs and fee.

PERSONAL MENTION.

W. A. Bratton left Tuesday to spend Christmas at Marshall, Va.

S. B. Scott, Jr., made a trip to Lewisburg this week.

Miss Sallie Yeager, of the Lewisburg Female Institute, will spend the holidays at home.

James Rock has rented the Swago Mill and is doing satisfactory work for his patrons.

Mrs Sarah J. McNeill, wife of Johnathan McNeill, near Buckeye, is much afflicted by a cancerous affection on her left hand.

J. W. Beard & Bro. is the style of the firm which succeeds Sydenstricker & Beard in the machinery business at Academy. The new firm is composed of J. W. Beard and G. Cameron Beard.

George Overholt, lately of Buckeye, now living in Missouri, a public school teacher, was bereaved of his wife, a few weeks since, leaving two little children motherless. Mrs Mollie Overholt was a daughter of Mrs Sally Hill on Hill Creek.

Flew the Track.

The Buckeye football team will not accommodate Marlinton with a game on Christmas day, much to the disgust of Marlinton sportsmen; but promise to play later in the winter.

Involuntary Manslaughter.

The famous trial of Col. Robert W. Eastham for killing Frank W. Thomson, which has been in progress in Tucker county for weeks, resulted in a verdict of involuntary manslaughter, which under the law is a misdemeanor. The verdict is a triumph for the defense.

The evidence for the State showed that it was a clear case of murder with malice afore-thought. The defense produced evidence equally as positive to show that Eastham only fired after he had been shot twice by Thomson. Eastham killed his man by shooting from his coat pocket. The killing was the result of a long feud. Both men were interested in the lumber business.

Greenbrier Railway Company.

The Greenbrier Railway Company held a meeting at Huntington, last Thursday, and elected the following officers: President, R. C. Simms, Huntington; vice-president, Decatur Axtell, Richmond; secretary, C. E. Welford, Richmond; auditor, L. F. Sullivan, Richmond; treasurer, C. E. Potts, Richmond; attorney, F. B. Enslow, Huntington.

The Baltimore Sun says: The new line is to be eighty miles in length, and will penetrate coal fields in Greenbrier and Pocahontas counties, connection being made with the Chesapeake & Ohio at the White Sulphur. The route has been surveyed and the road will be pushed thro to completion with the earliest date possible. It will be the most important feeder on the line of the Chesapeake and Ohio.

Morgan Hanged.

The Jackson county murderer was hanged at Ripley, last Thursday, in the presence of 10,000 people. It seems to have been a gala day for the old town. Woman stenographer, who had taken down the evidence, stood on the platform and saw him hanged. The scaffold was built on an Indian mound in an open field. There was a procession of carriages, bearing the prisoner, officers, jury and reporters. As they neared the scaffold they sang, "Come let us join our friends above," a most wonderfully unappropriate hymn for the occasion.

The crime for which he was executed was his killing the Green family, to rob the house. His father was condemned to death. He escaped and was shot in Nicholas county by an officer.

The New York Sun had a reporter there who must have been a very silly man. He states that the sheriff made all haste to hang the man before the afternoon train came in, for fear that the Governor would grant him a pardon. He was astonished that the Jackson county farmers carried so few guns.

Death of Hon E. B. Knight.

Hon E. B. Knight, one of the most notable men in the State, and a leading lawyer of the Charleston bar, died at his home in Charleston, December 16. He was a native of New England, being born in New Hampshire in 1804. He entered the ministry but took his degree at Dartmouth College. He remained in New England for some time in New England. He has always been a Democrat, but has persistently refused to become a candidate for office. He was a member of the constitutional convention of 1872. He has appeared at the bar of Pocahontas county, and was one of the counsel in the case of Barrett versus McAllister tried in our town to some years ago. E. B. Knight of Brown, Jackson & Knight, and Hal Knight, his two sons, have been in Pocahontas often on circuit court duty, and have many friends here who are genuinely sorry to hear of their father's death.

Mr Dickson Dead at Kanawha.

Dickson Bell is the old name of a Greenwood county farmer. He married a negro woman from Dudley's negro row here. Dudley was Bell's master. Kanawha City Times.

YELK.

John Slanker has gone to Davis to work in the lumber camps.

Sheldon Hannah is building a barn which he views by day and works on by night.

George Sharp's sale was largely attended. The auctioneer was so blown that he has been complaining ever since.

The shoot match was a success. Twenty persons attended and they all claim to have won five turkeys each.

The Literary Society will deliver its last meeting Thursday, December 30. All are invited, as a specially good program has been provided.

Thomas Beale's family has scarlet fever. One of them contracted it while at the Linwood school. George Hoover's family having a chance were stopped from attending the Slaty Fork school for a few days.

Dennis Williams says to "Hoot-Owl Ike":

"It is better to be where no one is nigh,
Where incipient whiskers can grow on the sly,
Than in literary labors, lowly to stoop,
In reporting the news from some lone chicken-coop."

D. A. Varner is hauling a load from Beverly this week for L. D. Sharp. BILL BURLEY.

Scrap at a School-House.

Brown L. Galford and William M. Adkinson fought to a finish at the Hevner school-house on Swago, Friday morning, James Warwick teacher. The men are trustees of the school, and the trouble grew out of a fight between the sons of the two men.

The teacher punished one boy, Galford's son, for fighting, while the other managed to escape. Galford summoned Adkinson to appear at the school and see that justice was done, and claims that he responded with very abusive language, which he let pass for the time being.

Being met at the school-house the charge was proven by the scholars, and the Adkinson boy soundly whipped by the master.

The trouble was now settled, apparently; but now Galford claimed satisfaction from Adkinson for the insults he had heaped upon him, and in the rude way known to his class invited him to go with him to a neighboring 'hacking' for a bout. Adkinson demurred, but Galford insisted and became abusive, very strangely as he is much the smaller man.

Galford employed in fighting tactics and threw his man heavily, pounding him in the face, displacing his nose and shedding much gore. But not being able to hold him down, this manœuvre was repeated two or three times. Galford having much the better of the argument.

Galford confessed judgment before Squire Bird, Tuesday, to a charge of assault and battery.

The Credit Money of the Country.

The cost and inconvenience of transporting money from one part of the country to another was aptly illustrated at Topeka the other day when it became necessary for the Rock Island Railroad to send $257,000 to Chicago. If the money had been sent in greenbacks or gold the express charges would have been $321.50; if in silver, $577.75; but the railroad people rejected all three and made the transfer with a bank draft at a cost of only 2 cents. The credit money is the real money of the country, add laws to strengthen it are wiser than than laws in relation to the coinage of any metal.—Kansas City Journal.

OBITUARY.

MISS MAGGIE ERVINE.

Died, at the home of Mrs S. B. Hannah, Miss Maggie Ervine, daughter of Mrs Polly Ervine and the late Benj. F. Ervine, in the forty second year of her age.

Her great kindness and unselfishness won for her a host of friends, many of whom ministered to her during the two weeks of suffering she was called to endure. Her death was caused by acute rheumatism.

She was an exemplary member of the Presbyterian church. She leaves a widowed mother, a sister, and a brother to mourn her death. For eighteen years she had been a loved and trusted member of Mrs Hannah's family, and they mourn her death as one of their own.

Ah, once again on a starry eve,
The angel death has come
To summon in quiet gentle tones,
Another wanderer home.

Another careworn child of God,
Weary faithful one!
Rest, oh pilgrim, thy tired feet!
Thine earthly race is done.

Fold on her bosom the dear thin hands
Their work is over now,
Think of the harp and the golden
On the ransomed spirit brow. crown

Oh think that her pain is forever past
And her sins are washed away
No sickness, pain or death is there
"The former things are passed away."

A FRIEND.

Please Take Notice.

All persons knowing themselves to be indebted to the old firm of Moore & Hannah, Edray, W. Va., will please settle their notes and accounts by January 1, 1898. All notes and accounts not paid by the above date will be placed in the hands of an officer for collection.

MOORE & HANNAH.

Per S. B. Moore.

Also all parties indebted to me will please pay up between this time and January 1, 1898. Respectfully, S. B. MOORE.

HOW TO FIND OUT.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What to Do.

The e is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root, the great kidney remedy fulfils every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold urin and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following the use liquor, beer, or wine and over comes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists, price fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet both sent free by mail. Mention The Pocahontas Times and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root guarantees the genuineness of this offer.

TIRES THAT LEAK.

The Morgan & Wright single-tube quick-repair tire must be regarded as a distinct improvement in bicycle tire construction. It has the following advantages:

While punctures in it can be repaired with plugs, or semi-liquid injections, as well as in any other single-tube tire, it can be permanently repaired by using the quick-repair strip inside the tire. See cut No. 1.

No. 1.

By injecting M. & W. quick-repair cement through the puncture, and then pressing down on the tire with the thumb, as in cut No. 2, the repair

No. 2.

No. 3.

strip inside is picked up by the cement, thus closing the puncture, as in cut No. 3.

The Morgan & Wright single-tube quick-repair tire is guaranteed not porous. This is on account of the way in which it is made. Nearly every rider has heard of tires that "leak like a sieve."

Many tires rot, because water gets into the fabric between the two layers of rubber. The Morgan & Wright fabric is proof against moisture.

Everybody knows how comfortable Morgan & Wright tires are, and yet how seldom they puncture. This is due to the fabric.

Ask any bicycle dealer whether other tires last as long as Morgan & Wright tires. Ask, also, what the Morgan & Wright guarantee means. Morgan & Wright tires are repaired free of charge, at the factory in Chicago or at any of the Morgan & Wright free repair shops, located in the principal cities.

N. B.—When you have a puncture, get right off. Riding a tire flat, when it has a hole or nail in it, may damage it considerably.

What Makes the Man?

A truthful soul, a loving mind,
Full of affection for its kind;
A helper of the human race;
A soul of beauty and of grace;
A spirit firm, erect, and free,
That never basely bends the knee
That will not bear a feathers weight
Of slavery's chain, for small or great;
That truly speaks of God within
And never makes a league with sin;
That snaps the fetters despots make
And loves the truth for its own sake;
That trembles at no tyrant's nod
A soul that fears no one but God
And calmly smiles at curse and ban—
That is the soul that makes the man. —Selected.

He Blundered Twice.

When a man stumbles into a bog-hole in a swamp, and makes a sudden, violent leap to get out, it is an even chance that he will land in a second hole worse than the first. Something like that was the experience of a "swell" whose mishap is related by an exchange:

Just before a recent dinner given in honor of a colonial magnate, a young swell, whose chief claim to distinction seemed to be the height of his collar and an eyeglass, addressing a stranger, said:

"Beastly nuisance, isn't it; spoke to that fellah over there,—took him for a gentleman,—and found he had a ribbon on his coat. Some blooming head-waiter, I suppose?"

"Oh no," replied the other, 'that is Blank, the guest of the evening.'

"Dash it all, now, is it?" said the swell. "Look here, old fellow! As you know everybody would you mind sitting next me at dinner and telling me who every one is?"

"Should like to very much," replied the other man, "but you see I cannot. I'm the 'blooming head-waiter!'"

An Excellent Hair-oil.—Glycerine possesses in a high degree the property of extracting the fragrance from flowers. Besides, it has proved to be excellent for the skin as well as for the hair, so that it even puts the finest olive oil in the shade. If we take a vessel of best glycerine, putting into it lilacs, faded hyacinths, narcissus, lilies of the valley, mignonettes, violets, roses, lime flowers, jasmine flowers, etc., and leave them in it for three weeks, they will have given off their whole fragrance to the glycerine when taken out. In this manner a hair oil is obtained that cannot be surpassed by any Parisian "perfumeur." Since glycerine can be mixed with water in any proportion (in contradistinction to the fat oils), a few drops may be poured into the water used for washing, in order to perfume it delicately.—Scientific American.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. $600 Worth of Cats in One Shipment for Mr John Wanamaker.

Perhaps the largest and most valuable shipment of cats which was ever made from Maine has been sent out from the American Express office of this city to the well know merchant of Philadelphia, John Wanamaker. The sale was made by F. D. Nudd, of Waterville, and it is stated that it amounted to $600 in clean cash, as there were 100 tabbies and the most beautiful ones it has ever been the reporters privilage to gaze upon. There were black and whites, tiger stripes, yellow and whites, the Angora white which has pink eyes, the jet black, and, in fact, the blue and white, for thus alone can the Maltese of brilliant color be described. The cats were all finely feathered, with feather duster-like tails which would excite the admiration of our city cousins who are said to pay from $10 to $25 for the pets, which would make the retail price of the shipment at least $1,200. The temporary home of the tabbies consisted of casket boxes divided in sections and openly crated upon the top. The American Express Company's agents along the route will furnish lunches and drinkables, so that this large family will probably arrive in health and safety, as all seemed very contented when leaving here.—Lewiston (Me.) Journal.

Wheeling Intelligencer

The INTELLIGENCER is in its forty sixth year, and during the whole period of its existence it has been carrying information to the homes of the State. The year 1898 will be a history-making year scarcely less in importance than those which have preceded it. The first regular session of the Fifty-fifth Congress will be holden, as it will witness the debates and action on vital questions that affect the people—the proposed reforms in our monetary system, the Cuban question, Hawaiian annexation, and many foreign relations now pending.

The year will be important politically. A new State legislature and a new Congress will be elected. The campaign will involve vital State and National issues, and in West Virginia the choice of a U. S. Senator.

Puny Children

Who would prescribe only tonics and bitters for a weak, puny child? Its muscles and nerves are so thoroughly exhausted that they cannot be whipped into activity. The child needs food; a blood-making, nerve-strengthening and muscle-building food.

Scott's Emulsion

of Cod-Liver Oil is all of this, and you still have a tonic in the hypophosphites of lime and soda to act with the food. For thin and delicate children there is no remedy superior to it in the world. It means growth, strength, plumpness and comfort to them. Be sure you get SCOTT'S Emulsion.

SPRING-TOOTH HARROW.

The frames are made in one piece of steel angle-bar, and formed to withstand all strain without buckling or warping. The teeth in this harrow are so spaced that they will not trail each other. Pulverizing the ground thoroughly. The steel pipe teeth bars are mounted in malleable boxes secured to the frame, and will not bend or break. The peculiar shape of the teeth cutting two thirds about the bar gives the greatest amount of spring possible without straining the bolts, and because of their shape and fastening are stronger than used on any other harrow. By the levers the depth of work can be regulated while the harrow is in motion. The draft is steady and direct as the harrow has no side motion.

ALL THESE FEATURES COMBINED HAVE MADE THE OSBORNE CELEBRATED.

Biographic Notes.

The Friel relationship trace their ancestry to one Daniel O'Friel, a native of Ireland, who probably came to Augusta county with the Lewises. He settled on Middle River, between Churchville and Staunton. His children were James, William, Jeremiah, and Anna O'Friel.

James O'Friel went to Maryland Eastern shore. William O'Friel settled in what is now Highland county, on property now owned by Mathew M. Morrison, near McDowell. Anna became a Mrs Crawford, and lived in Augusta county.

Daniel O'Friel seems to have been a person of considerable means. He sold his property for Continental money, with a view of settling in Kentucky. The money being repudiated, he was unable to carry out his plans.

Upon Jacob Warwick's invitation, Jeremiah O'Friel came to Clover Lick. Mr Warwick gave him land on Carrich Ridge, now owned by John R. Poage. This land was exchanged with Sampson Mathews, senior, for lands on Greenbrier now occupied in part by his descendants, near the mouth of Thorny Creek.

Jeremiah Friel's wife was Anna Brown, daughter of Joseph Brown, who was living at the time of his daughter's marriage on the Greenbrier, east side, about opposite the mouth of Clover Creek. Their first home was on Carrich Ridge, then afterwards they lived on the river. Their children were Joseph, Daniel, Josiah, John, Catherine, Hannah, Ellen, Mary, and Jennie.

Joseph Friel married Jane McCollam and lived on the homestead. He served on the first Pocahontas grand jury. He children were Jeremiah, William, George Washington, a Confederate soldier 31st Virginia Regiment, and died at Stribling Springs in 1862; Hannah, and Mary Ann, now Mrs Joseph Dilley.

Daniel Friel married Anna Casebolt, daughter of Henry Casebolt, on the Greenbrier, near Stamping Creek, and settled on a section of the homestead. Of their children, Andrew Harvey married Anna Johnson, went first to Iowa, thence to Tennessee, where he died in 1871. Barbara became Mrs Lindsey Sharp; Sabina Martha became Mrs Stephen Barnett. Montgomery Allan was a Confederate soldier attached to the 31st Virginia infantry. He married Rachel Christine, daughter of Rev James E. Moore, and lives near Huntersville.

Josiah Freel married Mary Sharp and lived on a part of the John Sharp homestead. Their children were Ann; Sally, Mrs James E. Johnson; Mrs Nancy Grimes, near Mill Point; Ellen, Mrs George Slaton; John, and Israel, who lives on Droop Mountain.

John Friel married Jennie, daughter of Josiah Brown, and settled on a section of the Brown homestead near Indian Draft. In reference to their children the following particulars are in hand: James Twyman lives on the Dry Branch of Elk, was a Confederate prisoner for three years. Josiah Franklin, Confederate soldier, 31st Virginia Regiment, died in battle at Port Republic. William Thomas, Confederate soldier 19th Virginia cavalry, survived the war and was drowned in Valley River, near Elkwater, in 1879.

Mary Jane became Mrs James Gibson, on Elk, and died recently. Mary Frances was the first wife of Sheldon Hannah, on Elk. John Friel was a Confederate soldier, the exempt by age from military service, and died in the army on Allegheny Mountain, December, 1864, shortly after the battle.

Catherine, daughter of Jeremiah Friel the pioneer, was married to James Sharp and lived on Elk Mountain. In reference to her children these interesting particulars are available. Jeremiah Sharp was a Union soldier and died in the service. John Sharp was a Confederate soldier, 62d Regiment and died in battle at Beverly, in 1864. Josiah Sharp was a Confederate attached to the Greenbrier Cavalry. He survived the war, married a Miss Dotson, and lives near Falling Spring.

Daniel Sharp was a Confederate soldier, 62d Regiment. He was captured on Elk, and was killed near Tolley's, two miles below Mingo, in an effort to rescue the prisoners.

Morris Sharp, Confederate veteran, 62d Regiment, was wounded at Winchester so severely that the surgeons decided on amputating his left arm. He emphatically and persistently refused to submit to the operation. The wound healed and he now lives, and when last heard from was in charge of Henry Clark's mill, on Spring Creek.

In reference to the 11 neer's daughters, we learn that Hannah Friel was married to Jefferson Casebolt, and lived on the Casebolt homestead near Stemping Creek. Her daughter, Martha Casebolt, became Mrs John A. Alderman, and Barbara Ann was married to John Donahue and lived in the Levels. Jennie became Mrs Tharp and went west. Ellen Friel became Mrs John Dilley, and lived near Edray. Mary Friel became Mrs William Dilley, and settled in Huntersville.

The compiler in his attempt to illustrate the history of Jeremiah Friel's family has been mainly aided by his grand-son, M. A. Friel To him the persons interested in this paper owe special thanks for the pains he has taken to collect authentic information. It may be interesting to say about him that he stands on the old list as the first subscriber to The Times, and he claims to have owned and used the first kerosene lamp in Pocahontas, in 1863.

Jeremiah Friel was in the expedition to Point Pleasant, 1774, in the same company with Jacob Warwick. He was one of the soldiers detailed under Jacob Warwick to provide a supply of meat for the contemplated advance on the Indian towns in Ohio, on the morning of that memorable battle, and was at work in the slaughterpens when the battle was going on. The hunters and butchers were rallied by Jacob Warwick and crossed over. At this the enemy mysteriously ceased firing and began to withdraw across the Ohio River, supposing that Colonel Christian had arrived with reinforcements. The importance of that action by Jacob Warwick and his men need not be dwelt upon here.

Jeremiah Friel and his sons were noted reapers. At that day there was co-operative harvesting. Squire Robert Gay's wheat was usually the first to ripen. Beginning there, all hands from James Bridger's down would come hallooing and singing, waving their sickles, eager to see who would cut the first sheaf and make the best record. Then from field to field up the river the harvesters would progress until Bridger's harvest was reaped; thence to William and John Sharp's and Josiah Brown's, and sometimes to Robert Moore's at Edray. Then the sickle club would disband with great hilarity for their respective homes.

Late one evening at Friel's the harvesters quit without shocking up all that had been reaped and bound. Jeremiah Friel in his most pleasant tones observed: "Boys, it is so late and you are so tired I believe we will let these sheaves rest till morning." But after supper he noticed it lightning extensively in the west and south. He roused up all hands out of their beds, provided poor trashers, and away all went in search of the reapers in the field and finished up the shocking just before midnight. This harvest scene must have been strangely picturesque. Before day it was raining torrents attended with terrific thunder and lightning

He was a jovial companion for his sons and encouraged them from infancy in the favorite pastimes of the period, running foot-races, wrestling, and boxing. A favorite amusement when raining and the boys had to stay in-doors, was a mode of swinging called "weighing bacon." A loop was fixed at one end of a rope or trace-chain, the other end was thrown over a beam or joist. The feet were placed in the loop and then seizing the other end with the hands, and they would swing. It requires practice and nice balancing to swing, altho it looks very easy to one that has never tried it. The Friel boys excelled in "swinging bacon." We would not advise any of our readers to try it without providing a big pile of straw to fall on.

When the Virginia troops were on the march to Yorktown, Daniel O'Friel's team was pressed and Jeremiah was detailed to take charge of it. This was about the most of the service he was called on to render during the Revolutionary war.

Several years before his death he was riding through the woods one dark night. The horse passed under a tree with wide-spreading limbs and Mr Friel was so severely injured in his spine that he was virtually helpless the remainder of his life. He died in 1819, sincerely lamented by his relatives, neighbors, and friends.

Oldest Town in the State.

Lewisburg is the oldest town in the State, and from its many dark blue limestone buildings it looks as if it might defy many more centuries of time. It is the same today as it was before the war, and it looks as if it may be the same henceforth and forever. It has the same sleepy look as the year of 1 bustle and animation, the same set of hotel loungers who smoke and recount deeds of former times, the same shambling old negroes with their cabins, cabbage patches, and pig styes, so familiar to the residents farther south. It was founded by William Lewis, one of the famous Lewis family, and the first fort was called Fort Donnelly.

It was from here that General Andrew Lewis, and his brother Colonel Charles Lewis marched overland to the mouth of the Kanawha river with the army of Virginia, cutting down the chief Cornstalk and scattering his braves. It was only a few miles from here that the famous "Greenbrier Massacre" occurred. It was here that one of the hottest little fights of the war occurred, and not far away the battle of Droop Mountain took place. It is here that the finest old church in both states stands—the Old Stone Church, built one hundred and one years ago by the Presbyterians, of that near to be destroyed material, blue limestone, and today it is as good as if a century of time had not whirled off its cycles over its old stone tower.

In Gol's half acre which lies back of this grand old kirk, lie buried the remains of many a famous man—men famous in war and famous in peace; famous as soldiers of 1776 and as soldiers of the late war; famous as statesmen preachers and citizens. Selected.

ANTHONY, strange to say, is defined by Webster as a word rarely used. We have noticed it several times lately in connection with Cuba. It comes from two Greek words, equivalent to self and law. It is defined as the power or right of self government, whether in a city which abuts its own magistrates and makes its own laws, or in an individual who lives according to his own will.

Notions.

In discussing the custom of giving presents at Christmas, the talk wandered to the hard lines of those mulierose young gentlemen who have gone to vast expense to get a nice Christmas gift for the one who is dearer to them than anyone else, and having gotton it, not to have it accepted by the lady of their choice. The group of men were favored with an incident of college life by one of their number concerning a gift that a student had sent to his sweetheart but was stopped in transitu.

The student, whose name sounded like Allison, was from Florida. At Christmas his folks sent him a box of ripe Florida oranges, red inside, and as much superior to the oranges of commerce as a ripe apple is to a green apple. He was sick when the box came, but with the unselfishness that belongs to a boy of his age when the girls are concerned, he got his room-mate Addison, from Texas, to deliver them for him. The Texas boy started evidently with the intent to carry them, but on his way from the building he passed a room of students he knew very well. Fell among thieves, as it were. There the devil seized his opportunity and suggested a scheme which was immediately carried out.

With the aid of the gang he produced a note, imitating feminine hand-writing from a sample in his possession, thanking the Florida youth very sweetly, and having satisfied themselves that it would pass muster, destroyed the evidences of their crime by eating the oranges. As the narrator spoke it was plain to be seen he had not forgotten how those oranges tasted

The note was given to a colored boy and promptly delivered to Allison. For several weeks things went well. Allison recovered and went to call on his sweetheart. She did not say oranges during the evening. After a while he mentioned the subject himself. She told him she had never received any oranges from him. He produced the receipt. It was in his inside vest-pocket next to his heart. She promptly repudiated the paper.

Nothing would satisfy the youth but blood. After a while it was seen that he was in earnest and that he wanted a meeting to the death. His Southern blood knew but one way to wipe out the insult. A duel was arranged. Blank cartridges were procured. The Florida man was stationed eight paces from the man from Texas. He supposed it was a real duel. He was pale and trembling. Addison was as calm and collected as a Texas man should be under fire. He plunked away as steadily as if he was firing for practice.

After a few shots were exchanged the condition of the arms was discovered by the Florida youth. Then he wanted the blood of every body. It was a stain on his escutcheon. He carried on about it for a while, but the most sublime passions cannot stand ridicule. The particulars leaked out, and he was teased so much about it all that he shortly after left college and never returned.

An original idea struck an advertiser in Frankfort, Illinois the other day. He took a lump of coal and dipped it into gold sizing. He labeled it "Nugget, from Klondike value $1,000,000," and displayed it in his store-window. Great crowds collected around it and it created great interest. He thought he had struck the richest advertising scheme of the century. The next morning he found that the window had been smashed, and the nugget stolen. It cost him ninety dollars to have his plate glass front repaired. He is not as well satisfied as he was. He hailed the people too well.

The study of cattle as educators and to witnesses that they may testify "under oath" is fascinating. In one county there is a little Holstein bull with a piece of string that was once red that has been used since the forties. This book has been sorely abused. In nearly every warmly contested case witnesses have kissed this well-worn book and sworn to tell the truth, and have gone on the stand and told contradictory tales of the same occurrences. The law binds the witness to tell the truth, and moreover to make doubly sure it calls upon his fear of eternal wrath. The form is "So help me God," usually rendered by the benevolent clerk, "So help you God"; in the way of a benediction or prayer that the witness for once may overcome his besetting sin. "I said in my haste, all men are liars."

The authorities say that the form "So help me God," construed means the imprecation "As you shall answer to God at the great day." How flippant is the use of this invocation as it is often administered! Occasionally we see a judge, clerk, justice, or notary who seems to be still impressed with awful solemnity of an oath in spite of the frequency and familiarity of the form. But as a rule the "swearing" is merely formal and administered and made without a thought.

The oath used in profane swearing is of the same character, save that it is unnecessary and irreverent.

There is a provision made for such as have religious scruples against swearing, and they "solemnly affirm," and can then be taken as witnesses. It is necessary that the witness believe in a God. An infidel cannot be a witness. He does not believe in a Supreme Being who is "the rewarder of truth and avenger of falsehood." Thus the poor, benighted heathen might testify, when a fin de siecle exquisite who has outgrown the faith of his fathers, and has provided an other to take its place, would be rejected by the courts.

In many instances the courts are called upon to grant an extraordinary process to suit a witness's faith. A Jew is sworn on the Pentateuch, or on the Old Testament, chasing his oath with "so help me Jehovah." A Mohammedan is sworn on the Koran. A Gentoo by touching the foot of a Brahmin, the priest of his religion. A Brahmin by touching the hand of another such priest. A Chinaman by breaking a saucer, or "with the joss stick burning." The swearing of a Chinaman has been described thus: "On getting into the witness box, he knelt down, and a china saucer filled with salt having been placed in his hand, he struck it against the brass rail in front of the box and broke it. The officer then administered the oath in these words, which were translated into the Chinese language by the interpreter, 'you shall tell the truth and the whole truth; the saucer is cracked, and if you do not tell the truth your soul will be cracked like the saucer.'"

Two negroes of McDowell county swore falsely that they had bought whiskey from a white man, Thomas Wagner. He was convicted and went to jail in Welch. There he used tobacco. The two witnesses have confessed that they committed perjury.

The Blue and the Gray.

Both men and women are apt to feel a little blue, when the gray hairs begin to show. It's a very natural feeling. In the normal condition of things gray hairs belong to advanced age. They have no business whitening the head of man or woman, who has not begun to go down the slope of life. As a matter of fact, the hair turns gray regardless of age, or of life's seasons; sometimes it is whitened by sickness, but more often from lack of care. When the hair fades or turns gray there's no need to resort to hair dyes. The normal color of the hair is restored and retained by the use of

PERSONAL MENTION.

Miss Lucy Poage was at Marlinton last week shopping and visiting friends.

John Gay, of the Leo Military Academy, is at home for the holidays.

The Morgantown students, Lew Yeager and Jim Smith, did not come home for Christmas.

Charles Williams, of Mill Gap, Virginia, passed Marlinton last week on his way to have some milling done at Mill Point.

Dr C. P. Bryan, once a resident of Hillsboro, and lately of Missouri, has opened an office at Roncerverte for the practice of medicine.

Miss Hattie Patterson entertained a select party of friends at dinner Christmas evening. Those present were Misses Maud and Sallie Yeager and Susie Price, and Messrs John Pullins, S. B. Scott, Jr., Frank Anderson and Norman Price.

The Marlinton Cotillion Club had an exceptionally good time at their last meeting on Monday night in honor of the season. Those present were: Misses Mary McLaughlin, Fannie McLaughlin, Grace Ervine, Maud and Sallie Yeager, Hattie, Edith and Lillian Patterson, Lou and Miss Rayborn, Miss Nellie Anderson, chaperone Mrs J. A. Sharp; Messrs E. H. Smith, Walter Yeager, J. D. Pullins, Frank Anderson, S. B. Scott, Jr., N. C. McNeil, J. H. Patterson, Jr., R. K. Burns, Wm. McLaughlin, James Kirkpatrick, J. A. Sharp.

The Stomach Not a Vital Part.

A number of the beliefs of medical science have been exploded by an operation performed September 6 on Anna Landis, a woman of Zurich, 56 years old, by Dr Carl Schlatter, of the University of Zurich, reported in the Medical Record of December 25. The woman had suffered from stomach trouble since her childhood. On examination it was found that there was a large tumor in the stomach. The operator removed the stomach and joined the œsophagus to the first bend in the intestine. Since the operation the patient has improved greatly in health and gained three pounds in weight.

Man in his primitive state, when he lived on raw meat, nuts, roots, and herbs, needed a stomach; but in these days of cooking, food may be thoroughly digested without a stomach.

He bought a big bill of goods from S. J. Boggs on credit. After he had left the merchant got suspicious and had a warrent issued for him. He was followed to the Levels, where it was discovered that he had stolen a horse from J. W. Miller and made good his escape. Miller lives two miles below Academy, on the old road. Description of the horse: Dark bay mare, white strip in face, and white feet. Letters should be addressed, J. W. Miller, Academy, W. Va.

The teasing of wild turkeys seems to be of great interest to sportsmen. A correspondent of the Richmond Dispatch reported the success Miss Pocell Yeager, daughter of P. M. Yeager of Tyler, one Request, had in raising half a dozen wild turkeys the past year. She had caught them while on a fishing expedition last spring. A writer on the staff of "Outing," the leading monthly magazine devoted to sports, noticed the article, and, obtaining photographs and full particulars, has made of it an article for that magazine. The capture of wild turkeys when they are young and raising them to full growth has occupied sorely often of this county, but they invariably return to their native woods. The gobbler does remain longer and are more easily retained than the hens. When they leave for the woods if they are hunted at once they are generally recaptured and killed; but after a time they get to be fully as wild and shy as the rest of their kind. Occasionally a wild turkey joins a flock of tame ones and in the long range kills out all the domestic fowls in the neighborhood.

All the freight that would accrue from the country of the Cherry, Cranberry, and Gauley rivers would have an outlet to the east.

In the last few days there have been rumors flying in the air that a large lumber concern with saw-mills and logging outfits, which has been in operation near Piedmont, will have finished up there, and will move to the mouth of Tea Creek on William's River next spring and go to work at once. Also, that this lumbering business belongs to the American Leather Trust, and that they will put up a tannery there at the same time. It is well known that point can furnish more hemlock bark than any section in the county, probably. The report says further that the Camden railroad will be built that far, at least, next season.

The Gauley Company own an immense splash-dam one mile above the mouth of Tea Creek, and which was erected at a cost of several thousand dollars, but which has proved as far of little value to them. Large works below it could make good use of it.

The impression has prevailed that the Camden System was hostile to the Chesapeake and Ohio, on account of the former being so closely allied to the Baltimore and Ohio. Now it is believed that the Baltimore and Ohio will be controlled by a different set of men who are not antagonistic to the Chesapeake and Ohio, and that a connection is likely to be made between the Baltimore and Ohio and the Chesapeake and Ohio by means of the West Virginia and Pittsburg.

Surveys have been made from the waters of Cherry river to Hall's Creek and Spring Creek, but on both routes the chief engineer has reported that the routes are impracticable for railroad building.

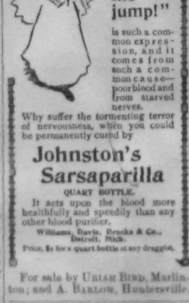
Measure for Measure.



This is a true story of an occurrence in Nicholas county which is told with great relish by one of our Pocahontas merchants. It happened a number of years ago. A very respectable old lady of that county passed by a store one day and left a lot of butter in rolls, telling the merchant to put up the worth of it in coffee. As he was weighing it he attempted to lift one of the rolls with his knife. It would not penetrate the roll, and a closer investigation revealed the fact that there was a large rock in the center of the roll. He care*fully removed it and placed it in* the coffee which he put up for the old lady. The customer did not discover it until she got home. Next day she came back highly indignant.

"You sold me a rock!" said she.

"I bought it of you," replied the merchant.

"But you only paid me twelve and a half cents a pound for my butter, and when you weighed the rock to me I had to pay you sixteen and two-thirds cents, the cost of the coffee," argued the old lady.

"I never buy anything, madam, that I do not try to make a profit on," retorted the merchant; and there the matter rests until this day.

"My, that made me jump!"

is such a common expression, and it comes from such a common cause—poorblood and from starved nerves.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address,

HOW TO FIND OUT.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What to Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy fulfils every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold urin and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following the use liquor, beer, or wine, and ever comes that unpleasant necessity of being obliged to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists, price fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet both sent free by mail. Mention The Pocahontas Times and send your address to Dr Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Tree proprietors guarantee the genuineness of this offer.

Biographic Notes.

Among the persons who have been identified with our county history, the Cochran relationship claim recognition. For more than a hundred years the name has been a familiar one. The Pocahontas Cochrans are the descendants of Thomas Cochran, senior, a native of Ireland, one of three brothers who came over together. One of these brothers settled in Augusta and his descendents are highly respected in that county. Another of these Cochrans went to Kentucky, it is believed.

Thomas Cochran, the subject of this memoir, married a Miss MacKemie, near Parnassus in Augusta county, and settled first at the Rankin place, on the Greenbrier, near the mouth of Locust Creek. Thence he moved to the place now held by Colonel J. W. Ruckman and son Mathews. The relationship is so widely extended that it is only possible to trace his descendants to a degree where the present generation can take up the line and complete it.

By the first marriage there were three daughters and two sons.

One daughter, name not known, became Mrs William Carraway, and lived on Muddy Creek, Greenbrier county.

Nancy, a daughter of the pioneer, became Mrs Masters, and went to Ohio.

Mary, the third daughter, was married to William Auldridge, Sr., whose memoirs have been published in The Times.

John Cochran married Elizabeth (Betsy) James, daughter of David James, senior, at end of Droop Mountain, and settled near Marvin on property recently occupied by Michael Scales. There were four sons and four daughters.

David James Cochran married a Miss Corby, in Augusta county, and went to Clay county, W. Va. His son, William Cochran, represented that county in the legislature a few years since.

Thomas Cochran, son of John Cochran, married Miss Skeene, and lived near Marvin. Their children were Franklin, America, Eliza, and Harriet, now Mrs T. C. Wooddell.

There were two other sons, William and John, about whom we have no information.

As to the daughters, Margaret (Peggy) became Mrs Jacob Shue; Sally became Mrs James Waugh, late of Verdant Valley; Fannie became Mrs John Smith, on Stony Creek; and Elizabeth.

Thomas Cochran, junior, son of the pioneer, married Mary Salisbury, settled on the side of Droop Mountain near Locust, and finally went west. Their children were Gordon, Robert, William, Richard, Dennis, and Sabre,—two daughters and four sons.

Thomas Cochran, the pioneer's second marriage was with Nellie James, daughter of David James, senior, already mentioned. The fruit of this marriage seven sons and three daughters, viz: William, Samuel, Isaac, David, Solomon, James, Jesse, Rebecca, Mary, and Nellie.

Rebecca's first marriage was with William Salisbury, on Droop Mt. By her second marriage she became Mrs John Burner, and lived in Ohio.

Mary was married to William Cochran.

Nellie was married to John Jones, and went to Ohio. Her children were Jane, Eliza, Katie, David, William, and John Jones.

Samuel Cochran went to Ohio.

Isaac Cochran married Jessie Salisbury, daughter of William Salisbury, who lived near where Richard Collison now lives. His children were Elisha, Solomon, Salisbury, Lewis Frost, Jackson, Rowley, Margaret, and Sarah. Two of these sons, Elisha and Solomon, are mentioned in the memoirs of Thomas McNeil, of Swago.

David Cochran, son of Thomas senior, married Sarah Salisbury and lived near Droop Mountain. His children were John, William, Andrew, Biddie, Susan, and Mary. Biddie became Mrs Gabriel Underwood; Susan Mrs Joseph Rodgers, late of Swago; and Nellie was the first wife of the late Anthony Lightner, on Swago.

John Cochran first married Miss Hanna, of Greenbrier; second marriage with Sally Smith.

Andrew Cochran married Miss Rachel Lewis, and lived on Sinking Creek.

Solomon Cochran, of Thomas the pioneer, married Biddie Salisbury. Their children were Sallie, Rebecca, Porter, William, and George. Sallie died in youth; Rebecca became Mrs Bruffey Cochran; William Cochran married Almira Salisbury, in Braxton county, and went to Illinois; George Cochran married Nancy, daughter of John Cochran, and lives at the end of Droop Mountain.

James Cochran married Nancy Hannah, daughter of Dr David Hannah, on the Greenbrier, and lived at the end of Droop. Their family six daughters and four sons David, William, Joseph, James, Elizabeth, who became Mrs Andrew Mealy; Jennie, Mrs William Clendennin, near Hillsboro, recently deceased; Nellie, Mrs Asher Hogsett; Eveline, Mrs Isaac Bull; Mary and Rachel.

Jesse Cochran married Jane James, and settled at the end of Droop on property owned by his son, David J. Cochran. Their children were David James, Thomas, Samuel, Clark, and George Brown.

David married Hannah Duffield, and lives on the homestead.

Thomas settled on the homestead upon his marriage with Nancy Stearns

Clark married Sally Underwood, daughter of Gabriel Underwood, and lives on the James homestead.

George B. married Martha E. Hollingsworth, of Boston, and lives on a section of the homestead.

William Cochran, of Thomas the progenitor, first married Jane Young, near Swago. Her children were Washington and Elizabeth.

Washington Cochran married Phebe Mace, of Mingo, and settled on Stony Creek. Himself, wife, and son John, aged 7, all died during the war.

Elizabeth Cochran became Mrs George Young. Mr Young died in Richmond during the war. His sons William and Washinton live in Iowa. Mrs Young became Mrs Bruffey Cochran, went to Iowa, where she recently died.

Captain William Cochran's second marriage was with Melinda Moore, daughter of the late Aaron Moore, on the Greenbrier. Her children William Cochran, junior, and Catherine, now Mrs Giles Sharp.

Captain Cochran was a busy man of affairs, noted as a skillful blacksmith, and built the first tilt-hammer on Swago. He was Captain of the Stony Creek militia, superintended the construction of the Warm Springs and Huntersville turnpike, and was superintendent of the Lewisburg and Marlin's Bottom road. The Captain also took much interest in church affairs as a prominent layman of the M. P. church.

David James, senior, so frequently mentioned in this paper, was an early settler at the end of Droop, and came from Norfolk, Virginia. He first settled near where Richard Collison lives, moved thence to the Rex Irvine place where he built a mill, one of the stones yet to be seen near the roadside at the "Rocky Turn." He then moved to the place now occupied by George Cochran. The house is yet standing where he died at the age of one hundred and four years.

William Salisbury, a native of England, settled at the Salisbury place, near Locust. The building he erected still remains in a good state of preservation. It was designed for a fort, but was never used as such.

The James and Salisbury families have been virtually absorbed by the Cochrans. The James boys went to Ohio, and the Salisbury men settled in Braxton and other places in West Virginia, and some went finally to Ohio.

The writer in closing this paper would gratefully recognize the assistance of David J. Cochran, Esq, that was so helpful in collecting the particulars, and so cheerfully given by him, altho suffering at the time so severely from rheumatic and other troubles, that seemed to be wearing his useful life away.

W. T. P.

"CROWING HENS."

To the Editor of The Times:—Will you please state through the columns of your paper where in the Bible the term "crowing hen" is found, in case it is in the Bible, and thus settle a dispute. J. D. R.

MARLINTON, W. VA.

The word hen occurs but twice in the Bible, strange to say, as the bird was common in Palestine. Once in Mathew xxiii. 37, where the beautiful passage occurs: "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them which are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathers her chickens under her wings, and ye would not"; and in Luke xii. 34, the same language is used, with the word "brood" instead of "chickens."

The name Hen occurs once in the Bible. In Zechariah vi. 14 we read of "Hen, the son of Zephaniah," but the record does not show whether he was disposed to crow or not.

Upon good authority we say say that the term "crowing hens" does not occur in the Bible, and it is from a proverb in daily use, like "you may take an ox to water but you cannot make him drink," which some people say is in the Bible. The expression 'hen's teeth' has been attributed to the Bible, but it is not found therein.

Along this same line of mistakes as to what the bible contains is the *well known account of an old dar*key who preached from Psalm xvi v. 33: "He maketh my feet like hinds' feet, and setteth me upon my high places." The darkey went by the the sound and delivered a sermon on the text transposed: "He maketh my feet like hen's feet," etc. "Yes, my bredderun, observe de hen when she roos' on de high place how she clamp de pole wif her feet, an de sounder she sleep de tighter she hol' on to de high place," and preached a very edifying sermon which was highly appreciated by his congregation most of whom knew something about the roosting of chickens.

The Richmond Dispatch prints a letter urging the Virginia legislature to pass a law protecting muskrats. The correspondent says that the muskrat is the greatest table delicacy known to the people of the Eastern Shore. An example of a victim to the habit of eating muskrats was cited to show what a hold this acquired taste has upon a man. "The late Samuel C. Taylor, famed for his good living, for many years was a pillar of the old Messenger Hardshell Baptist church in the northern part of Accomac. So strong was his liking for muskrat that when he was 83 years old that he spent an entire Sunday in digging the wily little animals out of their holes on the banks Messongo Creek, for which he was summarily turned out of the church."

It looks very much as if the Americans counted too much on the assistance of England and possibly America, and provoked the Mexicans to deeds of retaliation, hoping that foreign intervention would come to their rescue. Sometimes it is better for people to bear the ills they have, stay in the frying pan and not jump into the fire so quickly.

The Virginia foot-ball players explain that they did not intend to kill that Georgia man in the game. It was a mistake.—Baltimore Chronicle Telegraph.

Notions.

The year 1898 may be regarded as the centennial of the Democratic party. When the colonies were struggling for their independence, and trying to make the Fourth of July a fixture and an annual event, the common cause kept them contented, and uniform party proceedure and opposition were unknown.

As the reader knows, George Washington had distinguished himself as an annihilator of British armies, and he was elected President, in 1789, receiving every vote cast. This was the case when he came to be re-elected. But the fashion of electing presidents unanimously ceased with the second election of Washington, never to be resumed. The vote is terribly divided these days, and either the plutocrats elect a president, or the farmers, socialists, anarchists, and ignorami. John Adams was elected president in 1797. Since the country had fallen into habits of peace, of course parties sprang up. Washington was a federalist, and very nearly all the rest of the plutocrats of that day. They were in power, and as long as Washington was in power he made them behave so well that they kept their majorities in both houses of Congress. They ran a good deal to style, and generally took after their British cousins across the water. They had a deep and abiding dis trust for country people, and being composed of the wealthier classes, *they were very much afraid of be*ing depreciated by revolutions. They were inclined to take the liberty of abridging the liberty of the people, and to the minds of a great many common people they were drifting back to monarchy, and the remembrance of that state of affairs was so recent that little wonder an opposition party started up, with Thomas Jefferson as "expounder." It was known as the republican party, or democratic party. The terms were synonymous.

When the electoral vote was opened, in 1797, John Adams was elected by the federalists, and Jefferson had worked the wires so well that he slipped in ahead of Pinckney by securing a few federalist votes. Thus in 1797, by a fluke, Jefferson got himself elected vice-president by a gang of federalists who already hated him like poison.

One hundred years ago the United States were governed by federalists in power in every department, with the "expounder of democratic principles" as president of the Senate. In 1798, too, Andrew Jackson, another great Democrat, took his seat as Senator from Tennessee. It is our purpose, then, to briefly review the events of 1798, in this the hundredth year thereafter; and we believe it to be appropriate as the Jeffersonian party is struggling to right itself before the people and become again the dominant party, even tho it has the comparative unwieldiness of a party composed of the common people, who fear a party which has members who have the power and who make a business of legislating to some extent for number one.

The year of 1798 was a very significant one for the American republic. The federalists represented people who set a great deal of store by the Old World, and were inclined to use their power to restrain those who attacked their deeds or policy. They objected to the press criticising their actions. The Congress wished to increase the extent of its jurisdiction over crimes, which the States had reserved almost entirely to themselves in the constitution.

There were two hundred news papers in the United States in 1798, and 180 of these supported the federalists. Twenty were democratic-republican papers, and they did not hesitate to pour hot shot into pretensions, who had their own opinions as to their power and dignity and who had brought themselves to believe that they were necessarily factors in governmental affairs as the peers of England. In the first Congress in 1798 they enacted a few laws by which they proposed to assert their power. The most obnoxious of these measures were those now generally termed the "alien and sedition laws."

We were in trouble with France at this time, and France had kicked our ambassadors out of doors and war was expected. The democratic-republican party had been blamed for the rupture with France, and some of its members of Congress did not attend the sittings of that body. Jefferson predicted that the federalists would now show the cloven hoof.

The passing of the 'alien and sedition' laws fulfilled Jefferson's predictions to the letter, and because of the encronachment upon the liberties of the people the federalists saw the sun sink on their long and triumphant reign, and the consequence was that after the next election the American citizen Thomas Jefferson rode unattended through the streets of Washington and hitched his horse to palings in front of the capitol, in studied simplicity. This is a most significant incident of history, and which becomes the founder and 'expounder' of a party which is destined to perpetuate the highest example of a republican form of government, by modestly remembering that the people are the people. But we have traveled too fast.

The law passed in 1798, which was the first nail driven in their political coffin by the federalists, was requiring a residence of fourteen years on the part of an emigrant before he could become a citizen. This was not bidding very high for the people the country needed to form the nation the United States was to become. The law respecting aliens made all such residing in the United States to be enrolled, to report periodically to certain officers, and to be exiled from the country at the pleasure of the president. This was a most kingly power. Should the alien refuse to go when the president told him, he would be guilty of a felony. It is well enough to note that in the two years of this law's existence it was not enforced in a single instance. There has been but one parallel of this act of congress, and that was the Lodge Force Bill of a few years since. The opposition to the "alien" law called it a British measure, which still continues as a word of reproach, directed at the Republican party now, strange to say. Great Britain is one of the finest governments the world ever saw. But what we mean by a "British measure" is one not suited to the temper of the people, which would deprive any law of its wholesomeness.

The "sedition law" belongs to the class of morals which the Democratic party denounces to-day as "government by injunction." In the sedition law the congress sought to help the States out with their jurisdiction over criminals. It declared against unlawful combinations against the laws of the United States. The latter part of the sedition law "muzzled the press." It made it a crime to publish libels against the President or Congress, rebuking the execution of laws and bringing them into contempt, and was punishable by a fine of not more than $5,000, and imprisonment of not more than two years. This law was enforced in some instances, and the party that passed it went into forced retirement at the next election. John Adams was hardly treated with common politeness the last few months of his tenure in office, and he left Washington in worse form even than Grover Cleveland.

Thus the Democrtic party went into power because their opponents were hostile to the tenents of a people who were determined, against all precedent, to rule themselves. And we who are proud of the record of the Democratic party claim that it is the factor which has preserved the republic unto this day. That we are in harmony with Democratic principles, and that today, as in 1798, when the leaders were not in sympathy with the people but were doing all they could to defeat the ends for which the common people had successfully fought the Revolutionary war, we believe that "democracy is the hope of the nation."

Hear, then, the principles of democracy of which we boast. They are a hundred years old, but apply now as then:

Equal and exact justice to all men, of whatever state or persuasion, religious or political.

Peace, commerce, and honest friendship with all nations, entangling alliances with none.

The support of the state governments in all their rights, as the most competent administration for *our domestic concerns, and the sure*st bulwark against anti-republican tendencies.

The preservation of the general government in its whole constitutional vigor, as the sheet-anchor of our peace at home, and safety abroad.

A jealous care of the right of election by the people, a mild and safe corrective of abuses which are lopped by the sword of revolution where peaceful remedies are unprovided.

Absolute acquiescence in the decisions of the majority, the vital principle of republics, from which there is no appeal but to force, the vital principle and immediate parent of despotism.

A well disciplined militia, our best reliance in peace, and for the first movements of war, till regulars may relieve them.

The supremacy of civil over the military authority.

Economy in the public expense that labor may be lightly burdened.

The honest payment of our debts and sacred preservation of the public faith.

Encouragement of agriculture, and of commerce as its handmaid.

The diffusion of information, and the arraignment of all abuses at the bar of public reason.

Freedom of religion.

Freedom of the press.

Freedom of person, under the protection of the habeas corpus.

Trial by juries impartially selected.

In conclusion, we wish to mention that Jefferson "set the first example of a president removing men from office because their political opinions differed from his own." It over the Democratic party places a man in the chair we have no doubt he will follow Jefferson in this matter, instead of Cleveland. Why should the subordinates endure in office for a longer term than the head of all the departments?

THAT we will shortly know that heathenish breath
Is not the sweetest gift God gives His friend,
And that sometimes this sable pall of death
Conceals the fairest boon his love can send.
But not to-day. Then be content and hear
God's plans, like lilies, pure and white, unfold;
We must not tear the veil a mystery wears
Too soon apart;
Time will reveal the ashy waste of gold,
And if, through patient toil, we reach the land
Where tired feet, with sandals loosed, may rest,
When we shall clearly know and understand,
I think that we will say "God knew the best."

THE Washington Post says that a Virginia negro choked himself to death on his Christmas dinner of possum and sweet potatoes. It was a happy death.

WM. H. SAWYERS, editor of the Hinton Independent-Herald, is forever calling us the "Sermonette Editor." We take this opportunity of telling him that our highest ambition is to be able to see "sermons in stones and books in running brooks." While for him the best that he will ever be able to do will be "to see sermons in books and stones in running brooks."

THE law of the redemption of land sold for taxes is very similar to that set forth in the book of Leviticus. "If thy brother grow poor and sell some of his possessions * * * * a dwelling house in a walled city, he shall have the right of redemption for a whole year after it has been sold; for a year he shall retain the right of redemption. And if it be not redeemed within the space of a year, the house that is in the walled city shall be assured in perpetuity to him who bought it, to him and his descendants."

THERE are numerous applicants for the office of the Clerk of the Supreme Court, made vacant by the death of the late O. S. Long. THE courtesy of the Democratic Editors of the 8th Senatorial District to each other surpasses understanding. We have been urging one another to become the next State Senator. To complete the list the Independent-Herald names the Editor of the Pocahontas Times. It is sometimes that the only editor who does not seem to be afflicted with a superabundant stock of modesty is prevented by law from standing. We have a Senator from this county and as long as he remains in office no editor or citizen of this county is eligible. Sawyers, who is a lawyer and regularly knows the point of the constitutionality of all the laws in the magistrate courts of Summers county, evidently knew this and wished to humbug us by giving us a [illegible]

PERSONAL MENTION.

T. M. Hill is at work on his Hal... ...ed Ridge home near Pine Grove.

George Baxter, after several weeks' absence surveying in upper Pocahontas, is now at home.

Every one seems pleased with the nice and quiet holidays that have just passed, and hope they are signs of better times farther on.

Willis Baxter was at home on Christmas and enjoyed a home Christmas dinner for the first time in ten years.

B. R. Doyle held a series of meetings at Pine Grove quite recently, in the interest of the Baptist persuasion.

E. C. Eagle, of Lobella, who has been preparing to hang out his shingle for several years, has gone to Hinton to locate. He has gone into the office of Hon Thomas G. Mann, of that place.

Professor Terry, principal of Hillsboro Academy, was in town last Friday. He is making arrangements to extend the term of his school by a session of four or five months. A prospectus will appear in The Times at an early date.

Hannibal braved the Alps three sheet and snow until he stood upon the acropolis Italy and pointed his soldiers to further success. So have we conquered hard times and high prices. We are now ready, at the beginning of 1898, to give you untold bargains. With thanks for the past and a cordial invitation for the future, we are yours for business.

The Romantic Burke McCall.

The latest intelligence from Burke McCall, who made a horse trading trip thro this county last summer and camped in tents with his wife and employees, is that he eloped with the queen of a band of gypsies who had camped near Moorefield, in Hardy county. McCall had also been encamped near Moorefield, but the day before apparently broke camp and left. However, he returned in the evening, and, by previous arrangement, under the cover of darkness, ran away with the Queen. When the elopement was discovered the whole encampment turned out, but the night was very dark, and, as the elopers had a good start they were not overtaken.

State vs. Dilly.

A most remarkable case was tried before Justice Bird and cosmopolitan jury of twelve at the court-house last Tuesday. Hugh Sharp had sworn out a warrant for Barton and Ott Dilley for stealing a boat. The prisoners decided they would have a jury, and constable Page Gay gathered up citizens from all over the county who were in Marlinton attending county court. H. S. Rucker represented the prosecution; McNeill and Price the defense. The State proved that the boys had taken the boat and rode to Marlinton in it. The defense proved the boat to be valueless, not worth mentioning or raising a fuss over, and that they rode to Marlinton in it and left it on the shore.

The case was given to the jury in the gloaming, and they bore in a most emphatic manner. While the dead-lock was being perfected the prisoners wandered about in the dusk and in their suspense got on a little jag. When the jury came in to be discharged for lack of agreement as among themselves they could not be found.

Later they charged some of the prosecuting witnesses and made them flee for their lives. Constable Gay attempted to arrest them and they fled in the darkness. One of these wrenching loose from the officer after he had nabbed him. The case is set for next Saturday at 10 A. M.

It's Advertising, Perhaps.

"Does literature pay?" he asked thoughtfully, as he finished reading the article, scarcely read again, sometimes I am inclined to think that a good deal of the stuff that pays is literature—not by a good deal."

BUCKEYE.

We are having some fine winter weather at this time

Most of the sick are improving. Two of Kenny Kennison's children have scarlet fever

Clark Kellison killed a fine large hog last week. It netted 320 lbs.

George Kellison and Andy Campbell have been having a lot of sport chasing foxes with their hounds, and have caught one fox.

Jim Beverage spent Christmas at home, but has returned to camp again.

Several of the young people of this neighborhood attended the social down on the River and report a nice time.

The young people are having a lot of sport with their skates on the ice on the River, and some of them have come being baptists.

W. McClintic has got a new hay baler and is baling hay and hauling it to his camp.

Rover.

LOBELIA.

Cold and frosty, and some sickness in this part. Mrs Lizzie Hill is very poorly at this time. Miss Lucy Hill has been judged insane, and will be sent away soon.

Harry Taylor, of Trout, W. Va., has been the guest of W. B. Hill for a few days.

W. B. Hill has killed three red foxes and has some more in jail waiting the verdict.

I, W. B. Hill, wish to correct a statement made last week in regard to the railroad survey from Gauley River to Spring Creek in Greenbrier county, a distance of fifty and a half miles. The engineers stayed with me, I was pilot and the engineers found the route good. The President of the road wrote me that the route was feasible and that they would build it soon. And I wish to say that the route is practicable.

W. B. Hill.

Lobella, West Virginia.

DILLEY'S MILL.

We have had quite a coldsnap, yet we can't complain. Truly we have been blessed with much beautiful weather this winter.

Harmon Sharp, of Elk, is stopping in this part, taking a fox-chase and a rabbit hunt. Harmon is a jolly fellow and makes the woods to ring with merry music.

Mrs M. Carpenter, of Donmore, is visiting relatives in this part.

J. W. Grimes was at the Springs last week on business.

Miss Bertha Hively was hooked by a mean cow last week, and was painfully hurt.

The game of football had languished in this section until Christmas day, when two matches were played, at Dilley's Mill and at Frost.

Charlie McCarty is able to be out again.

We see "The West Virginia News" circulated freely in this part, and it has secured numerous subscribers in the county.

Mrs Ralp Dilley has been on the sick-list.

Miss Kinnison went home to spend the holidays.

Miss Truda Sharp got a nice organ for a Christmas present.

A Christmas tree at Frost Tuesday night with good results.

Wishing The Times and its readers a bright and happy new year.

Yours very truly,

"John Dix."

December 28, 1897.

GREEN BANK.

We are having the coldest weather, and the boys are killing all the rabbits, I think.

Saturday J. W. Yeager conducted a very exciting lawsuit at Arbovale before Justice Arbogast. In which Mrs Amanda Simmons was plaintiff and John A. Whitelaw, of Mustercy, was defendant. Mr Whitelaw was his own attorney and gained the suit.

Died: Yesterday evening, at 3 o'clock, Sarah Carpenter, after a very long illness. She was fifty years old.

The Oak Grove foot ball team has played three match games with the Green Hill team, and has kicked eight goals to Green Hill's none.

Frank King, of Marlinton, was here Monday, having brought W. B. and Miss Annie King back to their schools at Oak Grove and Green Bank.

Misses Jack Spencer and George Beverage, of Top of Alleghany, paid this neighborhood a visit last Saturday.

The Christmas tree at Frost last Tuesday night was a success; also also the entertainment given by Professor Lantz and others.

W. W. Galford wears a big smile—its a fine girl.

All kinds of fodder taxed by weight or half for the other, or for half value when taxed. Work guaranteed first-class in every particular. Also, I will buy hides at highest prices. Edgar L. Smith, Mill Point, West Virginia.

KNAPPS CREEK.

The clear, bracing, winter weather seems to be enjoyed by young and old.

The usual number of dinners and socials have been indulged in. One among the pleasant features of the holidays was a New Year's ending at Mr W. G. Ruckman's, which was much enjoyed. Mrs Ruckman certainly understands how to prepare a nice dinner.

Misses Nannie Warwick and Kate Dever are visiting on the Creek.

Miss Bessie Hannah is visiting at Henry Sharp's.

Peyton Moore received a handsome present the night of the thirty first. Look out for the gobbler!

Sandy.

LINWOOD.

H. B. Sharp has returned from the Hills and reports a successful chase. He bagged 31 rabbits.

The literary society made its last appearance Tuesday night. The usual program of dialogs, essays, recitations, etc. Mr Dick Showalter produced an original poem entitled: "Why I am Bachelor," which moved the house to its foundations. Regular debate of the evening between E. C. Eagle and R. D. Williams, on, the subject that "ambition has wrought more harm than good."

Prof Eagle has closed his school and departed with the best wishes of many friends he has added to his list here.

A. D. Williams is preparing to enter college again.

MARRIED.

Doyle—Kramer.

A very auspicious society event transpired at the home of Philip Kramer, Esqr., near Clover Lick, at high noon Wednesday, December 29, when Mr John H. Doyle and Miss Lou Edna Kramer were united in the "holy bonds of matrimony," Rev Wm. T. Price officiating.

The bride's maids in attendance were Misses Minnie Kramer, Emma Doyle, Mollie Slaughter and Lucy Chestnut, escorted by Frank Mann, Talbert Sharp, Joe Hannah and Amos Doyle.

The bride is a daughter of Philip Kramer, Esqr., and is a most [illegible] young lady, beloved by a large circle of friends and acquaintances.

The groom is an industrious farmer of exemplary personal habits, and is justly regarded as a very worthy young citizen by a large circle of friends and acquaintances.

About one hundred guests were present, and a very bountiful and well prepared dinner was served. When it is known that the wedding arrangements were supervised by Mrs Dr Kramer it will go without saying that everything was done in a very befitting and satisfactory style, aided, as she was, by adroit and attentive assistants.

Mr and Mrs Doyle were the recipients of quite a number of friendly tokens and the best wishes of numerous attached friends for their happiness and prosperity.

Miss Mollie Campbell, sister of J. E. Campbell, of the Alleghany Sentinel, was married last week to Mr A. N. Nesbitt, at Covington, Va., by Rev C. H. Buchannan.

OBITUARY.

Mrs Lillie M. Boyd, eldest daughter of Mr and Mrs Austin Campbell and wife of Engineer Robert L. Boyd, died at her home in Hinton, W. Va., Christmas afternoon at 5. For some years she has been a great sufferer, all which she endured with patient submission to the Divine will. On the day before her decease she told those around her what she would like to live, but if it was God's will to take her, she was ready and willing to go." She is survived by her husband and two small children. For many years Mrs Boyd was a communicant in the M. E. Church South.

The pall bearers in charge of the casket were selected from the Masonic Fraternity and the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, of which orders her father, husband and brother are members. A few years since Mrs Boyd was widely known in our county as a popular teacher of schools and many of our readers will hear of her death with feelings of sadness.

The letter that brings us the sad intelligence contains this sentence, "She gave every evidence, not only in words, but her life was an evidence, that to her Christianity was a reality. She was a Christian, and realized what it was 'to live for Christ,' and enjoy that blessing in her dying hours.

HOW TO FIND OUT.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What to Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root, the great kidney remedy fulfils every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold urin and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following the use liquor, beer, or wine, and ever comes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists, price fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet both sent free by mail. Mention The Pocahontas Times and send your address to Dr Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The proprietors guarantee the genuineness of this offer.

Wheeling Intelligencer

West Virginia's Leading Family and Political Newspaper.....

The INTELLIGENCER is in its forty sixth year, and throughout the period of its existance it has been carrying information to the homes of the State. The year 1898 will be a history-making year as rarely less in importance than those which have preceded it. The first regular session of the Fifty-fifth Congress will be notable, as it will witness the debates and action on vital questions that affect the people—the proposed reforms in our monetary system, the Cuban question, Hawaiian annexation, and many foreign relations now pending.

The year will be important politically. A new State legislature and a new Congress will be selected. The campaign will involve vital State and National issues, and in West Virginia the choice of a U. S Senator.

A Mock Trial

New York Sun: Peter the cop was patrolling that part of the criminal court building known as "the beach" Christmas eve when Mary the apple woman came along with her basket on her arm.

"Apples, sir? Apples?" said Mary.

"Pardon me," said Peter, "but ye are wanted be th' Court."

"Beth' Court?" repeated Mary.

"Yis," said the cop; "'tis ill luck I'll have for interfarin' wid a poor ould crayter like ye, but it's me duty, Mary, whin th' Coort orders yer taken into custody."

"Glory be ter Harlem, what hev Oi been doing?" exclaimed the apple women. "Sure Oi would n't hurt a hair on a dog's back.

"Nor a dog on a hare's back," said Peter.

"Sure an' none knows it better than ye," answered Mary.

"But Oi must do me duty," said Peter, leading Mary away by the arm.

The apple women was crying when arranged in the General Sessions before Judge McMahon. Twelve solemn-looking men were seated in the jury box. They were court attendants and clerks.

"You are charged with selling candy to Captain McAuley," remarked Clerk Wolf, "said candy being eaten by said Captain in the court room."

"We find Mary guilty 'of illegal voting," said Peter Seaman, who acted as foreman of the jury.

Mary burst into tears.

"Save me this time an' Oi'll never do it again," sobbed the apple women.

"You are fined $87," declared Judge McMahon, "and owing to the fact that you have always borne a good reputation the Clerk is directed to pay you the fine."

"Oh, yer Honor," sobbed Mary, "Oi only got a dollar and tin cints. Please don't send me to jail. Please I beg av yer."

Clerk Wolf then told the apple women to keep quiet and he would square it with the judge. Then he handed Mary an envelope containing $87, saying that it was a little Christmas surprise contributed by the Judges and attendants of the Court of General Sessions.

The apple women kept on weeping, but joyfully, as she counted over the money and tucked it away in her pocket.

"Thank yez all, an' may God niver let them muggerwumps win an election ter take away yer jobs" said Mary as she turned to go.

Just then Detective Sergeants Cuff and McNaught stepped forward and told Mary that they wanted to take her photograph for the Rogues' Gallery. They sat her down on a chair, and Cuff placed a big green shawl over her shoulders, while McNaught pretended he was taking her picture by aiming the jury wheel at her.

"Now, you can keep that shawl as a Christmas present," said Detective Cuff. "When I was in Ireland last summer I had the shawl made for you in your native place, Roscommon. The wool in it was grown on the back of a Roscommon sheep that dined on Roscommon turf and four-leaf shamrocks."

"Then Oi won't take the shawl," said Mary, "for a sheep as would ate four-leaf shamrocks was niver fit ter live in Oireland."

"I meant to say the man who owned the sheep found a four-leaf shamrock in the pasture where the sheep dined," said the detective; that makes it a lucky shawl."

"It does that," said Mary, "and Oi'll wear it till Oi die"

Then the crowd turned Mary loose.

Senator Kenna's Luck at Raffling.

I was told a curious story the other day about the late Senator Kenna, of West Virginia, whose statue is to be placed in the Capitol in a few days.

When he first came to Congress, a Mrs Kenron, who lived in the same boarding house, persuaded him to buy a ticket in a raffle at a church fair for a cooking stove and a complete kitchen outfit. His ticket turned out to be the lucky one and he sent the goods to his home in West Virginia. While he was arranging for their shipment at the railroad station he was introduced to the young lady who afterwards became his wife, and gallantly invited her to become his cook. She replied she would be very glad to do so. The next winter Mrs Kenron sold Mr Kenna a ticket in another fair given by the same church. This time the prize was a plain gold ring, and again he was successful. He put the ring carefully away until it was needed at his wedding a few months later, and it so happened that his bride was the first person to use the cook stove.

Mrs Kenna is now Postmistress at Charleston, and the legislature of the State has decided that its representative in the gallery of statesmen and statesmanesses at the Capitol shall be the man who his wedding ring and kitchen furniture at raffle.—Chicago Record.

THE question has been discussed whether the same letter occurs thrice in succession in any word in the English language. Hawaiian has been suggested, but it is not recognized as a word, only as a possibility. The word "skilless" seems to fill the bill, but the Standard Dictionary gives the spelling with but two l's, "skilless." Webster's Dictionary recognizes the word and gets out of the difficulty by making it a compound word, "skill-less." This seems unwarranted for compound words are formed from their meaning and not by peculiarities of spelling, and there is no more reason for making skilless a compound word than skillful. Shakespeare uses the word four times spelled with two l's.

In a recent talk about the Algonquin language, Dr. Edward Everett Hale observed that six hundred words of any language are enough for human communication. In a note in The Critic, called out by a report of his speech, he says: "Six hundred words is said to be sufficient for the couriers in Europe; and it is the outside limit of the vocabulary of the Italian opera. It is true that this is the minimum of human intelligence, in both cases; but still it answers for the conveyance of thought. In the book of Judges for instance there are not seven hundred different words."

Another Hat.

Sorrow and mirth are often strangely mingled at weddings. An unusual instance is reported by the Weekly Telegraph:

At Scotch weddings, some years ago, it used to be the custom to batter the hat of the bridegroom as he was leaving the house in which the ceremony took place. On one of these occasions a newly married couple—relatives of the bridegroom—determined to carry out the observances of this custom to the letter.

The bridegroom heard them discussing their plans, and dispatched a messenger to the carriage—which stood waiting—with his hat some time previous to his departure. There donning the hat of the male who had plotted against him, he prepared to go out to the carriage.

No sooner had he got to the door than his hat was furiously assaulted and almost destroyed. He walked out of the house amid the laughter of the bystanders and entered the vehicle; then, taking the battered hat from his head, he threw it into the laps of its grinning assailants, crying: "Hey Mc Donald, there's your 'hat!'" and they donned his own, amid the cheers of all present.

SPRING-TOOTH HARROW.

The frames are made in one piece of steel angle bar, and formed to withstand all strain without buckling or warping. The teeth in this harrow are so spaced that they will not trail each other. Pulverizing the ground thoroughly. The steel pipe tooth bars are mounted in malleable boxes secured to the frame, and will not bend or break. The peculiar shape of the teeth curling toothirds about the bar gives the greatest amount of spring possible without straining the bolts, and because of their shape and fastening are stronger than used on any other harrow. By the levers the depth of work can be regulated while the harrow is in motion. The draft is steady and direct as the harrow has no side motion.

Biographic Notes.

ONE of the notable families in our local annals was the Slaven relationship, whose ancestor was John Slaven, who came from Tyrone, Ireland, about the middle of the previous century. He first settled in west Rockingham County, Virginia, and then came to what is now Highland County, Virginia, and located permanently at Meadow Dale, on property now held by Stuart Slaven and James Flesher. His wife was a Miss Stuart. Traces of the old home are still to be seen near James Flesher's residence, who is a descendant by the fifth remove.

In reference to John Slaven's sons we learn that Henry and Reuben went to Ohio and settled in the famous Scioto Valley. Daniel Slaven located his home on Clinch River, Tennessee. Isaiah Slaven married Martha Stuart, and went to Montgomery County, Kentucky, in 1792, about the time that State came into the Union, and settled at Mount Sterling. William Slaven settled in Smith County, Tenn.

Stuart Slaven remained on the Meadow Dale homestead. His wife was a Miss Johnston, a daughter of Jesse Johnston. He was one of the most prominent and influential citizens of his time. Stuart Slaven's children were Reuben Slaven, for so many years one of the leading citizens of his county, and perhaps celebrated more marriages than any magistrate that ever held that office in his section; Jesse Slaven, William Slaven, Stuart Slaven, junior; Nellie, who became Mrs Adam Lighner; Mrs Thomas Campbell; Sallie, who was Mrs Alexander Gilmore; Rachel, who became Mrs Givens and went west; Mrs Matilda Wade.

Margaret Slaven was married to the late Benjamin B. Campbell. Her daughters are Mrs S. P. Patterson and Miss Mattie Campbell, of Huntersville; Stuart Campbell, of Belington; Brown Campbell, late of Monterey; and Luther Campbell, at Dunmore, her sons.

John Slaven, son of John from Tyrone, was twice married. The first wife was a Miss Wade, near Green Hill, Virginia. There was one son, John Slaven, who never married. The second marriage was with Elizabeth Warwick, a sister of Andrew and William Warwick, on Deer Creek near Green Bank. Not long after this marriage, he settled on the head of Greenbrier, and he is the ancestor of the Pocahontas branch of the Slaven relationship. By the second marriage there were five daughters and two sons. He was a person of remarkable muscular powers, and was a Revolutionary veteran, a noted hunter and successful trapper. He had thrilling descriptions to give of the many bloody engagements he passed through, the hazardous risks he ran, and the bitter privations he endured in the service of his country. He lived to an advanced age, and was associated by the infirmities of age so to make much use of crutches when moving around in his closing days. In reference to his children the following particulars are available:

Sallie Slaven became Mrs Donaldson, and lived for a time at the head of Jackson's River, thence went to Hardin County, Ohio.

Priscilla Slaven was married to Joseph Woodell, pastor of Green Bank, and lived in Pike County, O.

Anna Slaven became Mrs Patrick Bradley, and lived near Green Bank, on property occupied by John Hannah. Mrs Patrick Bradley was a very useful and prominent citizen. A skilled workman in stone, iron, and wood, and filled most of the official positions in the gift of the county.

Mary Slaven became Mrs John Woodell, near Green Bank. Miss Sue Chandler, and Gertie Beckett.

Mary P. Slaven was married to Jesse B. Slaven, at Meadow Dale, where she died and is buried.

Margaret Slaven became Mrs Samuel Buckeon, Mill Bay, Va.

William Slaven, son of John Slaven the pioneer was born July 6th, 1798, and was married in 1819 to Margaret Wooddell, daughter of Joseph Wooddell, at Green Bank. She was born June 27, 1800.

They were the parents of six sons and two daughters. Their names were Charles, who died seeking gold in California; John, Henry; Nathan, a Confederate soldier killed at Fort Donelson; and Elizabeth, who became Mrs Osborne, of Gilmer County.

William Slaven's second marriage was with Nancy Cline, Lewis County, West Virginia, and there were five daughters and four sons by this marriage. Mary, Sarah, Caroline, Martha, Lucy, Frank, Lanty, Rolland, and Perry. William Slaven's descendants mainly live in Jackson, Wirt, Lewis, and Gilmer counties, and are reported to be among the most prosperous and good people of that section of West Virginia.

While living in Pocahontas William Slaven was a citizen of marked prominence,—member of the Virginia Legislature, Magistrate, and Assessor. More than sixty years ago he concluded to move to Lewis County. Assisted by John Wooddell and others his household effects were carried over Cheat Mountain to Lawyer See's, near Huttonsville, on pack-horses—there being only a bridle-path at the time. He lived awhile on Leading Creek, Lewis County, thence went to Wirt County, near Burning Springs; and, finally, to Jackson County, a few miles from Ravenswood. In his new places of residence after leaving Pocahontas he was honored with places of trust, served the public as magistrate and deputy-sheriff, which at that time meant the full, active duties of sheriff. He leaves the reputation of being always an efficient, trustworthy business man.

Jacob Gillespie Slaven, son of the pioneer of that much-named region Head of Greenbrier—Upper Tract—Travellers Repose, married Eleanor Lockridge, daughter of Lanty Lockridge, Sr., on Knapps Creek. These persons passed the most of their married lives on the head of Greenbrier in a widely-known and attractive home. In their time there was an immense travel along that road, Parkersburg and Staunton Pike. Most of the communication between the western and eastern parts of Virginia was by this route. Governor Joe Johnson and Stonewall Jackson have stopped once here to enjoy trout and venison. Everything seemed prosperous and pleasant with Jacob Slaven until the terrible ravages of war laid his home in ashes and exiled the happy inmates.

Mr and Mrs Jacob G. Slaven were the parents of eight daughters and four sons. We lay before our readers the following particulars concerning these sons and daughters.

Harriet, who was greatly admired for her personal attractions, became Mrs Patrick Gallaher, and went to Missouri.

Elizabeth was married to Colonel William T. Gammon, of Hortensville, a citizen of marked prominence. She now lives at Odessa, Missouri.

John Randolph Slaven, late of Huntersville, was married to Margaret F. Wooddell. Mrs Slaven and her daughters Mrs L. M. McClintic and Mrs S. L. Brown, live in Marlinton. Her sons, Oscar and Guy Slaven, live in Kansas.

Lanty Lockridge Slaven was first Isabella Barnes, daughter of the late George Barnes, and settled on Back Alleghany, where his second wife with her sons Jacob Wooddell, now Green Bank. Miss Sue Chandler, and Gertie Beckett.

Martha Slaven became Mrs J. T. Hogsett, and lived near Marvin, in the vicinity of Mill Point at the time of her death a few years since.

Adalaide Eleanor Slaven was first married (by the writer) to Washington Arbogast, son of Hon. William Arbogast, of Green Bank. He died in May, 1864, of wounds received in the battle of Spottsylvania Court-house. The children of this marriage were William and Margaret, now Mrs C. O. Arbogast.

Her second marriage was with William L. Brown, Esq., and lives at Green Bank.

Margaret Eveline Slaven, now Mrs J. H. Patterson, lives at Marlinton. Mr Patterson is the Clerk of the Pocahontas Circuit Court. He was a Confederate soldier from start to finish, and shared the perils of those who were first in battle and last in retreat.

Sarah Mildred Slaven was first married to Peter H. Slaven, and lived at Monterey, Virginia. Their son Emmett lives in Nebraska. Her second marriage was with Arista Hartman, now living in Kansas.

Winfield T. Slaven married Nannie P. Ruckman, and lives near Marvin.

In reference to the daughters of Mr and Mrs Jacob G. Slaven it is interesting to note that Eleanor and Margaret were twins. Mildred and Alice were also twin sisters.

Thus the attempt has been made to illustrate the Slaven family history in our county, so efficiently aided by Mrs M. P. Slaven and her brother J. Stewart Wooddell, and W. T. Slaven, of Marvin.

Mr and Mrs John Slaven, the ancestral pioneers, that had their home on the beautiful banks of the upper Greenbrier, had a married life of fifty-two years, ten months, and twenty-one days. It would be well could their graves be identified, where unheeded oe'r their silent dust the storms of the eventful present and the recent past have raged in such ominous fury. The story of their lives help us very much towards a proper understanding of what it cost to make it possible for the comforts that gladden our lives.

W. T. P.

GOVERNOR TYLER, of Virginia, is a great stickler for Jeffersonian simplicity.

THE Supreme Court of Appeals met last Tuesday. Two cases from this county will be submitted, McLaughlin vs. McGraw and others, and Turk, trustee, vs. Skyles and others.

OWING to the particular animosity which the Democratic press has shown Congressman Dorr, it is thought that he will have pull enough with his own party to renominate him this year. He is probably the only Congressman from West Virginia who will be able to secure his party nomination. Miller will not offer, and Dovener's and Dayton's times have come.

IF MARCUS A. HANNA is elected Senator from Ohio under the present circumstances, we will take it as conclusive proof that he knows how to use money in politics both legally and illegally. The situation has reached that kind of a senatorial deadlock that can only be dissolved with money. If he is beaten it will speak well for his integrity as a law abiding politician. To the country at large his case presents this peculiar aspect. If he is defeated they will know that he is a better man than they gave him credit of being, and if elected they will regard his position to represent so many thousand dollars consideration. No doubt poor Mr Hanna has recalled Lockney Hall.

"What is that which I should turn to, lighting upon days like these?
Every share in banner with gold,
And opens but to golden keys."

It is of course generally understood that legislatures have their price.

THE school ears should be thoroughly washed occasionally to remove the oily perfection that equip Bro's Hair Restorer to give the hair a natural color.

New York News Letter.

A happy New Year.

How many of you have made new resolutions? Question: How many will keep them?

When writing date your letters 1898. Half of our population in this great country will continue to write their letters for the next three months the same old way.

New York city is now called the borough of Manhattan; Brooklyn is called the borough of Brooklyn; Staten Island, the borough of Richmond; above the Harlem River, borough of Bronx; Queen's county, borough of Queens. The whole business goes by the name of New York City (Greater New York.) The post-office officials insist that one should write: Mr ——, —— street, Manhattan New York City. Last year the residents of this city had troubles of their own, but the New Year starts in with more trouble kindly furnished by the post office department.

The new year was ushered in heralded with tin-horns, Trinity Church chimes, bands of music, fireworks, singing societies. It is estimated that in the vicinity of City Hall fully 50,000 people witnessed the festivities. The carnival was a success. The affair was gotten up by the New York Journal, which paper footed the bill. The City Hall Park was strung with colored miniature electric lamps. The trees were decorated with ribbons. It was the grandest sight ever witnessed in this town. The people thus did honor to our new city of New York. Every one was full of enthusiasm—a few were full of whiskey. Take the celebration all in all Father Knickerbocker never saw the like of it—and he is a pretty old man.

So far the weather in this region has been decidedly cold. Skating is all the rage. Snow lies here and there. The present outlook has the appearance of an old-fashioned winter.

Bicycling is the leader in all outdoor enjoyments. A bill will be introduced in the Legislature providing for a railroad and bicycle bridge to connect the boroughs of Brooklyn and Manhattan. The cost of the structure, it is estimated, will be $6,000,000.

A fire occurred Sunday morning in Jersey City. The smoke was so dense and the fire gained such headway that six members of the family lost their lives. Two others are not expected to recover. The chief of the fire department was almost killed in his heroic attempt to save lives. The father of the family was found with two of his children clasped in his arms within a few feet of safety.

The swimming season of this city was opened for the year 1898 by Prof. J. Donaldson, who took a plunge in the icy waters of Bath Beach yesterday. The Professor stayed in four minutes. He was clad in the regular bathing suit. He remarked when coming out that it was rather chilly. The rest of our population will wait until later in the season for their plunge. All the fools are not yet dead.

While the Rev. Thomas Dixon, Jr., was delivering his sermon yesterday, he suddenly paused. In his dramatic way he said: "Will someone kindly remove that quail. I like to have those around the house, but as part of my congregation they embarrass me. The call was heeded and honored.

Parties are being arrested right along for the gold fields. Every thing is Klondike. Where a few die themselves into a forlorn hope, decide starve. Give me health and three square meals a day, but no gold fields.

Sweetness and Light.

Put a pill in the pulpit if you want practical preaching for the physical man; then put the pill in the pillory if it does not practise what it preaches. There's a whole gospel in Ayer's Sugar Coated Pills; a "gospel of sweetness and light." People used to value their physic, as they did their religion,—by its bitterness. The more bitter the dose the better the doctor. We've got over that. We take "sugar in ours"—gospel or physic—now-a-days. It's possible to please and to purge at the same time. There may be power in a pleasant pill. That is the gospel of

Notions.

THE new government of Greater New York went to work Monday, January 3. The Tammany people have reason to be thankful that they succeed a lot of reformers, for the past three years have proved that the "reformers" needed reforming as badly as ever did a city government. A few years ago the people started in to purge the city. Governing is like poking the fire; every other man thinks he could do a better job than he who has the poker. A meddling preacher named Parkhurst was one of the leading men in regenerating the city. By keeping mum as to the virtues of the city government and emphasizing the mistakes and failures, he and others got the people to believe that such corruption had never been known in this world. They were given control and have succeeded in playing a game that has been as full of errors as a game of baseball played by farmers.

Richard Croker, one of the most astute politicians who ever lived, has always been firm in the opinion that the reformers only needed enough rope, to hang themselves, and his predictions have been fulfilled to the letter. He knew the temper of the people of New York when he let loose the catch expression of the last campaign, "To h—l with reform!" A more brutal cry could not have been invented to shock the ears of the uninformed. But to the ears of the New Yorkers it meant, "Away with a set of impostors who claimed to be infallible, and who by diligently picking out the bad of a former administration and covering up the good, had themselves placed in power, where they proved to be even more incapable of doing all things right than those whom they had ousted!" All this could be expressed in four words, and it carried the city without trouble.

Tammany is the finest school of politics in the land. It has always taught that the official must do his duty or he will not be retained by the people. Misconduct in office cannot be hidden so that it will not be noised abroad and bring ruin to the one responsible. Richard Croker almost believes in retribution in politics. This is about the nearest approach to religion he has been accused of, but if he and his kind believe that neglect or malfeasance in office will be immediately visited on their own heads, it is the strongest safe guard of their integrity.

The public of Greater New York generally look for a safe, honest and economical administration from the Democratic party now in power, and every body is satisfied, except some of the Republican leaders of New York who had a chapter granted when they thought they could carry the city owing to the unpopularity of Bryan in New York.

THE preacher is paid for stealing a horse brings to mind the case of Rev. Joseph Hutchinson who from bold him that he had certainly stolen of us to worry the countries around, but that then he had a of West Virginia. About a dozen wonderful tools for good.

years ago he was holding a series of meetings at Indian Draft, near Edray, and being a good preacher was having a great time. He gave notice that the next night he would give his hearers a special effort from the subject, "The Judgment Day." A tremendous crowd gathered and dispersed without the preacher putting in his appearance. He was riding a borrowed horse and when it was known that he was no longer in the neighborhood it was thought that he had laid himself liable to the judgment of the circuit court.

The circumstances were these: He had started from the home of a citizen of the neighborhood to go to church; and, some say, he had taken too much whiskey, and others that it was a temporary aberration of mind; but the result was that he kept going for about fifteen miles, until he got nearly to Big Spring. Here he stayed all night, and waking up the next morning in his right mind he left the horse to be sent back, and went on walking, and he has never been in the county since.

In discussing the wonderful surgical operation performed in Switzerland, in which the stomach of a woman was removed and the patient got well, it has been discovered that a similar operation was performed in Pocahontas County, years ago, and which was never noised abroad. There are hundreds of citizens who have heard the full particulars from the lips of the operator himself. He was one of those unknown heroes that Gray tells about in his elegy, who but lacked opportunity to be great in the eyes of the world.

"Their lot forbad: Nor circumscribed alone
Their growing virtues, but their crimes confined;
Forbad to wade through slaughter to a throne
And shut the gates of mercy on mankind."

It, then, becomes our duty to the "unbounded deed" to tell of this remarkable operation.

"Do'nt in these lines the artless tale relate,"

so to speak.

Dr Tarr, "Old Doc Tarr," was a doctor of the old Tennessee School. His home was in the upper end of Pocahontas. Up to his dying day he would relate this experience as the crowning success of his professional work.

He had been called to see a man who was suffering from a disorganized stomach. External treatment had failed, and he used the knife. He took out the stomach of the sufferer, who had been removed to a place on the grass under some oak trees. The process of repairing the organ was continued some time, and the doctor turned to his coat which was lying at some distance for a bit of plug tobacco. While his back was turned a dog came up and carried off the vital part on which he was expending so much care. The case seemed desperate for a moment, but the doctor got a thong which was near by removing the stomach placed it in the case and sewed him up. A great time afterwards he passed Rev. Joseph Hutchinson who then told him that he had certainly stolen of us to worry the countries around, but that then he had a of West Virginia. About a dozen wonderful tools for good.

The Pocahontas Times.

ANDREW PRICE, EDITOR.

Marlinton, Friday, Jan. 14. 1898.

MAJOR MOSES P. HANDY died in Augusta, Georgia, last Saturday. He was a son of the late Rev. Dr. Handy, once pastor of the Old Stone Church, in Augusta County, Virginia.

ALEX MCVEIGH MILLER admits that he made false statements in a late article in order that in refuting it, the Democratic papers would advertise the Illustrated News. "He stoops to conquer." It is most remarkable confession and should have kept the motive to himself. Then many would have thought him honestly mistaken.

THE city of Huntington is in a bad condition financially. Th orders issued and taken up were not marked paid, but were stored in the vault. They were stolen and put in circulation the second time. $14,000 were paid in redeeming this class of city orders, and it is thought that fully $50,000 have been circulated in the city. The orders stolen amount to $140,000. Carter Shifflette was arrested and held in $50,000 bail.

SEVERAL persons, who have come from Camden-on-Gauley recently, report that the railroad magnates have been there in force and that a prospecting party was being fitted out to view the river up as far as the Penick meadows. It is also reported by them that the road will be built as far as the meadows this season, the work to begin early in the spring. A complete survey was made of this route in 1891, when the Marlinton excitement was at its height and every one was sure the road was to be built to Marlinton at once. The long cold spell on capital has continued to the present day, but it is now believed that the original plans will be carried out.

THE administration finds itself in that condition not uncommon in law, "being unable to prove what every one believes;" that there are great frauds perpetrated by the statesmen at Washington in issuing more pensions than there are survivors of the late war. There is only one country which maintains a standing army as expensive. All the glory of Veteran has departed. He has sunk from the hero to be on the same list with the greatest horde of thieves the world ever saw. There are nearly a million pensioners. The most liberal minded man in the world would not grant that more than one half deserve the money they get. It took a Congressional Record of several hundred pages to print a list of all the bills into Congress last month to grant pensions, remove the charge of desertion, etc., in cases where the the regular pension bureau had refused to allow a pension. It seems likely that the present administration will increase the list fully as much as any yet and there will be more trouble for tax payers and statesmen.

THE county court granted a reward of $25 to Henry Dawson and E. F. Beard for capturing John H. Ratliff, the horse thief. The public will approve of this action in appropriating this amount of the public funds. There is nothing which stockmen dread more than the horse thief. Their horses are necessarily left unprotected in the pastures in the summer time and in unlocked stables in the winter. A rogue and comes by and steals a horse which carries him swiftly out of the country, and if caught at all it is only by desperate riding in other horses. The condition of this county is not much in advance of those stock-raising counties of the West where they hang horse thieves and pass judgement on them afterwards. In this particular case the thief stole the horse of a poor man, it is believed thinking that he would not be followed. Mister stole his only remaining horse down to pursuit and then killed Henry Dawson. He could only promise to pay him when he got enough money. Dawson followed the thief at his own expense and brought him back home. Such service is more worth paying for than that of our fee officers generally. We owe to encouraging him temporarily, but such is the state of feeling against him. It would give many people, for this service, the most profound gratification to know that he is not so absolute in his own party as they had reason to suppose he was. Ohio is the home of a large number of distinguished statesmen. Hanna has been too openly corrupt to insure the friendship of those who know him best, and too able and powerful not to have caught the rank and file of the State generally. His present predicament proves that he is not the patriot he should be. There are too many of the best and most honorable men of his own party opposing him.

We shall outline the situation briefly. The whole State of Ohio is in a ferment over the matter. Last June the State convention, at Toledo, endorsed Senator Hanna serving by appointment until the Legislature should meet, for election. When the Legislature was organized it was found that the Republican members had united with the Democratic members into what is called the "combine," and organized both branches of the Legislature. The patronage all was placed away from the regular Republicans who were supporting Hanna. A lot of bills were introduced striking at corporations in which he is interested.

Hanna counted the noses and found that he had 70 men and the combine 75. He needed 73 votes to elect. Bushnell, the Governor, seems to think that if the Legislature offered him the place he would be a fool to refuse, and that cost him most of the friends he had in the State. Charles Kurtz is the most active Republican leader in the "combine," and our John R. McLean has the Democrats in hand. Jeptha Gerrard, a wealthy free-silver Republican, of Cincinnatti, is a likely candidate. Senator Foraker refuses to join in the strife either for or against Hanna, and as usual with those who try to remain neutral comes in for his full share of abuse. The Republican editors of Ohio have been raving mad for weeks. If the vote is between two men on the first ballot, Hanna goes under, and then there will be weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth in Ohio. If more than two are placed in nomination a deadlock will ensue, which is the most that Hanna hopes for. In the meantime conventions are being held and resolutions passed by the Republicans of the State. Assault and battery is let loose at Columbus, and Hanna is fighting the battle of his life.

It is a fine thing that President McKinley has not debased the high position he holds by taking part in the war. Senator Foraker was threatened if he did not come to Hanna's aid, and he threatened the Republican party, and they left him alone. In many respects every time machine politics get out of order politics are made better and purer thereby.

Hanna decided not to hold a caucus for nomination, claiming that the action of the convention at Toledo was sufficient. In 1872, Sherman was in the same fix. Then the Democrats united with enough Republicans to defeat him, but not a prominent Republican in the State would allow himself to be nominated to oppose Sherman. It was offered Garfield and Hayes, each afterwards President. Senator Sherman won on the first ballot on this account. Hanna is a different man from John Sherman. Sherman without a cent would be a great man still, but Hanna penniless could only be considered an ordinary American citizen.

THE press announces the death of Dr Lydia E. Pinkham. Her decease is ascribed to those "female weaknesses," which she claimed to be so successful in the treatment of. The judicious advertisement of which treatment has made her name a "household word," and netted the doctor large gains.

THE West Virginia Illustrated News, of Ronceverte, says that it is the only paper in the land in which it lives that tells the truth, and this is the fifth issue of the journal. We think that it is too soon to begin bragging about its character for truth and veracity in the neighborhood in which it lives, or it has not lasted long enough.

THE Prince of Wales and three friends killed 800 pheasants in one day recently. This is but a sequel to his "knocking over" about 1200 rabbits on the Marlborough estate not long ago. George T. Angell of Our Dumb Animals, will certainly "vex his righteous soul" over this heartless cruelty and wickedness in high places. A man must be thoughtless indeed to take pleasure in such wholesale turning to corruption of happy living creatures.

THE Alderson Man has gone in for illustrations, as well as the Illustrated Ronceverte News. Last week it illustrated an account of a bear hunt, and labels the picture of a striped tiger, (felis tigris,) "Savage Black Bear;" meaning thereby the American black bear, (ursus Americanus.) It has also a lamb and pig, such as are used to illustrate McGuffey's first reader. With the exception of the mistake of the tiger, the article is a valuable addition to natural history.

J. W. GOSHORN, late Clerk of the County Court of Kanawha, was indicted in four cases for felony by a recent grand jury—for stealing road orders; for falsifying record to enable an administratrix to qualify on a bond of $1000, instead of $10,000; for receiving a county order of $403.30 for work he did not do; and for changing the assessment of the estate of Jacob Goshorn.

HON JOHN W. MASON, of Fairmont, one of the leading Republicans of the State, suggests that the question of Senator Faulkner's successor be chosen by a State convention called for that purpose, to meet next May or June. There was once an old negro who caught a fine rabbit, and as he was taking it out of the trap he made all manner of mental arrangements as to how he should cook it. Unfortunately the rabbit slipped through his hands and ran away. It may result in this way, or it might be like Senator Hanna's Toledo convention. First elect your legislature, and then you will know better what color the United States Senator will be.

HANNA IN TROUBLE.

We are all interested in the fate of Senator Marcus A. Hanna and his unruly legislature. The first vote for United States Senator will be taken Wednesday of this week and the people of Marlinton will crowd the post-office next Saturday to get the papers that will give the result of the first day's battle, as they would if there were a State election on hand, or an international prize-fight. Since the war times no man has made himself so baleful to those of another political faith. In 1896, when the Democratic party was robbed of all its rich men and had hardly means to communicate its intentions and expectations to its own partisans, Hanna, as the financier of the Republican party, amassed rich men and corporations in a most open way, and in the plenitude of his power made our well directed schemes seem small and insignificant in comparison to the magnificence of the Republican party.

The farmer, and other classes of poor men, rebel against the power brought by the centralization of wealth, and seem to know or feel by instinct that this system of absorption cannot last much the breaking point in time, and there can only come a revolution and all the situation which follow the uprising of a people who have never before been really in power. America is a unique thinker, here grave opprobrium on this score. Hanna is the embodiment of all that is hateful to those who think that money can be factitiously American. We may be complaining how terribly hot such is the state of feeling against him. It would give many people, for this service, the most profound gratification to know that

JUDGE HOMER A. HOLT DEAD.

Judge Holt, who has been in feeble health for some time, died at his home in Lewisburg, last Friday. As judge of this circuit for two terms, he was intimately connected with the people of Pocahontas County, and he had many friends and admirers among our people. As a lawyer he was one of the ablest judges the State has ever produced, and his courtesy and kindness to the members of his courts greatly endeared him to them. His consideration for young lawyers had the result of making him regarded by them almost in the light of a patron saint.

He started in life poor, but died a very wealthy man. He leaves surviving him three children, two sons and a daughter. From the Charleston Gazette we take the following account of his life:

Homer A. Holt was born in Parkersburg, April 27, 1831. He was the son of Jonathan Holt and Eliza (Wilson) Holt, and his father was one of the pioneer ministers of the Methodist Episcopl church in the central part of what is now West Virginia. Judge Holt received as good an education as the schools of that day and country afforded. He attended Rector College, at Pruntytown, for three years under the tuition of Dr Charles Wheeler, and completed his academical course at the University of Virginia during the sessions of 1849-50 and 1850-51. He taught school at Weston for three years and studied law with his brother in-law, Colonel B. W. Bryne, in 1852 and 1853, and was admitted to the bar in 1853. He located at Braxton Court House and went into partnership with his brother-in-law, Colonel Byrne. During the years 1854, 1855 and 1856 he was deputy surveyor for the counties of Nicholas and Braxton. In the early part of 1862 Mr Holt was arrested as a Confederate sympathizer and was sent to Camp Chase, Ohio. In 1863 he was sent down the Ohio and Mississippi rivers to be exchanged at Vicksburg, but before reaching that point the exchange of prisoners was stopped, and Mr Holt was taken to Camp Douglas, Chicago. From Chicago he was afterwards removed to City Point, Virginia, where he was exchanged. He immediately joined Jenkins Brigade, then at Salem, Virginia, afterwards commanded by General McCausland, now of Point Pleasant, West Virginia, and remained with his command until the close of the war in 1865, when when he returned to Braxton Court House. He was chosen to represent Braxton county in the convention which met in Charleston in 1872, to revise the State Constitution, and served with fidelity and distinction on the Judiciary and Land Titles committees, representing the chairman of the latter on the committee of general revision. In 1872 he was elected for a term of eight years as judge of the 8th judicial circuit, and was again elected in 1880, as judge of the tenth, a new circuit that had been formed. In 1890 he was appointed by Governor Fleming to fill a vacancy on the bench of the Supreme Court, occasioned by the resignation of A. C. Snyder, and was in 1892 elected to the same office to fill out the unexpired term, which ended January 1, 1897. Judge Holt declined a re-election and retired to his home in Lewisburg. He was among the ablest judges that ever sat on the supreme bench of the State, and his opinions were favorably commented upon by the various law journals of the country.

AGRICULTURAL PAPER.

It is edited by writers of practical experience, who know what farming means and has farmers want in an agricultural journal. It contains regular reports of the work of the Agricultural experiment stations throughout the country, of the proceedings of farmers' clubs and institutions, and the knowledge of new methods and ideas in agriculture. Its Market Reports, Poultry Department, and "Questions and Answers" are particularly valuable to country readers. Every issue contains Stories, Poems, Household and Fashion columns, a variety of interesting and selected miscellaneous matter, and other features which make it a welcome visitor in city and country homes alike.

Local Events.

CARDS are out for the marriage of J. A. Reed and Miss Elva Friel, January 12.

THE first break up of ice of the season occurred Monday morning. The river and creek rose too fast for a gorge to form.

MARRIED: At the bride's father's, Mr John Connaly to Miss Blanche Scott, by Rev John H Dills.

THERE seems to a hitch somewhere in rail road affairs that makes the prospect for a railroad rather problematical.

BEFORE the recent thaw, the snow on William's River was reported to be 14 inches deep. The lumber jobbers were anxiously expecting a flood which they no doubt got.

Amos Barlow, Esq., slaughtered two July porkers on January 5th that weighed 177and 187 pounds, respectively. Mr J. H. Doyle killed three March porkers at the same time that averaged 284 pounds.

LEOFORD BARTLETT, who shot a lunch room last fall, has been released from jail on bail. His victim is well and circumstances unlie to make his friends hopeful he will escape without severe penalty.

MRS FRANCIS MCCOY, of Beaver Dam, is suffering from a terrible abcess of the liver, and her life has been disparied of. An operation was contemplated, but, the decision being left with her, she decided not to perform it.

HON J. N. CAMDEN, one of the promoters of the Elk River Railroad, confirms the statement that this company may build the line as a branch of the West Virginia and Pittsburg road during 1898.—Manufacturers' Record.

THE Board of Education request all trustees in Edray district who have not secured one of the new maps for their school houses to send to S. B. Moore's depository where one map for every school house in the district has been placed.

ROBERT M. PRITCHARD'S store at Healing Spring was entered last week. The safe was taken to the cellar and the contents, $40 in money and and a watch chain, were taken. There seems to be some prospect for arresting the guilty persons.

ALBERT THOMSON, father of Frank C. Thomson, who was shot by Col Eastham, has brought asit against C. O. Strieby, of Davis, one of Eastham's attorneys, for $10,000 damages; claiming that Strieby circulated a report that he had hired witnesses to swear falsely against Eastham.

WILLIS BURNER, while working at a lumber camp at Horton, was badly hurt by a falling tree. He was hurt about the head and back and his leg was broken below the knee, the bone protruding four inches thro the calf of his leg. Two horses have been killed at the same camp by falling trees.

IT may interest the readers of The Times to learn that the manufacture of paper from West Virginia wood is greatly developing. The latest postal cards will be of paper manufactured at Piedmont. The International Bible Society gets paper there. Harper, Munsey, McClure and publishers of other periodicals use Piedmont paper.

MR LEE BURNER, of Travelers Repose, can say as the patient man of the Bible once said: "The days of affliction have taken hold upon me," during the past few weeks. About half of his sheep were poisoned by lizard, a valuable horse, just purchased, was disabled by the ice, a son fractured his leg, a grandchild came near perishing in the fire and Mrs Burner has been dangerously ill for months.

S. J. PAINE, of Academy, was in Lewisburg last week attending to the road case. He has been engineering to get the tolls removed on the Lewisburg and Marlin's Bottom turn pike for some time. The case was brought on by a notice to the toll contractors on the part of the county court to appear and show cause why the toll should not be removed. The court passed on the question until next Saturday.

THE West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company, of Piedmont, has been organized. It has purchased the extensive plants and stock of the West Virginia Pulp Company at Tilton, and the Piedmont Pulp and Paper Company, and the West Virginia Paper Company at Parsons. The new company is officered as follows: President, Wm. Luke, of Wilmington, Delaware; vice president and general manager, John D. Luke, New York; secretary, David B. Luke, of Piedmont; secretary, James B. Luke, of New York. It is said that this new mill will result in the establishing of a pulp and paper mill on Williams River.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Mr and Mrs G. L. Hannah, of Yelk, made a trip to Locust this week.

Miss Mabel Ligon spent her holidays at Covington with her friend Miss Clara McAllister.

We regret to learn that Mrs J. T. McAllister at the Warm Springs is seriously ill.

E. S. Moomaw has severed his connexion with the drug firm of Sydenstricker & Co., Lewisburg.

January 5, Miss Myrtle Williams, daughter of Erasmus Williams, near the Warm Springs, was married to Mr John Criser, by Rev W C White.

Otis Warwick, from Green Bank, has moved to Mrs Carter's, near Huntersville, and is assisting in the management of the McLaughlin place.

The Marlinton Literary Society.

This society was regularly organized Friday night. The object is the study of literature, and the order of exercise will consist each meeting of some author selected previously. Each member is required to give a short quotation from the author in question, and besides there will be readings, essays and recitations. The author selected for Friday night is Longfellow.

The officers of the society are: Mrs William Mann, President; Miss Fannie McLaughlin, vice-president; Miss Gertrude Bird, secretary.

Special features for next meeting will be an address by N. C. McNeil, an essay by S. B. Scott, jr., and reading by E. H. Smith.

The public is invited.

Death of Rev S. C. Morgan.

Rev S. C. Morgan, pastor of the McMillion circuit of the Virginia Conference, died last Friday. A few Sundays since, while on his way to fill an appointment, he rode along a lonely pathway. His horse slipped on an icy spot of road and fell with him, breaking the rider's leg and otherwise injuring him. He was compelled to lie on the frozen ground until he was discovered. He contracted pneumonia from the exposure, and this caused his death. He entered the ministry late in life, but was well-known as an able and earnest worker. He commanded the respect of all who knew him by his consistent life, and he had no other thought than to do his duty to his people. He seems to have been a man set apart for his high profession.

OBITUARY.

Rev S. C. Morgan, so well and favorably known by many who will read this, died at the home of Mr George Whiting, near Falling Spring, Greenbrier County, the 7th instant. He was near fifty years old, and in the ninth year of his ministry in the Methodist Episcopal Church. Five of these years he was pastor of Edray church, and nearly four of Greenbrier. On each of these charges he did a work that will "follow" him. We have never known a man of whom it could be more truthfully be said: "he was loved by everybody and lamented by all."

He was a good preacher, a faithful pastor, a kind father, a loving companion,—"a whole man"; and when the summons came he was ready. He gave his family his dying blessing; gave charge concerning his body; commend his spirit to God, and sweetly "fell on sleep."

His remains were buried at Oak Grove, Greenbrier County.

May the God of all consolation comfort his stricken family. L. S.

HUNTERSVILLE.

The people are generally well in this neighborhood.

Eddie McLaughlin, who was at home for the holidays, has returned to school, near Dunmore.

C. P. Corbett, who has been laid up with the rheumatism, is able to be out again.

Mr and Mrs Jasper Chestnut, of Beth County, were visiting relatives and friends on Browns Creek last week.

John Kelly, of Browns Mountain, has seven red foxes, which he caught last March, when quite small. He has raised them and are now fat grown.

Uriah Bird, Esq., of Marlinton, was up doing some surveying for H. F. McClaughlin, who sold a tract of mineral and timber land.

The most ingenious and industrious woman in this section of the county is Mrs Sallie Moore. Besides attending to her household ward, she does the shoemaking and mending, makes bridles and lines and does her own carding, weaving and spinning, and makes all the garments for her family for every day wear. If there is another woman in Pocahontas County who can beat this we would like to know who she is.

J. E. McLaughlin was over in the fork of Knapp's near Edray, last week with a view of purchasing a farm.

DUNMORE.

Happy New Year, mum.

Billy Sheets is off for Beverly.

Rev C. M. Caldwell is improving some.

Robert McLaughlin and Sid left for Staunton today.

Dr J. P. Moomaw is off for Baltimore.

Some lot buyers have been in our town.

Joe Taylor is home from Hottonsville.

Frank and Emma Taylor were at Edray last week.

Henry Sheets brought a load of flour from Egypt, Monday.

Jacob Kerr and C. B. Swecker have found near Dunmore a white and blue Sulphur spring.

J. P. Wooddell has done some good work on the road between Dunmore and Green Bank.

A big wedding will take place this week if the river falls, Grimes and Turner.

Mr P. D. Yeager is improving, and his hand will not have to be amputated.

E. M. Arbogast is looking for timber land in our neighborhood. This is the time to sell if you have anything to sell.

Socrates made a speech at the Christmas tree at Frost, and died. Mr and Mrs Santa Claus went to sleep, and had a good time generally.

Andy Oliver shot a fine bear last week. Shot 47 rounds and hit the bear 5 times. Wash Oliver thinks the bear got the sheep he was accused of stealing.

The holidays are past and gone. But very little busthead, and the result no heads busted. There were some fine hop step and jumps and still the good work goes on.

Will Jackson, Walter Bird, Cris McLaughlin, and Mahlin Keirn all jump 90 feet in a circle—all boys and girls. And strange to that there are Keirns in the winter season.

We can furnish the people of this county with the best bed-spring made.

JOHN SLICKHAMMER.

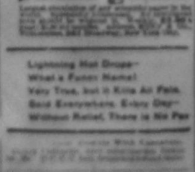
Apt Quotation.

The is sometimes more wit in the application to the business in hand of words already chosen for another purpose, than in the invention of an appropriate phrase. Bishop Whipple—according to the Church News—loved to tell this story:

A devout colored preacher whose heart was aglow with missionary zeal gave notice to his congregation that in the evening an offertory would be taken for missions and asked for liberal gifts. A selfish, well-to-do man in his congregation said to him before the service:

"Yer gwine to kill dis church ef yer goes on sayin' give! give! No church can stan' it. Yer gwine to kill it."

After the sermon the colored minister said to the people:



"Brother Jones told me I was gwine to kill dis here church ef I kep' a-askin' yer to give, but, my brethren, churches does'n dat way. Ef anybody knows of a church dat died 'cause it's been given' too much to de Lord, I'll be very much obliged ef my brother will tell me what dat church is, for I'se gwine to visit it, and I'll climb on de walls of dat church, under de light of my goods and cry—'Blessed be de dead dat die in de Lord.'"

The Cristmas tree at Frost was a success. Also the entertainment given by Professor Lantz and others. The tree was most beautifully decorated and some very handsome presents on it. The building was crowded with people from far and near. We are thankful that Frost has had one Christmas tree where there was no shooting fire-crackers, drinking, etc., going on—that's all.

Mr John Lantz was the recipient of a handsome present off of the Christmas tree, with the following prescription.

He that would a widow woo, must not dally;
He must make hay while the sun doth shine,
He must not stand up with her—shall I,—shall I,—
But boldly say, Widow, thou must be mine!

The INTELLIGENCER is in its forty-sixth year, and throughout the period of its existance it has been carrying information to the homes of the State. The year 1898 will be a history making year scarcely less in importance than those which have preceded it. The first regular session of the Fifty fifth Congress will be notable, as it will witness the debates and action on vital questions that affect the people the proper-ed reforms in our monetary system, the Cuban question, Hawaiian annexation, and many foreign relations now pending.

The year 1898 will be important politically. A new State legislature and a new Congress will be elected. The campaign will involve vital State and National issues, and in West Virginia the choice of a U. S. Senator

CATASTROPHE AVERTED.

The Clerk Was Just About to Call a Policeman.

They were two delightly dressed, chic girls, and they were evidently out for a giddy afternoon, says the New York Telegram. They strolled down Broadway into Herald square with the gayest of smiles on their faces and the sauciest of looks in their dancing eyes. They stopped at a drug store in which a mammoth frosty soda fountain stands in all its glittering temptation, and soon became engrossed in two delicious, creamy, frothy mixtures.

They chatted as they drank and slowly ate the ice cream with the long-distance spoons with which each alluring glass is provided.

At last the ice cream soda was finished, and the girls went laughing out into the street, when suddenly a look of consternation overspread the face of one of them, and she exclaimed:

"Oh, Kitty!"

Then she rushed back into the drug store, and, laying hold of the edge of the counter, began to pull it.

The other followed in amazement. The soda water manipulator and the drug clerks regarded the tugging young woman with astonishment, then fear. Still she pulled at the counter till it appeared to be in imminent danger of coming loose.

At length, when the proprietor was thinking seriously of calling in a policeman, something gave way and the young woman fell back with an exclamation of relief and popped something into her mouth.

"Well, whatever is the matter with you?" asked her companion.

"Nothing," answered the other, innocently. "I nearly forgot my chewing gum."

KINSMEN IN THE SENATE.

White, of California, and Mallory, of Florida, First Cousins.

If one man of a family gets to be senator he ought to be accounted fortunate. When two men of a family find seats in the senate together it is a remarkable event, and deserves recording, says the Washington Post.

Stephen Mallory White is a senator from California and Stephen Russell Mallory is a senator from Florida. There is more than a mere coincidence in a similarity of the names. They are cousins. Senator Mallory's father and Senator White's mother were brother and sister. It is a little curious that the two senators should represent states as far apart as it is possible for them to be—one on the Atlantic and the other on the Pacific coast.

The grandfather of the two senators was one of the earliest settlers of Florida, while their grandmother was a Spanish woman of fine stock, considerable beauty and remarkable constitution, retaining to her old age all of her faculties. Much of Senator White's steadiness comes from his grandmother. He was not born in Florida, for his father and mother crossed the plains in 1850, attracted to California by the reports of newly-discovered gold. The senator was born in San Francisco in 1853. The Mallorys, on the other hand, remained in Florida, and now the whirligig of time and the strange happenings of politics reunite the families in the senate.

REMEMBERED HER CHILDREN.

Eloped Fifty Years Ago, But Willed Property to Her Offspring.

During the gold excitement of '49 a young Irishman named Thomas Hogan settled in Calaveras county, Cal., with his wife. He became a miner and amassed considerable property before long. His widow afterward married John C. Scribner, of San Andreas. He died a few years ago, says the New York World, and left his property to his widow. The unwelcomed woman came into the possession of about $30,000. She died a few months ago and left the bulk of her property to her "nieces and nephews" in Ireland, naming two men and two women.

The lawyer appointed to administer on the estate wrote to the addresses given, and learned that two of the four were dead, and the remaining two had no knowledge of an aunt in California or any other place. An investigation developed the fact that the supposed Mrs. Hogan was really Mrs. Richard Barnes, and that she had left her husband and four children to elope with the young Irishman. She had kept the skeleton in her closet hidden for nearly 50 years, and even in death she tried to protect the secret by referring to her children as her nieces and nephews.

Field Glass Range Finder.

An improved range finder for field glasses has a flat plate, subdivided to correspond with the focus of the glasses, rigidly attached near the rear end of the adjusting screw; a fixed pointer secured near the screw to the frame of the glass indicating the adjustment upon a dial. A small wheel upon the adjusting screw turns it so that it will readily focus the glasses for various distances, and enabling the user also to determine readily the speed of advancing or withdrawing objects.

Physical Power of Niagara.

It has been calculated that a very strong man exerting himself very violently can for a few minutes work at a rate of one-fifth horse power, but the average continuous output of 10 strong working men working for ten hours a day would not probably exceed one horse power. With this in view, it is not exaggeration to say that the power of Niagara far exceeds the physical power which the whole human race is capable of exerting continuously.

Week-End Calidays.

A TRIFLE CAUTIOUS.

No City Man Could Get Ahead of Him.

A typical farmer from the interior, who had evidently come to the city to spend some of the proceeds of one dollar wheat, worked cautiously into one of the better-class hotels, says the Detroit Free Press. One of the bell boys saw him weighted down with a satchel and coat and umbrella and, as was his custom, darted toward the door to take the visitor's burdens and gilet him to the clerk's desk. He reached down to grasp the satchel. Quick as a flash the old man's right arm shot out with his umbrella and just as Mr. Bell Boy took hold of the satchel the umbrella came down on his back with a whack.

"Take that, young fellow!" remarked the visitor. "You can't grab things away from me. I've lived to be forty yew fellers work it. Grab a hand bag an' skip afore a man has a chance to think. But I fooled ye this time, gosh darn ye! Yew git out o' here right quick."

The old man raised his umbrella again threateningly and the bell boy, much discomfited, slid toward his seat, while the farmer once more cautiously advanced to the desk. The clerk reached out warmly to grasp his prospective guest's hand. But it didn't grasp.

"Young man," said the old fellow, yew're a trifle previous, ain't ye? When I git ready tew shake, I'll let ye know. Yew don't know me, an' I don't know yew, an' I kerry that paw tew yer self. There, now, gimme a quill an' I'll show ye who I am."

He got the quill and registered, but bell boys and clerks gave their guest a full right of way in either direction.

DISTANCE MERCURY REACHES.

The Thermometer Bulb Contains Enough to Stretch Miles.

While almost anyone knows about the principles on which ordinary thermometers operate, there are a number of things about the little instrumen which are not generally known, and which are of a great deal of interest says the Boston Transcript. One of th most peculiar of these is the questio of the length of tube which the mercur in the bulb of an ordinary thermomete would fill if it were stretched out in single column the size of that in th tube.

Most people, when asked how lon this would be, would probably say fro five to fifteen feet, while as a matter o fact this column of mercury would i an extremely delicate instrument b miles in length. The reason of this i that the column of mercury, while i appears quite large in reality of almos infinitesimal size. If the tube of a thermometer is broken, one is at first at loss to see where the mercury goes i but a close examination will disclo a fine line, much thinner than a hai running across the end of the tub and this is one end of a little alit i which the mercury rises. As it has i flat side toward the eye, it appears t be quite large, and the convexity of th outside of the tube, through which i is seen, magnifies it, and gives it th rounded appearance which is so deceptive. The reason why the slit is mad so small is to give the greatest ratio o result for the expansion of the mercur in the bulb.

WILD HORSES A NUISANCE.

Animals Commit Considerable Damage to Fences in Search of Water.

Many Indian horses are being killed on the reservation by barbed wire fences, says the Spokane Spokesman-Review. The degenerate horses, abandoned by their Indian owners, have become an acknowledged nuisance upon the public ranges. They roam about in large herds and are a wild and untrained lot. Their watering places have been fenced up, and it is hard to divert them from the runways of a lifetime. Each herd is led by a patriarch stallion, who holds the command with a fidelity that would be a credit to military tactics. There herds range on the hills, far from water, seeking the springs only once or twice a week. Their runs are sometimes as far as fifteen miles. The stallion drives the herd to water, following in their flying wake and driving every straggling beast with hoof and teeth, pushing them at a high rate of speed much after the manner of buffaloes. Mad with thirst and blinded with dust they rush into the wire fences that cross the old trails, the leaders being driven with such force that the strands are cut and posts are severed, but the fences go down and the herd proceeds over plowed fields and growing crops. As a result the reservation is covered with dead and dying horses, every section reporting the same scene and all owing the victims to fare as best they may.

City of Big Windmills.

Amsterdam, the capital of the Netherlands, is situated at the confluence of the River Amstel and the Y arm of the Zuyder Zee, called the Y (pronounced eye). It is a forest of lofty windmills to the form of towers, steeples, pyramids, truncated cones and several eccentric structures, their enormous arms and whirling above the roofs like a cloud of monster birds beating their wings over the city. It is computed that there are no fewer than 12,000 windmills in Holland, chiefly employed in pumping and dredging. Many are of vast dimensions, each sail sometimes exceeding 60 feet in length.

The Strongest Chain.

The greatest and strongest chain ever made has just recently left the Pipon works, Dudley, England. It is intended for crane work at Chatham wharf, and consists of oval links forged severally of 2½-inch rods, each link being 20 inches long and 9 wide. Should there ever be a machine available for testing a chain of such dimensions, the test was made by actual comparison of a weight of 500,000 pounds from each link.

The Osborne

SPRING-TOOTH HARROW.

The frames are made in one piece of steel angle bar, and formed to withstand all strain without buckling or warping. The teeth in this harrow are so spaced that they will not trail each other, Pulverizing the ground thoroughly. The steel pipe tooth bars are mounted in malleable boxes secured to the frame, and will not bend or break. The pecul ar shape of the teeth carring two thirds about the bar gives the greatest amount of spring possible without straining the bolts, and because of their shape and hardening are stronger than used on any other harrow. By the levers the depth of work can be regulated while the harrow is in motion. The draft is steady and direct as the harrow has no side motion.

Biographic Notes.

AARON MOORE, one of the older sons of Moses Moore the pioneer, hunter and scout, after his marriage with Catherine Johnson, daughter of John Johnson, one of the early settlers near Marlinton, first lived near Frost. But for the greater part of his life he dwelt on the west bank of the Greenbrier, four miles above Marlinton, where he had settled in the woods. By arduous industry and judicious economy Mr and Mrs Moore built up a prosperous home. The property is now owned by Uriah Bird, Esq.

Their sons were John, James, Samuel, Thomas, Andrew Jackson, Henry, William Daniel and George Claiborne, and the daughters were Mary, Elizabeth, Catherine, Eliza, and Melinda; eight sons and five daughters.

John Moore married Jane, daughter of Col John Baxter and, settled in the woods near Marlinton. Their children were Aaron, William, Theodore, Washington, and one daughter, Cathrine, now Mrs Thomas Auldridge, near Indian Draft.

James Moore married Anne McNeill, daughter of the late Squire John McNeill, on Dry Branch of Swago, and settled in the woods near Marlinton, on property owned by John R. Moore. Their children were John Register, Frances, Rachel, George, Henry, Naomi, and Nelson. John Register lives on the homestead. His wife was Mary Baxter, daughter of the late William Baxter, Esq., near Edray. Rachel is now Mrs George M. Kee, near Marlinton.

Samuel Moore, of Aaron Moore, the early settler, married Nancy Beale and settled on the summit of Marlin Mountain, in the unbroken forest, and killed ten rattlesnakes on the first acre cleared about his cabin. Their children were Lucas, Martha, Catherine, Margaret, Jennie, William Thomas, George, Annie, Rachel, Kenney, and Melinda; eight daughters and four sons. Mrs Moore was a daughter of Thomas Beale who came from Maryland soon after the war of 1812. He claimed to have been a sailor in early life and was one of the defenders of Baltimore, and saw the engagement immortalized by the "Star Spangled Banner." The farm opened up by Samuel Moore is visible from so many points that a lady from Florida called it a revolving farm.

William D. Moore settled on Elk Mountain in the woods. He was married three times. His first wife was Rebecca Sharp; her children were Matthias, Charles L., Elizabeth, Mary, Jacob and Nancy. The second wife was Mary Ann Auldridge, daughter of Thomas Auldridge, Sen. Her one child was Mary Ann Moore.

The third wife was Hannah Beverridge. Her children were Amanda, now Mrs S. D. Hannah, on Elk Summit, now Mrs John Gibson, near Mary's Chapel; Effie, now Mrs A. Page Gay, near Clover Lick; Etta, Joseph and Ellis.

Thomas Moore, a noted rail splitter and fence builder, never married. He opened up a nice farm on Back Alleghany, where he now resides.

Amber Jackson Moore was married twice. The first wife was Abigail (Abbie) McLaughlin, daughter of the late Major Daniel McLaughlin, near Green Bank. Her children were Ernest and Annie, now Mrs D. Brewster on Back Alleghany. The second wife was Rachel, daughter of the late Charles Grimes, near Frost. Her children were Virginia, now Mrs Silas on Hanging Creek; Forest, Samuel, Thomas and Elmer, a teacher of Schools.

A. J. Moore settled in the woods on back Alleghany and opened up a fine farm.

Henry Moore married Elizabeth Auldridge, daughter of Thomas Auldridge, Sen., and settled in the woods near Dilliehead and opened up two nice farms. Their only son, Andrew Moore, lives at the homestead.

George C. Moore married Rachel Duncan on Stony Creek. Her father, Henry Duncan, came from Rockbridge, and was one of the carpenters that worked on the court house at Huntersville. Mr Moore lives on the "Young Place," near Hamlin Chapel, on Stony Creek.

Elizabeth Moore became Mrs William Auldridge. These persons settled in the woods near Indian Draft. Their children were Hanson, Melinda and Eliza. Eliza died not long since. Hanson and Melinda are living on the nice homestead opened up by their worthy parents.

Catherine Moore was married to John Burr and they settled in Burr's Valley where she is now living. Their children are Charles, Rebecca, Mary, Sally, Alvin Henry, Fannie, Ida, now Mrs Darnall, and Lillie, now Mrs Peter Dow. Mr Burr died suddenly in F. J. Snyder's law office in Huntersville. This is mentioned to correct a mistake in reference to William Burr in the sketch of the Lightner family.

Eliza Moore became Mrs Price McComb late of Huntersville. They settled in the woods on Cummings Creek densely covered with white pine and opened up virtually several nice farms. Their children were Nancy, Charles, George, Wyllis, Andrew Beckley, a merchant at Huntersville; Henry, on the homestead, and Alice, now Mrs George Wagner, at Huntersville.

Melinda Moore was the second wife of the late Capt William Cochran, on Stony Creek. Her children are William Cochran, Jr., on the homestead, and Catherine Jane now Mrs Giles Sharp, near Verdant Valley. Melinda Moore's second marriage was with Joseph Barlow who lives on the Cochran homestead.

Thus have we tried to illustrate the family history of Aaron Moore *and Catherine Moore, with the as*sistance of their son, Geore C. Moore and Rachel his wife.

It is instructive to reflect on the memoirs of such a relationship so largely composed of patient, industrious people, accomplishing what they have done in developing our county. Nine members of this family settled in the woods, and by their efforts more than a thousand acres of wilderness land has been made to rejoice and blossom as the rose.

Mary died in early womanhood, regarded by her sister as their special favorite. Two, while not settling in the woods, have shown by their industry and enterprise how to make the best of more favorable opportunities, and improved what came into their hands already opened up and improved.

It is next to impossible for many of us, my worthy readers, to appreciate what it all cost weary toil, wear and tear of muscle and bodily vigor and self sacrifice to achieve what they have. Nevertheless, the oldest people tell us that there was more real contentment and satisfaction and enjoyment in life then than now. For there was a felt community of interest and harmonious help and truly sympathetic endeavor that seemed to have a charm and no apparent vice. There it seemed a genuine pleasure to show favors and render assistance. But now pay seems to be expected for most every thing that may be done in the way of helpful service.

Like most of the persons of his time, Mr Moore was a successful hunter and he made it profitable. One of his memorable adventures occurred while on his way to search for the body of his lamented neighbor James W. Twyman, who was drowned in Tinney Creek on January 11, 1841, and was not found until January 19. Mr Moore found on the west bank of the river while Tinney Creek is on the east side. Some one shouted the sad news to him across the raging river and as soon as it seemed safe to cross, he went up the west bank to cross at Joseph Friel's. As he was threading his way along the snow covered path, his dog came upon the trail of a panther and treed it in a lofty pine near the summit of the river ridge, about opposite Friels. He shot the animal, one the largest of its kind, left it where it fell to be attended to later on, and then hurried away on his sorrowful duty, canoeing the river at high tide. In a few hours the body of the drowned neighbor was found stranded on a large rock, that is still pointed out, not very far above the mouth of the creek.

When Mr Moore died, his remains were taken to the Dufficld grave yard. His faithful wife survived him a few years and then was carried to rest by his side, where they are now sleeping the years away in hope of a blessed resurrection. May they stand in their lot at the end of the days.

"It is the the simple truth that Arthur Henry Hallam was a spirit so exceptional that everything with which he was brought into relation during his shortened passage thro this world came to be, thro this contact, glorified by the touch of *the ideal." Such is the character*ization which Mr Gladstone gives to the subject of Tennyson's "In Memoriam," in the fine article he has written for the New Year's number of THE YOUTH'S COMPANION. The article is illustrated by a striking portrait of Mr Gladstone photographed expressly for THE COMPANION, and a beautiful copy of the Chantry bust of Hallam. The other contents of this number are rich in variety and interest, and include an interesting view of Mr Gladstone at eighty-eight, by William E. Riding, a capital newspaper story and other fiction and miscellany of the best kind.

SIXTEEN thousand dollars have been subscribed for the new Republican paper at Charleston. A. B. White, of that city, puts in $6,000; W. M. O. Dawson, $6,000; J. J. Peterson, $3,000; and Attorney General Rucker, $1,000. They will buy out the plant of the Charleston Star-Tribune.

At the Republican indignation meeting in Columbus, Ohio on last Monday Rev Mr Kelly, who opened the demonstration with prayer, asked the Lord to defeat "unholy combinations." It is to be hoped that this may quiet the assumption, always rife in such close contests, that earthly means were to be employed to determine the result; and it is further to be hoped that the *din of the conflict may now sub*side.—Exchange.

THEY arrived, with their trunks, at a South Eleventh street boarding house last week, and, from all appearances, were a happy married couple. Before the new arrivals had been installed two days the servant who cleans the rooms mysteriously confided to the downstairs help that "Them air new boarders is queer." When pressed for an explanation, she said that she had several times overheard the man threaten "to cut the foul hear.' out of the woman, whom he accused of treachery. Of course, these strange proceedings reached the boarding mistress' ears, and she decided to take the first excuse for giving the the pair notice to leave. The gossiping chambermaid was told that the next time she heard the new boarders quarreling she was to report instantly. That afternoon down came the maid, and excitedly told her mistress that they were at it again. Both maid and mistress then went up to listen. They distinctly heard the man say: "You have had you last chance; prepare to die for the arrows I have stuffed at your heart." The baldheaded sent the girl for a policeman. Luckily, a big reserve was stationed at the corner, and soon he, too, was listening at the door. The woman's pleading tones could be heard, and finally the gruff voice chimed in: "Now, don't rip, with this dagger just dis." "No yet!" shouted the other, as he crashed through the door to prevent murder. There, sitting in an easy chair, smoking cigarettes while they read novels, confined on a sofa, both with rolls of unexpected. Their astonishment was to be seen, when they explained that they were going to [illegible] their parts.—Philadelphia Record.

Notions.

AS the school-boy's composition would start, "There are many kinds of Indians"; but the old settlers divided them into classes, the bad and the good, or, as Amelia Rives would say, "The quick and the dead."

James Fenimore Cooper wrote about good Indians,—"The last of the Mohicans," and others,—and he was a competent judge. He was skilled in the arts of the Indian in hunting, trapping, and knowledge of the woods. One admirer says that "he could track a wolf in the morning by the broken cobwebs along its path"; and he has left us a legacy in books that is invaluable. He knew about the things, and was able to tell what he knew.

On the other hand, authorities generally agree that while the In*dian is interesting he is repulsive.* The most expressive term used by the Indian slayers in whom we delight, was "reptyles."

It does not take a very vivid imagination on the part of him who is fishing in a trout pool in some of our mountain streams, far from the haunts of men, to conjure up a file of Indians gliding along the shore of the stream, as they assuredly have done some time. The surroundings are identical. There is no sign of the encroachments of civilization. The man with his fishing-rod is the only human being in miles. Then why should it be hard to call up a party of warriors appearing in sight as they round the bend. When one is in this lonely situation, with the endless sound of the rush of waters and the rustle of the woods, he can hardly tell "what dreams" may come," or how intensely real they may be.

Lately the Smithsonian Institution has been compiling a vast amount of information about the original inhabitants of America. It has translated their legends, which were told around camp fires for generations. The Indian languages have very limited vocabularies. The most of the distinctive languages have less than a thousand words. A great many of the tribes, credited with different tongue, speak the same language varied by dialect. Accent and emphasis played a tremendous part in their speech, and this, it is said, cannot be conveyed to any one by a translation. In this article we wish to give some of the Indian's songs and stories.

The Indians have a profound be*lief in mythology. They are as* cunning as serpents in some things and as simple as children in others. One of the myths most widely believed in is the Thunder Bird. Most of the tribes believe in a huge bird which has its nest on the highest and most inaccessible peaks, and which causes thunder and lightning at will. The eagle on the United States money is believed by the Indians to be a representation of this thunder bird, and they prefer the silver dollar with its magnificent thunder bird to any other denomination of coin.

As an example of the song of the Indian we select one about the Thunder Bird. The reader will object to it because it lacks variety, but the others are oppressed with sameness even worse than this one. It is called: "Tahu na ana nis hana."

Na nisa na, na nisa na,
Na nani na, tahu na ana nishana
Tahu na aga nis hana,
Na nisa na, na nisa na.
Na nisa na, tahuna ana nis hana
Ta heti ani hana.

Translation.

My children, my children,
It is I who make thunder as I circle about,
The thunder as I circle about.
My children, my children,
It is I who make the loud thunder as I circle about,
The loud thunder as I circle about.

It is sung to a sprightly tune in quick time.

The Indian tales are preserved by constant telling from one generation to another. They would usually delight very young children. We will give outlines of some stories. This is the legend of the first meeting of the Indians and whites. The Indians saw some large boats come to the land and white-skinned people come on shore. The Indians offered them some tobacco, and the whites in return brought out some liquor. The Indians were afraid to drink, so they selected four old men who were useless and made them test it. Pretty soon the old men became very gay. A short time afterwards *they laid down and died. The In*dians then decided to kill the white people, but as they were making ready the old men came back to life and said: "The liquor is good; we have felt very happy; you must try it too." At this time the white people showed them how to boil water in kettles. The kettles were big. They saw some little kettles (cups) and asked the white men for them so that when the cups grew they would have big kettles too. They got the little kettles, but they never grew any.

THE CATFISH.

The catfish in a river saw a moose come down to the stream daily to eat grass. The chief of the catfish said: "We will watch for him and kill and eat him." They surrounded the moose next day and the chief speared the moose's leg. The moose said: What is it that has thrust a spear into my leg?" Looking down he saw he was surrounded by catfish and he trampled on them. They all swam away, but since that day they have all of them had flat heads.

THE SNOW.

A hunter had good luck hunting until a snow fell. The snow froze his feet and he wanted to punish the snow. He took a quantity of it and buried it in the ground and covered it with brush and grass, so that it could not get away. The next summer he went there when the sun was high and uncovered the snow and the sun melted it. The snow threatened to be revenged. The hunter next winter laid in a big supply of wood and when the snow came started two fires in his wigwam. One day a stranger came. He had a big beard and a head twice as large as an ordinary man. The hunter knew it was the Snow. He piled on more wood, but for awhile it kept getting colder and colder. He worked at his fires until the stranger began to sweat, and in a few minutes he had melted away, and thus the hunter got the better of Kon, the snow.

CHICAGO.

There was once an Ottawa trapper who went with his wife to trap beaver. When he got there the dam was frozen, and he broke holes in the ice. That evening his wife caught a beaver by the tail and called for her husband to come and kill it. He replied that if he and the other beaver would come up through the ice. His wife insisted and they quarreled. That night his wife ran away to the south. He went on her trail, and as he traveled he noticed that her tracks gradually changed in outline resembling the shape of those of a skunk. He followed her trail till he reached a marsh where he saw hundreds of skunks in the grass. He looked around for a long time expecting to find his wife in the shape of an unusually large skunk, but was disappointed. He named the marsh Chicago. The Place of the Skunk, and it has continued to be so called unto this day.

Sweetness and Light.

Put a pill in the pulpit if you want practical preaching for the physical man; then put the pill in the pillory if it does not practise what it preaches. There's a whole gospel in Ayer's Sugar Coated Pills; a "gospel of sweetness and light." People used to value their physic, as they did their religion,—by its bitterness. The more bitter the dose the better the doctor. We've got over that. We take "sugar in ours"—gospel or physic—now-a-days. It's possible to please and to purge at the same time. There may be power in a pleasant pill. That is the gospel of

THE RACCOON AND THE BLIND MEN.

The friends of two old, blind Indians were afraid that their village would be attacked and that they they would not be able to escape on account of their infirmity. So they moved them to the other side of the lake, built a wigwam, and left them provided with food. In order that they could find the water they stretched a line from the wigwam to the lake. One day one Indian would cook and the other carry water, and the next day they would change work.

Finally a Raccoon came along the shore, turning up the stones and looking for crawfish. He saw the line and said, "What is this? I think I shall follow this cord and see where it leads." He came to the wigwam and saw the old blind men asleep. He determined to have some sport. Presently the men awoke and started to to prepare dinner. The one whose turn it was started to the lake for water, but the raccoon had moved the end of the cord and tied it in a clump of bushes. The old man got to the end of his string and found that there was no water there. He returned and said to his companion, "We shall surely die, for the lake is dried up and where we used to get water the brush has grown up. What shall we do?" The other said, "That cannot be, for if the lake has dried up we have not been asleep long enough for the brush to grow on the lake bed. Let me try." He took the kettle from his friend and started off.

The raccoon had replaced the cord where he had found it. The second old man succeeded in getting water and came back and accused the other of lying. They patched up the peace and boiled the meat. The Raccoon came up and saw what was in the pot. There were eight pieces of meat. When the old men started to eat, the Raccoon removed four pieces very silently and eat with so great enjoyment as the old men.

One of the old men got through with his first piece and dipped in the pot for another. He said: "My friend, you must be very hungry to eat so rapidly; there are only two pieces left!" The other immediately seemed him of being the thief. They argued thus, and the Raccoon to have more sport tapped each in the face. They each thinking it was the other who had struck him, began to fight and rolled on the floor. The Raccoon ran off and gave a big laugh, which explained everything to the old men. The Raccoon said: "I have played a nice trick on you; you should not feel fault so easily with one another."

The Raccoon then resumed his crawfish hunting along the shore.

To all the whiskey shops offered to the public none have proved so destructive and vast of application as Burlington's A. D. rotgut, a beastly fat brown in color.

SENATOR HOAR brought up the annual resolution proposing the amendment to the constitution changing the inauguration day from the 4th of March to the 30th of April. The only objection we could have to it is that it prolongs the administration of Mr McKinley nearly two months. This could be remedied by letting the inauguration of his successor take place on the 30th day of April, 1900.

Every year this thing of quarter ends out for clerical misdemeanants, causing the women, who is work enough to read them, to imagine that she is a physical wreck. Curiously in the Lincoln workhouse which grist of Pierce's patents suffer from. The accommodation banks play on the greatest gain in country business circles, one of those often regretting the only begun it of by the farmer. Nothing is more common than to see them produced in court to "account for money" of to prove the sale.

THOUGHTLESS ADVICE.

The editor of the Hinton Independent Herald advises the editor of the Times to use "Old red liquor as that will fill a man with inspiration quicker than any thing else," and he speaks as one having authority. One of the greatest troubles with the productions of the well-known Sawyers, of Hinton, is that they are too realistic. If he thinks of a swear-word, down it goes on the editorial page; and if a questionable thought comes to him it, too, is apt to be incorporated in a leading article. In his more serious moments he will agree with us that the inspiration that comes from liquor when it is real is of a kind that is apt to get the weak vessel which holds the liquor in trouble. It is the kind of inspiration that leads its victim to write a check for fifty instead of five dollars; to try to go to bed on the bureau; to have wounds without cause; and to adopt a platform of principles that he is unable to maintain in his anger of bottled.

Sawyers and Opie Reed disagree on this question, it is evident. The latter makes one of his characters, in speaking of country lawyers, lament the fact that most of them knew more about breaking jackpots than they did of bills in chancery, and declared that "poker never yet has made a pleader, nor whiskey a poet."

Another authority says that professional men about a county seat ruin their constitutions by constant internal jolts, and their voices by saying "that's good!" including therein the two besetting sins of professional men.

Every man that drinks to any extent has to be on his guard all the time to see that he remains decently temperate. Gossip exaggerates the failing of any man and is apt to drive him to worse courses. The temptation is presented to every man as he attains his growth, and boys are saved by the danger being pointed out by precept and example. Every writer who gives advice on this subject should say Don't! Do this, and still this branch of trade will receive more than its just or proportionate share.

Every newspaper should protest against the use of intoxicants, and every man who feels that he is strong-minded enough to use liquor with impunity will uphold the course, for there may be some boy growing up in whom he is interested, and of whom he cannot be sure; and those men who have used it until they are a reproach to their friends will aid such a course, not only by the powerful object lesson they present, but in freely expressed sentiments as to the evil of the habit. The only way to do is to keep pounding away at the danger, and to take every opportunity for speaking of it.

THE BANK OF MARLINTON.

THE owner of the Marlinton drug store, Dr Price, has been notified that the building will be needed in the spring for other purposes, confirming the report that a bank is to open for business at that time. Nothing is needed more, and we feel sure that our banking people generally will patronize it. Also a large number of farmers who do not realize the convenience of having a deposit in bank subject to check, as well as the safety, will make use of this institution instead of the time honored "stocking." It may not be out of place to recite the few and simple rules necessary to open an account with a bank. In the first place, a little money is necessary. The bank receipts for it and gives you a bank book in which all your transactions are recorded when you present it to be "balanced." The cashier takes a specimen signature, in order not to cash a forged check if possible; any private mark may be made part of the signature. The bank furnishes you a blank check book. Then you are at liberty to draw checks until your money gives out. Most ladies think they can write checks as long as they have blank checks left. The advantage derived are evident. A receipt is had in every cancelled check, the depositor is relieved of hours of robbery, and any amount can be paid which is of fine importance when change is scarce. A few dollar check drawn pays as much as dollar or a five dollar bill. There is not absolutely a large number of men in the county who will open a checking account with the new bank who have never yet sign of a check.

New York News Letter.

Dwight L. Moody, the world-famed evangelist, is holding forth at Carnegie Hall, this city, and his meetings are filled to overflowing. All kinds and sorts of people listen to him preach the Word of God,—rich, poor, young and old. It is a truly wonderful magnetism he possesses. This man is a good man; no hypocrisy about him. He talks in plain language and his auditors go away thinking and keep on a thinking, to return the next day a great deal better both in mind and body, and before many days they join Mr Moody in his good work and endeavor to convert their friends. And they generally do. Mr Moody in the course of his sermon yesterday said: "The smile of the Lord is better than all the offices of Tammany Hall can give." After each meeting scores of his listeners wend their way to the platform to shake hands with the preacher.

The Democratic government of this city is gradually getting in working order. Two years ago when the Reformers got in they could not "turn the rascals out" fast enough. Now the tables have been turned. Mr Democrat (or as our Republican neighbor calls us —Tammany) is losing no time in turning the Reform rascals out of office—and they do not like it a bit.

Probably if you are at all interested in the ring you have noticed that Fitzsimmons and Corbett are still talking. The latest came by wire yesterday from Pompadour Jim. Mr Corbett has offered the sum of $25,000 and an additional $10,000 to Fitz if he will stand up to him for 10 rounds. Corbett says if he does not knock Fitz down and out in the 10 rounds why he will cheerfully hand over the $35,000 to his opponent. Fitz's reply was a broad smile and "have a talk to my manager Julian." These people have shown on the road and this is the way they receive valuable advertising.

Not long ago a policeman in this big town was detailed in citizen's clothes to stop the boys playing football in the streets. A boy by the name of M'Nally was playing when along comes the "cop." He ordered the boy to hall—to be arrested. The boy naturally ran. This great big fool of a detective got out his revolver and fired. The boy was wounded, but happily not dangerously. Mr Policeman is now on trial, and the chances are his position will be lost. The department can easily spare such men.

The trolley cars will shortly be in operation over the Brooklyn Bridge. Wires, tracks, etc, are ready.

Richard Croker has just added to his laurels. A coal barge was named after him. As Mr Croker is a very successful man, the barge no doubt will prove equally so.

A man by the name of W. P. Goerdes was arrested the other day in the vicinity of Wall Street, charged with forging a check for $18,122.50. This is the case of a man who had speculated, and who had been driven to the wall. In order to retrieve his losses he resorted to this means to raise money. The way of the transgressor is hard.

Business is so-so. The weather is warm, foggy, and every thing is quiet. GEORGE M. SARGETER.

PARIS, the capital or the French nation, claims to be the flower of civilization. The French officer stands ont as the typical soldier of the 19th century for all that is elegant in war or peace. This is the way one writes who is in the African expedition:

"The native carriers give us much trouble. We seized them forcibly and they attempted to escape at every opportunity. We vainly shot or hanged those we recaptured, but others continued to escape. Many were recaptured, but several succeeded. We were obliged to enter villages with a few riflemen and seize all the men and women found therein. Sometimes the whole population fled. We then burned a few huts which generally induced them to return. We then seized the chief and compelled him to give us slaves to carry our loads. This is the only way to deal with these brutes, whom we have seen quarrel over the bodies of their shot comrades for food."

It is sad to the humane heart to reflect that there should be blood crying to heaven for vengeance shed by civilized hands where "Afric's sunny fountains roll down their golden sands."

The second trial of the "boat case" was held last Saturday before another jury and resulted in the conviction of Ott Dilley. The fine was fixed at ten dollars and costs. The bond fixed off in a recognizance and there is no question now but that it is adrift.

Webster county is to vote in the Fork Lick district on the propriety of appropriating the sum of $1,000 as a subscription for the building of the 15th River Railroad, February 10th. The condition is that the road must be in operation first day of November 1898.

R. W. Hill and E. L. Beard have bought the William H. Overholt lands in this county, having paid off the Elm due Captain Alex. Mathews. Last Tuesday William Baxter, of Edray, went to look at the Locust Creek mill property with a view of buying it.

The S. J. Payne road case was not decided by the county court of Greenbrier, but was referred to the circuit court by a sort of general consent, and a decision is expected at the April term as to whether the Pocahontas people are to get a better road for their money or not.

Mrs Eugenia Harmon, wife of A. W. Harmon, Treasurer of the State of Virginia, died near Lexington, Va., last week. She was a daughter of the late Colonel Warwick Cameron, and has many relatives in this county. She leaves ten children to mourn their bereavement. Mrs Warwick Cameron lives in Lexington, and is about 84 years of age.

The County Clerk has received a letter from H. M. Wilson, of the Geological Survey of West Virginia, asking the address of a stonecutter, whom he wishes to prepare two stones, rough-dressed sandstone, 6 inches square by 3 feet 6 inches in length, for azimuth marks. They are to be placed in the court house yard, from 300 to 500 feet apart, and will mark the true meridian and enable surveyors to adjust their compasses properly.

The report was prevalent here last Monday, that immediate preparations were being made to move the Buckhannon saw-mill to the forks of Greenbrier River in advance of the railroad. The manner in which the report came is that John Holland of Green Bank, has arrived from Buckhannon where he saw Capt Wm. Hevener, the contractor, who is advertising for forty four-horse teams to move the machinery from Buckhannon. The mill will be transported there by rail. This is one of the best equipped mills in the State and evidence is given the rumor by the fact that Col McGraw is the owner of the mill. A citizen of Green Bank has gone to Buckhannon to see about the contract. The job should be done by Pocahontas teams.

The Colored Republic in the Brush is meditating all sorts of legal actions against Howard Tibbs and the board trustees of the public school. The store in the schoolhouse had recently been condemned and the board of education had allowed a new one. The old one was rented by nearly every family in the Brush, as it was large and a good burner—and the colored people of that neighborhood have wood to burn. It was ordered by the trustees that the stove be put up for public auction, and the board trustee was appointed to the good person to do. These had been written by a friendly settlement and he saw on the outside posting them to and a citizen who needs an office for the stove. As the trustee thought it was little to be refused it. He sent Joe Wilson next, and Joe's only bugaw and performance manner, together with his liberal offer, secured the stove, which he moved to his house, while the trustee went on posting the notice. The day of sale came and the neighborhood democrats met to bid for the land trustee shall have the stove there to be sold at public auction, or he may have to answer for malfeasance in office.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Henry Dawson, of Alvon, was in town Monday.

Mrs E. I. Holt is still very ill at her home at Academy.

Miss Lillie Friel took charge of the Marlinton school last Monday.

T. A. Sydenstricker and J. W. Beard were in town Tuesday.

E. H. Moore, traveling for a Baltimore house, was in town Tuesday.

Rev H. W. McLaughlin has moved from Prince to Hampton, Va., where he is pastor of a city charge.

Rev C. M. Caldwell, the Presbyterian pastor of the four churches in upper Pocahontas, has gone to his old home in Kentucky for a rest and hoped restoration to health.

William Sharp, Esq., at Edray, severely injured his foot with an ax while brushing one day last week. He is doing quite well. Preston Baxter, a young farmer near Edray, met with a similar accident and is also laid up for repairs.

Captain A. M. Edgar has returned from the Johns Hopkins hospital greatly improved in health. Amputation was thought to be necessary at one time, but it was finally decided that the hand could be saved.

Don't Believe It.

Mr David Wilfong, of Top Alleghany, while out hunting recently on the North Fork of the Greenbrier River, saw what he thought was an o'possum swimming in a shallow place in the river, but on shooting and rescuing his game it proved to be a pike which weighed 32 pounds. Mr James Hevener, who recently returned from West Virginia, brought the head of the fish with him, and it is now in the possession of Mr Lynn Sullenberger.—Highland Recorder.

It's a wrong time of year for fish stories. A fifty-pound fish would be six or seven feet long, and it might be mistaken for a deer, but an o'possum never.

Marriage.

"Those whom God hath joined together let not man put asunder." These words were spoken in the union of Mr James A. Reed and Miss Elva A. Friel in the holy bonds of matrimony, on the 12th of January, at 5-30 P. M., at the home of the bride by Rev B. L. Parrot. Immediately after the marriage and congratulations received, all were invited to the dining-room where a table had been prepared for a wedding occasion, decorated with flowers and evergreens and supplied with a good, wholesome supper. The bride received many valuable presents from her friends, showing that she was not forgotten in this time of rejoicing. May their happiness continue brough life; and on entering the new and untried path, may they fix their eyes upon Him who is "the way, the truth, and the life."

Letter From the Rev Moses May.

To the Editor of The Times,—Please allow me to say through your excellent paper that the boats M. E. South evangelist did not hold a series of meeting at Sue, as stated in your issue of the 7th of January. He simply passed thro our neighborhood, stopping over night on the 27th of December at the home of J. A. Gum, saying that he was on his way to Clifton Forge, to see his wife and very sick child; that he wanted to get his horse shod and an early start next morning. These favors were extended to him, but some time was consumed at the blacksmith shop, the morning being very cold, so that he got started from the shop at 11 o'clock. There were a series of meetings held here recently conducted by Rev J. A. Perry, Rev Howard Underwood, and your humble servant, resulting in about 29 professions; but we don't want to be mixed up with the distinguished evangelist.

We were not surprised at his speedy return in charge of Dawson and Beard, as we had heard that there was a warrant out for him before he stopped over night with us. We identified him as the one, bearded fugitive. But withal we asked him to hold prayer, which he did. His prayer was without system, that is—adoration, petition, thanksgiving, and in order. Intimating that he is not intellectual enough to have been ordained by any Bishop or Conference.

Blue Spring district is just Blue Spring neighborhood, composed of two or three Republicans. This community was carried solidly for the Republicans in 1896, and will be again in 1900, no matter who is their candidate or what kind of platform they may get out. It may declare for just any thing, silver or gold, home or copper, or even no gold nothing, just as the called Republican that is all that is needed to get their votes.

Yours respectfully,

M. May.

Congressman Dorr made his maiden speech before the House last week in the discussion of the civil service bill. The newspapers said some very rude things about that still small voice.

Congressman Dorr has introduced a bill to pension Isaac W. Allen, of this county, a captain of an independent company at $25 per month. Also to build a public building at Hinton costing $75,000.

Ma H. M. Lowrance wishes us to state that he was compelled to resign the duties of principal of the Marlinton school on the proof of duties in the line of his regular profession, and that his relationship with the school was of the pleasantest character.

January is the time for awarding of drinking, using profane language, etc. In January every one has to balance his account and find out how much he owes, and—coming to time—I am not known as customers to come and settle their bill. It does not matter how small the amount may seem to you, it amounts to a good deal with me.

HORSE-THIEF NO. 3 ARRESTED.

All Our Horse-Thieves are Now Present and Accounted for.

It again becomes our painful duty to write up the particulars of a horse-stealing affair. There are now three prisoners in jail at Marlinton all charged with stealing horses, at different times and from different men since the last sitting of the grand jury. As the "Rev" John H. Ratliff remarked grimly when they brought John Wilfong to jail last Thursday, that horse-stealing was so common in this county, he thought the judge could do nothing less than give them all the full limit. He seemed to imply that had he known the stealing of horses was so overdone in Pocahontas that he would not have indulged in it. He sent the Pocahontas Times word that it could "let up" on him a little, and pay attention to the latest addition to the Horse Appropriator's Association in winter quarters at the jail.

Wilfong stole John R. Warwick's horse at Green Bank, November 19th. The officers followed and first obtained trace of him at New Hampden, Highland County, Virginia. There he had stopped at a blacksmith shop and cut the bridle off the bridle. He had cut the halter-strap when he first took the horse out of the owner's stable. They followed about seventy miles farther and found the horse in the possession of Isaac Hoover, Rockingham County, Virginia. Hoover had given $36 for the horse. He surrendered the property at once. Wilfong went to Harrisonburg, where he took the train. This was the last heard of him until he turned up in Bluefield, Mercer county.

The capture was a very neat piece of detective work on the part of Samuel Sheets, deputy sheriff. His information was meager, but he understood that Wilfong had been corresponding with a young woman of Bluefield. While every one thought that he had returned to the West, the deputy regarded the story of this correspondence as a valuable clue, and wrote to the postmaster at Bluefield to apprehend Wilfong if he turned up there. The result was that he heard from the police of Bluefield that the man was in jail awaiting his pleasure. He made a trip to that place by way of Hot Springs and brought the prisoner to jail.

Wilfong secured S. B. Scott, Jr., as counsel, and demanded a preliminary examination. This was set for next Saturday, the 22d.

The State was in that position not uncommon in law, of being unable to prove that which everyone believes, with the evidence on hand; and consequently the day for the examination had to be deferred until there was time to secure the blacksmith at New Hampden and Isaac Hoover, of Rockingham County.

Wilfong's case is the most aggravated of any. He succeeded in disposing of the horse and realizing a considerable sum of money, and led the officers and owner a long chase.

From the report brought back by the deputy, Wilfong would in a few days have added bigamy to his achievements in this life. Miss Mollie Swivelmarker, of Bluefield, wished to change her name, and advertised in what is known as a matrimonial journal for a husband. Wilfong responded, and an interesting correspondence ensued. When the time came for a visit to the lady he had no money and his vestment badly worn for a courting man. Wilfong is a married man with a wife and six children living it must be remembered, and so he knew what he had to do. He took the horse to keep his tryst. When he got to the depot he converted it into money and bought good clothes. He was having a high time in Bluefield, and the lady was trying dispose of her house and lot so that they would have money for the affair.

The arrest was made by Policeman Allan Brown, who attended school at Academy the session of 1867–8, at the time his brother Professor C. A. Brown was principal of the school. It was reported last fall that he was dying of a gun-shot wound received from the hands of a negro whom he arrested. He has recovered entirely. When he arrested Wilfong he was told that he was wanted in Pocahontas for stealing a horse. Wilfong quickly answered: "O I can prove myself clear of that!" All will allow that this was a most unusual statement for an innocent man (in the eyes of the law) to make. He was supposed to have been informed for the first time that he was under suspicion.

Wilfong is connected with the Wilfong family of this county. Honesty is a failing with them, but this one is the black sheep. His widowed mother lived near Green Bank with a large family. Some of the children were blind. She died about twenty years ago, and the children found homes with those who took them to raise. John Wilfong was taken by S. M. Wise, of Ottobine, Virginia, and raised by him. He married there and went to live in Monticello, Iowa. He was "visiting relatives" in Pocahontas from November 1 to 18, when he is accused of taking the horse. He is twenty nine years old; 5 feet 6 inches in height, 147 pounds in weight; auburn hair, red complexion.

The idiot claims to be an infidel, differing from "Rev" John H. Ratliff, who tho he spirits away horses in the night time does not think he has fallen from grace. He carries the doctrine of election to the penitentiary with him.

HOW TO FIND OUT.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys, if it shows your urine is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What to Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root, the great kidney remedy fulfils every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold urine and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following the use liquor, beer, or wine, and over comes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists, price fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet both sent free by mail. Mention The Pocahontas Times and send your address to Dr Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Tee proprietors guarantee the genuineness of this offer.

A Mason County Farmer in England.

Not long since Mr C. C. Lewis, of Mason County, this State, visited England and Scotland, and recently he published in the Daily Register a summary of his observations. Believing it will be of interest to our farmers, we give it below.

Having in my recent visit to a country of better and more careful farmers than our own received several practical trials, I shall endeavor through the medium of your enterprising daily to give my friends and neighbors, among the farmers, the benefit of the same.

The first thing which attracted my attention, and the one in which they are most superior to us, is the way in which they retain the fertility of their lands, the farmer's capital; by the careful preservation of the barnyard manures. The sight so common among us of a manure heap under the drip of a barn, and from which the strength is soon washed away, is never seen on the premises of an English farmer. He wheels it to his manure pit,—usually a square hole about three feet deep, with cemented or tamped bottom and brick sides,—and there carefully and evenly spreads it, to allow of an equal fermentation, and the least possible escape of ammonia. The overflow of this pit is conducted by a tile placed near the top to another of like construction filled with straw, turf, etc., to absorb this liquid. These pits are cleaned when necessary and contents put on the land.

To this way he preserves that which an American farmer wastes, with the consequent necessity of replacing by the purchase of high-priced fertilizers.

In the second place, the English and Scotch farmers do that kind of farming which is best suited to each man's own particular land. Should his farm be of a hilly and thin character, he would not attempt to raise grain, but would keep it in grass and handle young cattle or sheep; or if he were the possessor of rich bottom lands, he would then grow grain and carry on feeding operations. He would not do as some of our Mason county farmers,—raise corn to be sold or fed to hogs from their poor hill lands.

Having once settled which kind of farming his lands are best suited to, the English farmer sticks to it in spite of any temporary depression, which inevitably comes to any kind of business. Were he living here, he would not be dairying this year, raising wheat the next, or growing vegetables for a city market in the third.

Thirdly, and I think this is the lesson we most need. I did not see while in Great Britain a single animal of either the Jersey or Holstein breeds. If they have them, and I suppose they do, they were in their proper place—the dairy,—and not on the lands of the farmer. All the cattle I saw, and it is astonishing how much stock by their careful management they are enabled to keep, were of the beef breeds. The same thing was true of the sheep—they being all of the mutton varieties, producing both meat and wool. I saw no Merinos, or other sheep of the exclusively wool kinds. In ending I will say they had good dog laws. Had we such laws this State would be many millions of dollars richer by reason of the sheep we could then keep, and it is beyond doubt that sheep are pre-eminently the thing for the Mountain State.

Nothing of the Sort.

The irritated father of a truant boy was filling up sundry holes in the back yard where the urchin had "prospected" for angleworms a few hours before, when a neighbor who happened to be leaning over the fence remarked, with a praiseworthy effort to say something consoling:

"Well, your boy, at any rate, is a faithful decipie of Izaak Walton."

"Him?" exclaimed the father, stopping to rest a moment and leaning dismally on the hoe-handle. "He aint a decipie of nobody! All he's good for on earth is to set on some log all day and fish!"

A Feature of Advertising.

An important, tho often overlooked, feature of newspaper advertising is the good feeling which a pleasant invitation produces. Acquaintanceship between the reader and the advertiser is begun at the first reading of an advertisement. The invitation may not be accepted at once, but good will has been established. Sooner or later the reader will see the article or the establishment, then the first ex-lamation will be one of recognition. "Oh, there is—"

With what a feeling of ease and serenity one enters the store or hotel that is advertised; she is welcome; he has been invited to come. With what confidence you inquire for an advertised article; the proprietor himself believes in it, and wants you to try it and is interested in you getting it. This very good-will, this appreciation of courtesy, this satisfaction of being asked, has been the foundation of many a successful business.

Newspaper advertising is something more than spending money in the newspapers. If properly done, it is the making of a quaintanceship and friendship that is surely be of great value in time come.

Would you have your business or your article so favorably regarded? Make it known. If it worthy, people will appreciate being asked.—N. W. Ayer & Son.

THE Smithsonsiun Institution has come into possession of the Phillips collection of Indian implements and antiquities from the Potomac Valley. It is reputed the largest collection of its class in the world, and its value is enhanced greatly by the careful arrangement and record of individual specimens. The collection consists of over 20,000 pieces, principally spear and arrow heads, stone-knives, hammers, and scrapers, fragments of pottery and soapstone utensils. Mr Phillips made a long study of prehistoric man in the Atlantic tidewater region. In his opinion, Washington was not the first capital on the banks of the Potomac. He believed the site, owing to its great advantage in connexion with stone quarries and the river fisheries, was the headquarters of the great Algonquin confederacy. The Phillips collection is said to be the best key in existence to the manners and habits of this vanished race, of which wrtlten history gives little information. Mr Phillips was drowned recently in the Potomac. The collection passed to the custody of the Smithsonian Institution through the generosity of Mr Thomas Lee, to whom it had been bequeathed.—Scientific American.

Wanted to Know.

Such a fashionable question in literature as the following should find a ready answer around.

"If lands must be sold, as we hold them, how can I get a purchaser?" thoughtfully inquired a farmer. "I daresay I ever thought of it afore, but now that it does come to my mind it certainly beats me."

"What is you husband about?" asked his wife, anxiously.

"Let's see," he answered, "of course we've seen it afore—I up to the newspapers time and so is he all on us—either in the parlor or the papers and a pair of scissors, or suthin' of things to get later in papers."

"Obviously. I don't see wishin' so hard for that."

"But this is the question. Some feller has got to get them papers up in the first place. It never struck me afore, but I'm about of I would get a feller to know who the feller is to be sent to—or else—or else there'll be no papers for the feller for our sale."—Texas Siftings.

Biographic Notes.

THE late George Kee, Esq., was one of the early settlers of our county, and deserves a place in the history of the Pocahontas people. He was a native of Tyrone, Ireland. He and his brother William left Ireland when he was under age, and owing to the shipping regulations was not allowed to embark as a regular passenger. Young Kee went aboard to see his brother off, and concealed himself until too far away at sea to be put off the vessel. The intention was to take him back, but upon landing at Philadelphia he eluded the parties in search of him and escaped to the country. He came to America in 1780, landing at Philadelphia after a voyage of thirteen weeks. At Lancaster City the brothers spent some time, and separated at that place and never met again, and Mr Kee never heard any thing more of him. From Lancaster Mr Kee went to Lakeville, near the Susquehanna River, where he staid for some time. From Lakeville he came to Pendleton County, West Virginia, where he met a relative, Aaron Kee. This relative was a merchant and furnished George Kee some goods and sent him to Pocahontas County (then Bath) to dispose of them. He became acquainted with John Jordan, who had been in that business before him, and Mr Jordan had him to make his home with him; and for six or seven years he spent the most of his tige in The Levels at John Jordan's.

It seems, too, that the young Irish merchant was fond of making trips to Joshua Buckley's on the east bank of the Greenbrier opposite the mouth of Swago Creek. Hetty Buckley, with her smart and tidy ways, took his fancy, and they were married in 1800 and opened up their home at the place now occupied by Aaron Kee, a grandson, two miles below Marlinton.

Mrs Hetty Kee when a little girl had frequently heard the Indians in the woods on the overlooking hills, blowing on their powder-charges and making strange noises in the way of signals. She was devoted to her nice cows and cared for them as kingly in winter as if they were human beings, preparing warm feed. She would have one or two acres cleared and fenced and have it for a cow-pen for two or three years. Then another pen and in that way in the course of years there were rich, productive field opened up, in addition to what was cleared by her husband and sons on other parts of the farm.

There were six sons and one daughter. Two of the sons died in childhood. The four sons that lived to be grown were Joshua Buckley, Andrew, John, and William. The daughter's name was Hannah.

Hannah became Mrs Timothy Clutsen, a native of Ireland, and lived on the Joseph Buckley place on Buck's Run. Her children were Hetty, who became Mrs Sterling Campbell, and lives head of Swago; Margaret, now Mrs Luther Kellison, on the Greenbrier near the mouth of Beaver Creek; Nancy is Mrs Daniel McNeill, at Buckeye. George Clutsen and Buchanan Clutsen live in Missouri. Allen Clutsen lives in Indiana, in the vicinity where Jacob McLaughlin and other Pocahontas persons reside. Elizabeth Clutsen lives at the old home on Swago.

Joshua B. Kee, the eldest son of the Kee family, married Rebecca Sizemore, of Bath County, and settled on the Greenbrier a mile below Marlinton. Esther and Rachel were the names of his daughters, and they both died when quite young. Joshua Kee was a person of remarkable mechanical skill. He could work in stone, iron, and wood, as well as farm. His specialty was cabinetting, in which he excelled. And in his time when so much hunting was done this was of great service to the people.

Andrew Kee married Mary Duncan, on Stony Creek, a sister of the late Henry Duncan. Her family came from near Collierstown, a few miles from Lexington, Rockbridge, Virginia. His children were Hannah Jane, Nancy, and Esther. The two latter died during the war, and had grown to womanhood. It was about this time that camp fever and diphtheria ravaged this whole region, and swept away in some instances all but one or two of entire families, and Andrew Kee's was one such. Mrs Kee was the only survivor and lived a widow more than 30 years.

Andrew Kee lived on the Greenbrier near Buckeye, on the place now held by William A. Duncan. He was a very expert marksman and successful hunter. It was no uncommon thing for him to shoot squirrels across the Greenbrier with his mountain rifle, over one hundred yards. Many would think it good shooting to hit a deer that distance with such a weapon.

John Kee married Hester Gwin, of Highland County, Virginia, a daughter of James Gwin, senior, near Gall Town, and a neice of Mrs Rebecca Kee, mentioned elsewhere. John Kee lived at the old homestead, and the names of his children were James, Alcinda, Dallas, Aaron, Samuel, Susan, Henretta, and Hester.

James Kee was a Union soldier in the regular service, and died in the war at Winchester, Virginia.

Alcinda became Mrs George McKeever, and lives on Swago.

Aaron Kee married Milly McNeill, and settled on the Kee homestead. Samuel Kee lives with his brother Aaron.

Hester Kee first married William Poage and lived near Edray. Her second marriage was with Henry Poage.

Like his brothers, John Kee was an expert worker in different callings. His specialty was wagon-making, along with farming.

William Kee, son of George Kee Esq., married Ruth McCollam and settled on a part of the homestead lately occupied by Captain J. R. Apperson. Their children were Eliza, George, Matilda, William.

Eliza was a young person of much promise, and a highly esteemed and successful teacher. She died December 19, 1861, aged 22 years, and in a week before her father's lamented death.

George M. Kee first married Mary J. Kaiser, and settled on a section of his father's homestead. The second marriage was with Rachel Moore, daughter of the late James Moore, near Marlinton. George M. Kee was a Confederate soldier. He has filled several positions in county affairs as magistrate, commissioner of the court, etc.

Matilda Kee was married to Captain J. R. Apperson, and lived on the homestead.

Hon William L. Kee, who lives near Washington City and holds a position in the Land Office at Washington, is the youngest of William Kee's family. His wife was Katie M. Phares, daughter of William Phares, near Elkins.

William Kee, the youngest son of George Kee the ancestor, was a very estimable person, being an honest, industrious citizen he was of great service to the community in which he lived. He was one of the most public spirited persons of his times. He and his brothers Joshua, Andrew, and John built with their own hands and at their own expense one of the most comfortable school-houses any where in their section of the county, in order to have their children educated. It was near the store now (?) Mr Kee's wife was Miss Ruth McCollam, daughter of William McCollam and Sally Dennison his wife. She and Mr Kee were married in 1827. He died December 20, 1855. She died February 4, 1897, aged 79 years, 9 months, and 14 days, having lived a widow about 36 years.

Mrs Kee had noble aspirations, and earnestly desired that her family might be intelligent, industrious, and pious, and made every effort to inspire her children with like sentiments. It was believed that her anxiety for the mental improvement of her children had a great deal to do with the school-house enterprise just spoken of, that was so great a credit to the Kee neighborhood and of so much use to their families.

George Kee, the progenitor of the Kee relationship, was in many respects a very remarkable person. He read a great deal, and reflected on what he did read, and could converse fluently and intelligently on whatever subject that was discussed in books or the public journals. He was the first person I had ever heard say anything about John Locke, the eminent mental philosopher, and one of the foremost metaphysicians of his day. Mr Kee was anxious for me to read the book and insisted on me to do so whenever I was able to lay my hands on it. His copy was worn out and he had not been able to get another, as he had frequently tried. So it turned out that one of the first books I looked for in the college library was Locke on the Human Understanding, an old book and out of print. In subsequent years when attending lectures I found that one of the ablest lecturers did not seem as familiar with Locke as my old friend in his mountain home. Locke had become somewhat of a back number with his innate ideas, and a different theory was coming into vogue. The new theory was to cram the mind and the more it should be crammed the more the education imparted. Now the tendency is beginning to show itself to work from within, and develop the mental faculties so that the mind is prepared to receive and make use of whatever it finds without that would be useful. With some qualifying conditions. Locke's theory is coming into use, and it may be thinkers will reach the position occupied by our old friend 60 years ago, and claim honor and recognition for original research in educational affairs.

He had a passionate love for trees. He looked upon a tree as something of more real worth and use than gold or silver. If the forests were to be destroyed his notion was that people would become like the traveller suffering from hunger and thirst on the desert who noticed a well-filled pouch not far ahead of him. Uttering a joyful exclamation, he hastened to pick it up. Upon opening it he found it filled with pearls of the most precious and valuable quality such as queens only could afford to have. The traveller threw it down and exclaimed: "Alas, I thought I was finding dates to quench my thirst and relieve my hunger!"

He was a Jacksonian Democrat, first, last, and all the time. Were he alive now with unchanged sentiments, Henry George would have had one friend in Pocahontas that he could have relied on thro evil as well as good report.

Mr Kee claimed to be an Associate Reformed Presbyterian, commonly known as the "Seceders" or Covenanters. It was a blessing to our county to have such a person as Mr Kee identified with its history. I think this is a sentiment with which all will agree who remember something of his sterling character.

At one time it seemed as if the annexation of Hawaii would be prevented as it had become largely a question of party politics. The exciting movements now going on in reference to Chinese affairs have evidently weakened the opposition to annexation, and our readers need not be surprised to hear in a few weeks that the Stars and Stripes will be unfurled over those Pacific Islands, which we have heard so much about. No more peril or more than the whole continent and something besides must be torn.

IN THREE PARTS: PART 1.

A Cat o' One Tale.

BY S. A. P.

WHEN my friend Maude Burton (she always spells Maude with an e—and I don't blame her) wrote to tell me of her intended marriage to Mr Judson Stagg, I received the intelligence of her "indescribable happiness,"—so she termed it,—with undemonstrative, but none the less sincere pleasure. At the same time I was considerably surprised at the news, and had to restrain myself from a powerful impulse to say something so disagreeable as that "I feared all marriages were not happy ones," thereby exposing my mind to the derision of the whole married world. I am glad that I did not make such a remark, startlingly original as it would have been, for coming just then it might have been regarded in the light of a prediction, and I have no wish to join that melancholy procession in which prophets, goats, and poets have such a prominent place.

What surprised me was that such a charming, gentle, happy, little blonde like Maude, possessing the enviable faculty of always finding the bright side of things, could bestow, without apparent effort, her best affections on such a well-prosaic person as Judson Stagg. To my mind he was only a miscellaneous and unattached youth, pretending to work seriously at his chosen profession the law. His soul seemed to be wrapped up in deeds, bonds, and other mysterious papers.

I remember Maude describing to me a heart-breaking scene between a girl friend, who had deserted our ranks to mary a lawyer, and her husband. One evening she asked him to listen to her singing. He excused himself making her believe that the destiny of the world was hanging in the balance while he composed a speech to be delivered to a jury who had to decide between a quarrelsome blacksmith and an enraged umbrella mender.

Poor little Maude. What if the same destiny awaited her! I ventured to speak of the great disparity of tastes between Maude and her intended husband. Friends rebuked me. They said that those who knew him best knew of his true, warm heart, and that he was a man to be trusted without reserve. Maude evidently believed so. At the close of one of those spontaneous rhapsodies of engaged girls which leave the unengaged gentle reader weak and giddy, she wrote:

"And, O! S....! Juddy is so fond of cats; he thinks Adonis is perfectly splendid." Cats? Adonis! Ah there lay the mystery. I never saw a family so completely wrapped up in cats as the Burtons especially of one grey-green eyed, preposterous beast named Adonis. He was the centre of the domestic solar system, around which the family circle revolved as the lesser planets around the sun.

Maude adored him. No doubt she invested an ordinary and depraved cat as ever was with the brightness and purity of her own innocent heart. Therefore you can get some idea of the grief into which the family was plunged when two weeks before Maude's marriage Adonis disappeared mysteriously and completely. Strange to say, it did not delay the marriage, only it was a more quiet affair than it would have been had Adonis been alive, for they mourned him as dead.

I had made a promise to Maude which could only be broken by means of suicide to visit them when they got to housekeeping. I did so. Never had I seen a happy couple. Maude was radiant, while her husband looked as if he had just gone through a Turkish bath. The locks of his shoes were blacked, his cravat had turned darker, even the shape of his head was entirely altered. Maude was desperately interested in every thing which concerned Juddy's business and interests, and of course they were happy. Maude never told me her married life was a happy one, therefore I am certain such was the case.

Judge of my astonishment, then, when at the end of 18 months it was announced with terrible clearness that left no room for doubt that Maude and her husband had separated, an uncompromising separation that must end in divorce.

Horrid word. With bitter calmness I thought could those cynics and sages who have ridiculed marriage as a source of happiness in every age of the world have known of my friend's disastrous one they would have been raised fifty per cent in their own estimation. What could have happened? And with that question came the forcible conviction that the missing cat—the lost Adonis—had something or everything to do with the sad affair.

Notions.

IN his sermon last Sunday, Talmage asked which would his hearer rather hold in his hands when he come to die, a pack of cards or a bible? There is no doubt which we would choose, but we believe it matters what we hold in the hand at the last moment. The question will be how have we borne ourselves in the burden and heat of the day. There is never a murderer goes to the gallows today but what he experiences all the phrases of a christian's daath. Ministers can always be found to assure him that he can enter as a child of light. His victim may have been only thoughtless and wayward, but he was hurried off without a chance and he goes to the lowest depths; the murderer experiences religion and goes to rest in Abraham's bosom. This is as bad as the ancient teachings of the church of Rome. They believed that if a man died in a sinful act that he was damned, while if he had the benefits of a priest's presence and was duly shrived that he would be saved. We believe a life of service in doing the right is not too much to overcome the demon of self which would drag every man to destruction.

There was a case before the grand jury of this county a few years ago on this line. The charge was disturbing religious worship. The facts submitted to the grand jury were in substance as follows. A series of meetings were being held and the religious feeling was in the ascendant in the case of every one present. The rich man of the neighborhood arose to tell of his experience. He dwelt upon the mercies and hope he felt at that particular moment. He said, "I feel if I should die this moment I would go straight to Heaven." Suddenly a voice was heard from the back of the church: "Kill him! kill him! ——— kill him! Why don't somebody kill him?" The loud and boisterous language addressed to the proverbial rich man of the neighborhood put a stop to the services for that evening. When the next grand jury convened the pastor of the church appeared with several of his brethren as witnesses and asked for an indictment.

After the jury had heard the evidence they retired to the jury room themself, and asked for the opinion of the court. He explained that he meant no irreverence, s when he heard his friend himself that way that his ment got the better of him spoke before he thoug grand jury accepted the and no indictment wa

As the pension frauds have become patent frauds, why not consolidate the two departments.

The Wise Republican, of Wise County, Va., has changed its name to the Black Diamond News. We would suggest that Black Diamond Republican would have been very appropriate.

That was a grand resolution passed by the Pittsburg Camp of Union Veterans. It recited the fact that with its immense membership the average length of service of each man was three years and three months and not fifty per cent drew pensions. It called for speedy reforms from Congress.

Maryland is experiencing a Senatorial deadlock equal to that of Ohio, but probably not so righteous. Thomas J. Shyrock, of the St. Lawrence Boom & Manufacturing Company, had a sort of show awhile but he has subsided. McComas is the caucus nominee of the Republicans and Gorman of the Democrats.

This seems to be the fighting season of the year for the Cubans. Every day brings news of an engagement, and success seems to sit upon Cuban arms in the field, even if time fails to move the watch dogs of Wall Street, sometimes called Congressmen. That $40,000,000 in bonds held by American bankers seems to have more weight with us than all the horrors of a long and bloody war.

The Senate has passed the Teller resolution declaring that the government has the right to liquidate her indebtedness in gold or silver coin, and that is a point many patriots are willing to maintain a la mort. The effect of this resolution is to warn the administration that the Senate stands between it and and a willing Congress and any further crippling of the Government's resources by committing it to more pronounced gold standard laws.

An item is going the rounds of the press to the effect that the people of Pocahontas will petition the legislature to repeal the game laws on the grounds that game is so plentiful that it is impossible to raise grain in this county. The condition of the farmer is very distressing indeed. He cannot feed his cattle in the fields but what a herd of deer come in to it as soon as his back is turned; wild turkeys pheasants and quail fill up his farm yard and help his domestic fowls with their feed; a herd of bull elephants ate up a straw rick for a Hill Creek man the other day; a bihorned nasborn tore down a cornerib on Back Alleghany and ate up the entire contents, and a herd of buffalo caused a team to run away on Elk mountain. Surely forbearance has ceased to be a virtue.

Cromer's proposition that the Democratic party get together reminds with good sense. They say he seems to tell the Gold-democrats back into the fold, but such is a mistake. He regards them as scapegoats, and a rose by that name would not smell sweet to Mr Croker. What he does mean is that we must pull together. We have allowed our political enemies to divide our household, and a house divided against itself must fall. We need the Democratic party of New York, and the rain capping of sanguy statesmen as to what the South and West will do in the North and East at the next election is pathetic; many of our statesmen to insure good legislation. The principles of democracy are broad enough for every man who would live under a republican form of government, but how will do us no good if we lack party organization.

There is a big strike on in the mills at New Bedford, Massachusetts. These mill operatives have been living from hand to mouth, and now comes another reduction in their wages. These people are on the point of rioting. They have been driven to desperation. All but one mill-owner is willing to meet the strikers half-way. But this one says: "No quarter." Pinkerton detectives are expected to arrive, and as soon as these detectives put in an appearance, then invariably trouble begins. In nine cases out of ten the Pinkerton people seem to start the ball rolling. In this town there are about 10,000 strikers. The towns people are on their side. If a riot occurs, many lives will be lost. Who will be their murderers?

A horrible tragedy occurred in New York City, Monday. An inhuman father killed his 10- and 12-year-old boy and girl with a hatchet; his wife he brained next, and then he blew out his own miserable brains. It seems from latest reports that the man and wife have been planning their own and children's destruction for five years back. They were, undoubtedly, crazy.

George Gould, the millionaire lots of times, is now making a few extra dollars. He is serving as a Grand Juror at the rate of $2.00 a day. His father, Jay Gould, invariably paid a fine and kept to his office chopping off coupons, but his son George takes every thing that comes in sight.

A fire occurred this morning downtown, caused by a mouse chewing a match. On the way to the fire a hook and ladder collided with a wagon, throwing two firemen off, injuring them severely. After the fire was over the charred remains of the mouse were found.

It is said that "Pittsburg Phil" (Philip Smith) wagers something like $2,000,000 a year on race horses. He estimates that he earns only $10,000 a week during the racing season.

The trouble with this country and Spain is over, so far. There is one daily newspaper that is doing all it can to bring on a war, but it is useless. This paper one day last week got out some six extras, and the largest type in the office was used for display lines.

Two grizzlies were born in Central Park Zoo Monday. These are the first ever born in captivity. The female baby bear died five hours after birth, but the male baby seems to have powerful lungs and the nurse of the Zoo bespeaks for it a long life.

Policeman Hannigan, who shot a boy for playing football in the street on Thanksgiving Day, was convicted of assault in the second degree yesterday. The penalty is from one day to five years or a fine of $500, or both.

The annual Sportsmans' Show is now on at Madison Square Garden. Considerable new devices in 1898 wheels are on exhibit, shooting contests (revolver and rifle), bowling tournaments, fly casting, log cabins from Maine, taxidermy, and every new and old thing that appeals to the sportsman. The exhibition is a success. In the afternoon and evening band concerts are given. The admission price is 50c. There is even a costly art gallery to be seen.

Revival meetings are being held all over this city and vicinity these days. The other day in Camden, N. J., a brother and sister attended a revival service. The sayings of the preacher so worked upon the young man that he called out: "I am saved." His sister fell in a trance upon hearing her brother, and the doctors are doubtful of her recovery. Weak minded people should stay away from revival services. In some cases revivals are a good thing, but I prefer to hear the Word of God preached from the pulpit in a calm, benevolent manner. In my opinion most of these so-called arbor preachers are fit for the lunatic asylum.

A band of music announced playing in front of a police court put a stop to the nuisance. The sergeant replied that they had a permit, and that settled it. Then the band started up: "I Want Yer, Mah Honey, Yes I Do." The Judge adjourned court for 8 minutes and threatened to arrest the band himself. Then the band played: "He Never Did the Same Thing Twice," and went along about its business.

The business men of this town are trying to get the Legislature to amend the jury law, so as to exempt the busy man from doing citizen's duty. All should be treated alike—rich and poor.

A little girl by the name of Ruth Kaplan died from lockjaw, caused by vaccination. This little girl suffered for eleven days terrible agony. "Her teeth were tightly locked, and she never ceased her convulsive efforts to open her mouth." Much as we loved her we could not but feel that death was a relief," said her mother to a World reporter. This girl attended one of the public schools. She was one of the several pupils vaccinated by the Health Department. It is claimed that the lymph used was impure. Her parents are now suing the Health Board of the city for the sum of $50,000.

The skating on the ponds and lakes is through with for a time. But those who can afford to pay can go to rinks (indoors), which are frozen all the time during the season by artificial means.

of my own will till I break my shins against it."—As You Like It: Act ii., Scene iv.

Saturday morning, two small boys, Merl Irvine and Fred McLaughlin, were carrying a football to the shoe shop to be mended and were kicking it, as was natural. Of course this football found a hole in the bridge under the roof and fell into the river near the middle. The boys were dismayed, as the river was pretty high, the current swift, and the water cold as ice. No one was near and no boat on the river at this point, but they followed down, hoping that some current would bring it near shore. At the "Swimming Hole" it was as far out as ever and floating high and free. Merl waded in the water to his neck and by a merciful providence got out again. Here they bid it goodbye and returned.

Passing the printing office they reported the calamity. The football now had a big start of a half-mile or so and all hopes of recovery was given up, but Norman Price determined quickly to attempt a rescue. Then began a mad chase over stick and stone, brush and brier, and the ball was overhauled at the "Josh Kee Hole," two miles below the bridge, and secured at the expense of a cold bath.

The mountain was climbed to the road and a double quick start made for home. But "there's many a slip," etc. The football wet and slippery bounded and started down that very steep hill. Price started after it to give it a race for the money, (and its no trouble to go down such a steep place—the difficulty lies in the stopping.) A dense thicket of grape caught and held this perverse football, however.

There was much rejoicing among the juniors at its safe return, and it is to be hoped that its days of usefulness will be prolonged to aid in the development of pluck and giving pleasure and healthful exercise to the younger generation.

Merl, who had kicked the ball in the river, wanted to know what he "owed" the rescuer, and acted as if the Rock of Gibralter had been lifted off his mind. Had this football been lost it is thought that the Marlinton Academy would have had to shut up shop.

The latest news from "Rev" John H. Ratliff is a little bit the worst that has been reported yet. Detective Dawson has been working on the case and Ratliff swore out a warrant against his cousins Joe and Frank Church accusing them of being in a conspiracy to steal horses. Dawson arrested them last Thursday and brought them to jail. They employed Mc. Neil and Rucker as counsel and had set last Saturday for a preliminary hearing. On examination of the evidence the prosecuting attorney decided that there was no case against them and moved that the charge be dismissed.

Much interest is being developed in the Marlinton Literary Society. Friday evening was devoted to an exposition of the writings of Lord Tennyson. Goldsmith is the author selected for the next meeting. The committee on constitution and bylaws submitted the voluminous results of much delving into the depths of parliamentary law. It is feared that the thoughts of many members were far away during the reading of this document; for at the conclusion of the reading it was adopted by acclamation, without an exception being taken to a single section, although afterwards motions to amend were made with great freedom. The members were about equally divided on the question of meeting with closed doors, and it was decided to admit only members to the regular meetings. Additional officers were elected as follows: J. H. G. Wilson, critic; E. H. Smith, censor.

Last Monday evening, the weather being clear tho cold, a citizen of Marlinton set two lines in hope of catching a fish on an angle and went to bed. The next morning when he looked out he saw a snow on the ground he thought that he had been foolish in his first attempt of the season. He went to get his lines however. The first seemed to be fast; after some maneuvering a dog-fish was landed. When he got in sight of the other line he saw that it was agitated, and on pulling on it got a sucker about sixteen inches long. The fish kicked around in the snow for a while and apparently died. This was about eight in the morning. It was hung up against the side of a house and when it was taken down about one o'clock, it showed that it was as lively as when it was first taken out or the water. It was immediately killed by a blow on the head, and it is hard to say how long it would have lived out of the water.

Rev Henry McLaughlin, formerly of this county, has recently located in the city of Hampton, the county seat of Elizabeth County. It is a city of several thousand residents and is very old and of much historic interest. It is about 96 miles from Richmond. In 1607 Capt John Smith was exploring the Potomac, looking for a suitable site for a colony previous to the settlement of Jamestown, and met five of the natives who invited him to their town Kicheton, where Hampton now stands. Here the explorers were feasted with cakes made of Indian corn and "regaled with tobacco and a dance." In return the hospitable natives were presented with beads and other trinkets. It was settled in 1610 by people from Jamestown, and became a town by incorporation in 1705. It would require a volume to record all that may be suggested by its local history and memories of the distinguished people who have lived there and in the vicinity.

Arthur Noel was over to Monterey last week to see his baby jane. BUCKEYE.

Dennis McNeill made a flying trip to Driscol last week.

Professors Rorke, Courtney, and Beverage had singing at the upper church Sunday. Singing at Rocky Point next Sunday by Profs. Carter and Hill.

Miss Minnie Wade of Academy, has been visiting in this part for a few days.

A social was given the young people by Mr and Mrs Fleming, of this part, which was real nice, but some of the mischievous boys caused some trouble with 'bounce.' If the boys will keep down we may have another about Groundhog Day.

Colbert Duncan has a boil on his neck which causes him to look sideways at the girls.

Jasper Auldridge is at home from camp again.

Misses Mattie Dorman and Lula Auldridge have been visiting down at Academy.

Mrs Rachel McCoy is very sick and not expected to recover.

Some diptheria in Mr Hefner's family at present. Golden.

Rain, mud, and a little snow.

There is a great deal of sickness in this part at this writing. Some are better and others worse.

Messrs J. D. Rorke, Ken Courtney and brothers, and Will McLaughlin, of Marlinton, attended singing Sunday. We would like to see the professors come oftener, as music is much needed in this vicinity.

O. D. Gay, of Greenbrier, is in town.

Friday night at the social much valuable property was destroyed by some unknown persons on the outside who were so illbred as to bring their jugs with them.

Messrs C. B. Grimes and J. A. McLaughlin have had some spelling bees which were enjoyed by all. Both schools are progressing nicely.

Mr George Sheets was bit on the ear by a pigeon the other day, which excited him very much for a while.

The Buckeye Hunting Club has been having some sport with foxes. They have killed three and put 5 to hole. Andy Campbell's dogs have broken the record for running. They caught a red fox and in a short time the other day.

Joe Taylor has gone to Huntersville to dry lumber.

Messrs P. D. Yeager, Uriah Hevener, H. M. McLaughlin and J. B. McCutcheon are on the sick list.

The latest is the rail road will go by Glade Hill if the company can get Bill Acres to move his hen roost and the trustees to move the old Glade Hill school house.

There are several debating societies going on in the county, and some of the men and boys have gotten so in the way of making speeches, that you can see them speaking to side walks and mailbodies in plank fences.

Two things Congress ought to do and they are to pension every man and women who ever heard a cannon snap and pass a hog law to keep the face of all creation from being turned up side down and mixed after it is turned up.

REMANDED TO JAIL.

Preliminary Examination of John Wilfong.

A large crowd accented an interesting time in the hearing of the charges against John Wilfong for stealing Commissioner J. R. Warwick's horse, and a large crowd gathered at the court house last Saturday for the purpose, but they were doomed to disappointment for the prisoner did not go on the stand to testify as to his movements since the 19th of November. The hearing was held before Justice Bird. The prosecuting attorney, Mr McClintic, appeared for the people and Messrs McNeil and Scott for the prisoner. The prisoner's counsel gained an empty victory by quashing the warrant on the grounds that it did not state from whom the horse was stolen. The prosecuting attoney replied that he had noticed the defect that he would try his hand at getting one that would stick, adding dramatically to the deputy sheriff, "Hold that man until I can write a warrant!" The crowd cheered and roused the ire of the court. The accused made no dash for liberty as did Dick Napp on a similar occasion, and in a few moments he was re-arrested in a manner to satisfy the most fastidious.

The owner of the horse testified that the horse had been stolen in the way here-to-fore related in this paper. He gave his testimony standing, in the manner of a man making a speech. He added that he had no animosity against the prisoner, but had kept him over night a few days before he stole his horse and that he did not like to be bitten twice by the same snake.

William Hoover, of Rocking ham County, testified that the man before him had sold him the horse two days after he had stolen it. He had taken it to the mountains with him to log, and in a few days Mr Warwick had ridden to his camp and claimed the horse. He said he might have been disposed to dispute the ownership had not the horse itself showed such unmistakable signs of recognizing the horse that Mr Warwick was riding. Both horses whinnied and the horse proved himself so completely that he gave him up at once.

G. D. Oliver and C. P. Kerr testified that they had seen the prisoner in the neighborhood the evening of the night the horse was taken.

This made the case for the State and the prisoner introduced no testimony, relying on the inability of the State to present a case strong enough to hold him to the grand jury.

After elaborate argument of counsel, the defendant was remanded to jail in default of bail, fixed at $500.

Wilfong is not a bad looking man, and has a strong enough jaw on him to make his way in life under any circumstances. He did not open his mouth or even show signs of sensibility during the whole hearing.

Stray Horse with Throat Cut.

A day or two ago a dead horse was found about forty yards from the public road near West Union school-house with its throat cut, evidently taken there and killed. No clue to owner or perpetrator of crime. Buy horse, short tail, blaze in face.

This is to notify the public that my wife, Roxy A Cochran, has left my bed and board, and that I will no longer be responsible for her support. Jonathan Cochran.

Shooting Scrape at Dunmore.

James H. Bird shot and mortally offended big William McLaughlin, last week. The shooting occurred at Bird's house. McLaughlin had gone to Bird's to settle up for a deal in furniture which Bird owed him for. And from that time on they disagreed as to the course of events. The account McLaughlin gave of the affair is that he rode up to Bird's house and Bird came out to the fence. They talked until they fell out and Bird called him a "D—d liar. McLaughlin got down from his horse on the side opposite from Bird to avenge the insult and was walking around the horse's head in the direction of Bird when he fired at a distance of eighteen feet. Bird snapped at him once with his victim looking squarely in the muzzle of the revolver. The second time he depressed the pistol and the shot took effect over the stomach, ranging down thro overcoat, coat, vest and under clothing, and made a wound in the fleshy part of the hip about two inches deep. He rode home, the bullet dropping out on the way. The hurt was dressed and while painful it is not dangerous. Every pistol should be confiscated and destroyed.

Bird's account, confirmed by his wife, who was the only witness of the shooting, is that when they had fallen out he ran into the house. McLaughlin advanced on him and raised a chair which was in the room and was in the act of striking him when he took a pistol which was lying on the table and shot him. The downward tendency of the ball is accounted for by Bird by the extremely close quarters of the parties, and by McLaughlin by Bird being on the bank above him.

An interesting reminiscence is related of these two men in this connection. A few years ago Bird was indicted for carrying a pistol. His friend, McLaughlin, who is a big, whole souled lumberman, took the matter up and was disposed to make it a personal matter between him and Pocahontas county. There are many who remember what an open grievance he was disposed to make of it.

A warrant was issued for Bird. He securee H. S. Rucker for counsel, and a preliminary hearing was to be had on Monday.

HOW TO FIND OUT.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours: a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it shows your urine is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What to Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy fulfills every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold urin and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following the use liquor, beer, or wine, and over comes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists, price fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet both sent free by mail. Mention The Pocahontas Times and send your address to Dr Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Tee proprietors guarantee the genuineness of this offer.

West Virginia's Leading Family and Political Newspaper.....

THE INTELLIGENCER is in its forty sixth year, and throughout the period of its existence it has been carrying information to the homes of the State. The year 1898 will be a history making year scarcely less in importance than those which have preceded it. The first regular session of the Fifty fifth Congress will be notable, as it will witness the debates and action on vital questions that affect the people—the proposed reforms in our monetary system, the Cuban question, Hawaiian annexation, and many foreign relations now pending.

The year will be important politically. A new State legislature and a new Congress will be elected. The campaign will involve vital State and National issues, and in West Virginia the choice of a U. S Senator.

Dromedaries that Smoke Cigars.

Dromedaries are said to be particularly fond of tobacco smoke, and can be made to do almost anything under its influence. Travelers in Egypt, it is asserted, rely more on tobacco smoke for their control over these huge beasts than anything else. When traveling on long journeys the dromedaries are in many cases required to travel night and day without rest, and the beasts are kept up to their tasks by smoking cigars. The driver carries a triangular piece of wood, which is pierced at one point like a cigar holder. This is inserted in the mouth of the beast the cigar being lit and pressed into the hole in the same fashion followed by man. The dromedary immediately closes its eyes and puffs away through its nostrils until the cigar is burned up. The indulgence appears to refresh it, and the keeper has no difficulty in persuading the animal to plod on without further rest.—Tit-Bits.

An Old Buffalo Bull.

Buffaloes, in the days when they abounded on the Western plains, used to drive an old buffalo bull from the herd and abandon him to his fate. The feeble bulls sought a stream or lake, where he could find good grass without much exertion. Solitude, foreign to him from birth, robbed him of his courage, and made him so nervous that the rustling of a leaf, or even his own shadow, frightened him.

"Nobody," writes Colonel Inman in his book, "The Old Santa Fe Trail," "ever saw one of these miserable and helplessly forlorn creatures dying a natural death, or ever heard of such an occurrence. The cowardly coyote and the gray wolf had early marked him for their own; and they rarely missed their calculations." The author describes a scene he witnessed in 1866, while riding on the top of a divide with a party of friends:

We saw standing below in the valley an old buffalo bull, the very picture of dispair. Surrounding him were seven gray wolves. The poor beast had determined to die game. His great shaggy head, filled with burrs, was lowered to the ground; his tongue, black and parched, lolled out of his mouth. At intervals he uttered a feeble roar, to which the wolves, sitting on their haunches in a semicircle in front of him, responded with a howl.

The bull made a dart at the nearest wolf and tumbled him, bowling with pain, over the prairie. The other wolves started for his hind legs to hamstring him. The buffalo turned to repel the attack; the wolves turned as quickly and again fastened their jaws on his body. His hind quarters streamed with blood; he showed signs of weakness but did not dare to lie down; that would have been fatal, altho he had killed three of the wolves. Then one of the hunters mercifully shot him, and the wolves ate his thin, tough carcass.

THE New York Sun maintains that the expression "some few" is correct, and points out the fact that it has been in the use of the best of writers. It occurs in the Bible, and Shakespeare uses it a number of times. We heartily endorse the following arrangement of the grammar:

There never was an English grammar that didn't darken understanding. The whole pack of English grammars is a set of fossilized rules and obiter dicta about this wonderful, illimitable, and passionately living speech. Use your English grammar, if heaven has been so harsh to you as to give you one, for fuel in winter or for cigar lighters in the furnaceless and grateless months. It is an ignorant and a presumptuous heretic and sinner against our sacred English speech. So you may grow in knowledge of that speech, and be healthy and fortunate, not some few, but very many years.

SPRING-TOOTH HARROW.
The frames are made in one piece of steel angle bar, and formed to withstand all strain without buckling or warping. The teeth in this harrow are so spaced that they will not trail each other. Pulverizing the ground thoroughly. The steel pipe tooth bars are mounted in malleable boxes secured to the frame, and will not bend or break. The peculiar shape of the teeth curling toothside about the bar gives the greatest amount of spring possible without straining the bolts, and because of their shape and fastening are stronger than used on any other harrow. By the levers the depth of work can be regulated while the harrow is in motion. The draft is steady and direct as the harrow has no side motion.

For sale by URIAH BIRD, Marlinton; and A. BARLOW, Huntersville.

AFTER a seven day fight the Maryland legislature elected Judge Louis E. McComas senator to succeed Senator Gorman.

THERE is the "Yale problem" published recently in the New York Sun: "What will ten yards of silk come to at $1 1-001 per yard?" Dozens of answers were received, but only one correct one. The proper answer is $10.010 by the arithmetic, and $10.000 by the algebraic solution.

THE Alderson Man is the only editor in the State who still understands the financial questions of the day, and week by week he is confusing the public with heavy doses of his theories. The rule adopted by the rest of us in regard to money is:

That those may get who have the power,
And those may keep who can.

IN a letter to the Greenbrier Independent Dr Gates, of Ronceverte, calls attention to the fact that those persons who wanted to buy intoxicants of druggists did not hesitate to sign a physician's name to the prescription, and the druggist honored it without scrutinizing it as a cashier would a check. We think both Lewisburg and Ronceverte would be better with open saloons and that the cause of temperance would actually be advanced thereby. A well conducted barroom is preferable to a lot of unscrupulous doctors and forgers who enable the consumer to buy only in bulk.

He looked so haughty and so proud,
Put all such interest aroused
When pa put on his skates.

A hush fell o'er the mighty throng
When pa soared on his skates.
He was so cool, so nonchalant,
No one could fear a countercamp
To see his graceful abandon
When pa put on his skates.

But ah, me! what a fall was there,
When pa first tried to skate!
With one wild whoop of fierce despair
He sat down where there was no chair,
And both his legs waved in the air,
When pa first tried to skate!

Then every body looked away
While pa took off his skates.
The sun stopped shining for that day,
The sky grew overcast and gray,
For pa said things unfit to say
When he took off his skates.

WHERE THE RAILROAD SHOULD RUN.

In view of the railroad possibilities of this region, our attention was called to the fact by a level-headed man that it is more than likely that the men who are building the Greenbrier Railroad do not know enough of the topography of the country to know where the road should run, taking into consideration the cost of construction, the distance from the Chesapeake and Ohio to the Forks of Greenbrier River and the value of the road as an occupier of the territory after it is built. It has been an oft expressed wonder with every one in the county that the railroad saving the object in view of developing the Greenbrier basin should be built anywhere except on the banks of that stream.

It may be possible that the active work of a few men who own some barren acres on the ridges of the Alleghanies who are not to add it, to approach the promoters of the railroad, have done more to influence them than the people of the populous districts lying on the west bank of the river, who have not had the assurance to make themselves solid with the engineering corps and their employers.

We feel certain if Mr Ingalls knew the lay of the land that there would be no question as to worth of the Greenbrier River route. With the road branching off at the railroad bridge above Ronceverte the whole route would lie upon the west bank of the stream above high water mark, and the expense of building a bridge over the river would be saved. The Greenbrier is not a sluggish stream, but it's fall is uniform, and below Marlinton would be something less than above, and the grade would therefore rise almost imperceptibly from the tracks of the Chesapeake and Ohio to the forks of the river.

The roadbed would be dug from the side of the river ridge which is neither steep nor rugged, and we have been reliably informed that a roadbed can be made from a hillside as cheaply as on level ground. It may be that the vast expense of building along the Greenbrier River between Ronceverte and the New has given a wrong impression of the character of the hills which line the stream above. The irregularities of the mountain are plainly shown by the river bed. From the headwaters of the Greenbrier River to Ronceverte the stream is smooth flowing, and rafts of lumber drawing four feet of water and forty or fifty feet wide can be run with safety. Below Ronceverte are falls and rapids which would make navigation in a canoe dangerous.

Between Marlinton and Ronceverte lies one of the richest and most populous farming sections in the State. The formation is peculiar. The limestone ceases at the west bank of the river and to the east is only a country ruined and desolate by forest fires. A road down the river would have the most important stations below Marlinton. Driscol is on an east end west line with Marlinton, and if the road runs by Driscol there will be no need of a station south of Driscol. Large towns would spring up both in the Little Levels of Pocahontas and the Big Levels of Greenbrier, both of which sections would be forever the patrons of the Greenbrier Railroad. South of Driscol there would not be a solitary inducement for men to settle. South of Marlinton lies the wealth of this region. A railroad would have at once important stations to supply the following neighborhoods.

Starting at Marlinton the county seat, four miles to Buckeye, thence five miles to a point opposite Mill Point; then three miles to a station opposite Academy, an incorporated town; six miles to Locust, five or six miles to the end of Droop; five miles to Falling Spring, six miles to a point opposite Frankford, an incorporated town, now fourteen miles from the depot which would then be four and a half miles, thence to Kessler's mill, and thence to Ronceverte.

An engineer once stated to the writer that if the Frankford grievance of a county seat that it could bring out all the wrong if the road should be built down the Greenbrier line to it, and the same road could not now might into the change. The be built from the north end of the Greenbrier valley to the head of the Greenbrier valley to the town. Time is valuable to the thousand others as he must think on from there to the end of it. Being by his business both and ear and eyesight and if he wants it very bad this strange, inconceivable attitude of all the towns having for the county seat of the Ten the Democrats to accomplish

Local Events.

The degrees below zero Wednesday morning at Marlinton.

Amos Courtney put out two hounds the other day that caught and killed a grey fox in two hours.

The case of H. S. Rucker vs Clayton Dilley and sons tried at Huntersville, Tuesday, resulted in a judgment of $150 for the plaintiff.

While every person cannot have an abundant head of hair, it is possible, with care and the use of Hall's Hair Renewer, to grow a respectable hirsutic covering.

For a long time the Rockbridge County News has run a department headed, "News in a Nutshell." We wonder if it is because it is a chestnut.

It is intended by the publishers of this paper that all subscribers receive the paper promptly every week. We will esteem it a favor for patrons to report any any irregularity in this respect. Omissions will be made good.

The case of Bright vs Duffield came to an untimely end last Saturday on the production of a written contract by the defendant showing that the lumber sued for was not to be delivered until the 15th of next April. The suit was dismissed on motion of the plaintiff.

Beautiful snow, beautiful snow those who like bargains always go to the Golden store because for their money they can get more than elsewhere. Don't shiver these cold days but buy a pair of fell combination boots and your feet will be warm; my sweaters will always keep your body comfortable. Paul Golden.

The preliminary hearing of J H Bird for the shooting of William McLaughlin, near Dunmore, resulted in the release of the defendant, on the grounds that the shooting was done in self-defense. When the time came to summon MacLaughlin he could not be found, and he did not appear to prosecute. He does not believe in the law coming in between neighbors.

T. M. McCorkle was in town last week. In a late issue of our paper we spoke of this gentleman as having been a United States marine for five years. We did him an injustice. He was a practical seaman of the navy, and our offense was about the same as calling an honest lumberman a horse - thief. Those who understand know that no love is lost between the marine who does not do anything but try to look beautiful on board a ship, and the seaman whose work it is to sail the ship.

Attention is called to the announcement of the Hillsboro Academy in this issue. This school has been conducted during the public school term in a manner highly satisfactory to the patrons of the school, and the coming term of four months offers numerous advantages to those thinking of a higher education. Young school teachers who are desirous of bettering the grade of their certificates, and those who expect to apply for a certificate at the next examination for the first time would find that four months study at the Academy would be invaluable to them. The school is situated in a splendid section and the outlay necessary is within the reach of every one.

The police of Pocahontas county will look out for Morgan MacSweeny, who killed Ex-Deputy Marshall Morris, of Marietta, O., January 21, 1896. He is supposed to be making his way on foot to Marlinton. His description is given as follows: Weight 170 lbs.; age 35 years; 5 feet 10 inches in height; prominent forehead and cheek bones; dark complection; coarse black hair, some full beard when last seen; a defect in left leg; a little stoop shouldered; a stone-mason, blacksmith and coal miner. Arrest and wire to Jacob H. Dye, Marshall Marietta, O. A man answering this description is said to have been seen Sunday evening on Beaver Creek, riding and inquiring the way to Marlinton. Reward $100.

At a recent meeting of the Presbyterian synod of Montana, the question of refusing non-drinkers the sacrament and the holding resolutions adopted. Never to make a field in which any evangelical branch of the church of Christ is already supplying the needs of the people until after a careful investigation, there is reason to believe that there is both a demand and a need for our work." In an editorial comment on this resolution The Northwest Presbyterian says: "If every denomination decided in the same way we should soon get matters into a very good systematic working order. There would be less overlapping where one was not adequately supported. There would be no overcrowding of territory, but every community would be willing to support its religious work, and there would be no loss unnecessarily and expense."

BUCKEYE.

Plenty of snow and still snowing.

No new cases of scarlet fever to report this week, and the old cases are about well.

Andy Campbell and George Kellison trapped a red fox last week. Andy thinks he ought to wear the belt.

Quite an interesting literary society has been founded at the Dry Creek School - house by old and young, male and female. Mr Jas. Warwick, President; Mr C. B. Grimes, vice-President.

Mrs Reece Thomas, Mrs Aaron Kellison, and Mrs Jane McClellan, are on the sick list; Miss Nannie Hefner has been quite ill with scarlet fever, but is better now; Mrs Lottie Pennell is able to be about again.

Earnest Hill closed his school at Beaverdam the 26th. Mr Hill taught a good school, altho he is very young. This was the second school he has taught. He gave satisfaction in both and deserves much praise. He expects to go to some high school soon, and wish him much success.

Died—Mrs Rachel McCoy, wife of Francis McCoy, on the 27th of January near Beaverdam, after a few weeks hard suffering. Her death, the expected, was a shock to the community, she was loved by all who knew her. A devoted Christian, she leaves a husband and two children; Mrs Will Vanbenan, of West Union; and Cecil, so well known as one of the best boys of this county. He hardly left his mother's side during her sickness, —never was there a better boy to his mother. Her very aged father, two sisters, and two brothers also survive her. She was laid to rest near the home where she had toiled many days. A large crowd attended the burial.

We cannot tell what form is her's,
what look she weareth now,
Nor guess how bright a glory crowns her shinging angel brow;
I know her spirit feels no more
this weary load of flesh,
Her sleep is blessed with endless dreams of joy forever fresh.

Mountain Rover.

Snow and fine weather for fox-chasing.

O. W. Kellison and Will Hefner have gone to Webster with a load of hay.

The Buckeye football team is training hard and will soon be able to play Marlinton.

John N. Adkinson, the jolly old bachelor, is feeding twenty head of calves this winter and looking out for his better half.

George Kellison was a pleasant caller at H. S. Gulford's Saturday night and Sunday.

Timothy Quillidriver.

A Serviceable Broom Holder.

In another column will be found an advertisement for a cheap and economical attachment, designed to preserve the life of a broom and keep it at all times hung up and out of the way in a neatand orderly manner. Every housekeeper knows that the broom left to stand in the corner when not in use is soon useless from supporting the weight of the handle. The article in question is effective and prevents this, and we cheerfully recommend it to all our friends. [This is not a paid advertisement, but represents the opinion of the management of The Times.]

School Report.

For the month ending Jan 21, of attendance in Miss Bertie Beard's school, near Green Bank. Number of pupils enrolled, boys 28; girls 11; total 39. Average daily attendance, boys 25; girls 11; total 39. Per cent of daily attendance, boys 93; girls 97; average 95.

Number of students present every day, 23, viz: Wallace, Earle, Claude, Clyde, Elzie Sutton, Clifford, Wash, Arthur Arbogast; Hoke, Willie Pugh; Fred and Flossie Conrad; Vernie, Roscoe, Bessie, Lena, Cordie Brown; Joe, Blanche, Lola Gum; Leslie and Minnie Ostendorff, and Russell Crowley.

The Authors' Club.

The Marlinton Literary Association (limited) refused to take seriously the man who proposed to substitute for the subject selected by the committee for debate, the deep question: "Resolved, That the signs of the times indicate progressive tendencies." The Critic tossed up to inquire if he knew what that meant, and nothing more was said about it. A compromise was made on "Resolved, That Childe Harold's Pilgrimage is the greatest of Byron's poems." The spirit of the members is to pursue the subject and the study of the productions of reputable physicians, as the fairest they can get to in the line of good literature, and they intend to do so. Next Critic, Geo. T. Clay and R. C. Barlow-made trip.

DUNMORE.

A good time for sleighing.

B. M. Yeager was in town Sunday.

So far as heard from the sick are improving.

Joe Hannah dehorned fifty or sixty head of cattle at Dunmore.

Mr Wash Hevener, of Hightown has bought H. M. Moore's cattle.

There is some talk of putting in a portable mill at The Ropose to saw lumber for the big mill.

It raineth, snoweth, bloweth, the trees are uprooted the roads blockaded, and Stonewall went to see his girl.

Big William McLaughlin, who was shot two weeks ago, has procured the services of Hon C. P. Jones in his case.

William Gum was thrown from his horse one night last week and had two ribs broken, an arm fractured, and pretty badly done up.

R. L. Nottingham took a load of turkeys, chickens, and butter last week to Huntersville. Mr Boggs is paying higher prices for poultry butter and eggs than in the cities.

Pinkerton the detective made a failure one day last week. He arrested his man and his man told him to wait till he got his overcoat. When he went for it he just kept on going, and if he hasn't stopped he's going yet.

An exciting trial came off before Justice Arbogast at Point Lookout Saturday last. Sol Davis plaintiff, John R Ralston defendant. The attorneys were C. B. Swecker for the plaintiff, and J. L. Hudson. After a boisterous time the jury brought in a verdict for the plaintiff and costs.

The latest is that the railroad will go to Marlinton. We understand that the hill this side of town is being cleared off for the depot site. The road will come in near the Bridge and a big hydraulic ram placed close to the Bridge to throw the trains up to the depot on top the hill.

The Poor of Pocahontas.

The Hillsboro correspondent of the Greenbrier Independent calls attention to the fact that there are unmistakable signs of suffering among the very poor of the county this winter. It is unfortunately true, but the proportion of the population is so small that it could be greatly helped, if not entirely alleviated, if those who are blessed with plenty would contribute from their abundance. It is no body's fault that there poor people among us, not even the administration's. If people lack for necessities in this county it is because they have not the energy to make an effort. There are people here who are suffering from cold with an endless supply of wood in sight of their doors and who have not the enterprise to stretch forth the hand to get it. There are children shivering in rags who could be decently clothed if their parents had the energy to look to their more fortunate as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions of reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that contain Mercury.

Sold by druggists, price 75c per bottle.

LINWOOD.

Dave Varner was visiting on Clover Creek Sunday.

J. A. Moore, of Knapps Creek, attended the Ayers-Varner wedding.

Clark Sharp is busily engaged logging for L. Yoke.

A. E. Barnes seems to be meeting with much success with his patent gate.

Some of the boys have the gold fever and expect to start for Klondike in the spring.

Keep your weather eye open; Dick Showalter says he has gotten tired of keeping batchelor's hall.

Ben Brown will move his mill to this place and begin sawing for Messrs Yoke, Dakers & Co., about February 15.

The ever popo'ar drummer, T M McCorkle, was in this city last week.

'Judge' Higgins, the Linwood weather prophit, says lookout for plenty of snow and very cold weather during the month of February.

Mrs W. T. Cameron, who has been dangerously ill for the past week, is much improved.

The closing exercises of the Sixty Fork school will be held on Thursday night, February 3. A grand time is anticipated.

We are having plenty of winter. Fine time for sleighing, and the boys seem to be making good use of it. The sports from "Askham Castle" and Chest Hall can be heard on the roads any hour. Squire Grews loading the procession with the Chest Hall Band.

Married: On Thursday, January 28, at the residence of the br des father, John W. Varner, Mr Wm. P. Ayers and Miss Ella V. Varner, by Rev W. A. Sharp. After the ceremony the guests repaired to the dining room where an excellent repast awaited them. The bride and groom left on Friday for an extensive bridal tour.

Jeremiah Judkins.

BROWNS CREEK.

George Brambrick, near Dilleys Mill, was the guest of H. P. MacLaughlin last Saturday.

The next thing, after groundhog day, will be sugar making if the weather gets warm enough.

Miss Demma Hogsett, of Mill Point, is visiting he grand parents, Mr and Mrs W. P. Hogsett, at this time.

Miss Carrie Thomas's school closed last week. She will teach her second school, for this year, on Beaver Creek.

Married: At the residence of the bride's father, Henry Sampson, of Browns Mountain, on Thursday, Robert Rider, of Highland, to Miss Rose Sampson, by Rev. O. B. Sharp.

J. W. Loury, of Loury's Mill, paid our Creek a short visit last Sunday. Come again, Jimmie, we are always glad to hear your funny remarks.

J. E. McLaughlin has moved to the house lately occupied by A. W. Curry. Mr Curry has moved to the village of Frost to be in time for the railroad.

Bill Skinner.

THE WAGNER HOTEL.
HUNTERSVILLE, W. VA.

I have opened my hotel and can accommodate every one who stops with me. I have a good house, well furnished, and good beds.

For the horse there is plenty of good hay, corn and oats.

G. W. Wagner.

TOP OF ALLEGHANY.

Rev Matheny preached at this place last Sunday.

Plowing, clearing and making arrangements for another crop have been the orders for a while past.

The spealing Friday night was well represented; quite a number of the fair sex being present.

Charles Trimble, of Monterey, paid this neighborhood a flying visit Tuesday.

George D. Houchin, of Traveler's Repose, was the guest of W. C. Wilmoth Friday night.

Charles Varner, who has been living in Leroy, Ill., for the past two years, returned home Friday, accompanied by Brady Ervin, of Upshur County.

Miss Maud Barkley came home from Pickens, last week, where she has been staying for the last few months.

David Hiner, of Monterey, William Freeman's partner, has returned from Tuckyhoe and says that Freeman will be along in a few days with 40 head of the short horns.

The sick of this neighborhood are very much improved at this writing.

And still it rains.

Sallie Slipper.

The firm of Buckman & Kramer of Laurel Fork will move their saw mill to the John Hill farm, in Highland, shortly.

Prof Grimes will bid the people of this part ad eu shortly. He contemplates going to the Concord Normal.

W. F. Wilmoth was unexpectedly called to Marlinton on business Friday.

Mr and Mrs W. L. Wilmoth are visiting their son, J. D. Wilmoth.

Miss Lettie Beverage has been quite indisposed for a while.

There was singing at Traveler's Repose Church on Sunday with Miss Grace Hill as organist.

At a recent Literary meeting at Sunny Side school house, Clyde Beard was fined 5c for failure of duty, for which he gave bond with ap proved security.

Every thing is just right, with plenty of snow for good sleighing

Abraham Luke.

DILLEY'S MILL.

News is scarce in this part.

H. P. McLaughlin was in this part recently.

Miss Lena Kinnison made a visit home last week and returned Sunday.

George Fertig has about completed his new house, assisted by Clayton Dilley.

Mrs David Hively is a successful chicken raiser. She sold ten doll rs' worth the last season.

Mrs Matilda Moore and daughter made a trip to Marlinton last week. Miss Lura Moore attended the social while there.

J. L. Carpenter lost his old Sing er a few days ago. Thus ends the life of poor old "Singer." For noble fighting he seemed to run; he caught the rabbits and scared the foxes.

At Henry Sampson's, near Mt Tabor, Miss Rosa Sampson and Mr Robert Ryder, of Highland county, were united in matrimony by Rev O. B. Sharp. About fifty persons took suppe; with the happy couple and they are off to Highland now.

Rev Clutterbuck will preach at Mt Zion the first Sunday in February at 10 a. m. Yours truly.

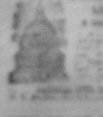
HOW'T FIND OUT.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it seems your inner it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What to Do.



There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy fulfils every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold urin and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following the use liquor, beer, or wine and over comes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists, price fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet both sent free by mail. Mention The Pocahontas Times and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Tee proprietors guarantee the genuineness of this offer.

West Virginia's Leading Family and Political Newspaper.

The INTELLIGENCER is in its forty-sixth year, and throughout the period of its existence it has been carrying its formation to the homes of the State. The vote 1896 will be a history making year scarcely less in importance than those which have preceded it. The first regular session of the Fifty-fifth Congress will be notable, as it will witness the debates and action on vital questions that affect the people; the proposed reforms of the Monetary system, the Cuban question, Hawaiian annexation, and many foreign relations now pending.

The year will be important politically. A new State legislature and a new Congress will be elected. The campaign will involve vital State and National issues, and in West Virginia the choice of a U. S. Senator.

A Sermon.

By "SENEX."

The steps of a good man are ordered by the Lord. Tho he fall he shall not be utterly cast down; for the Lord upholdeth him with his hand.—Psalm 37.

QUITE a number of articles have been printed in this journal illustrating in a measure the history of our pioneer families. The lessons to be learned from such a history as theirs will not be correctly understood except interpreted by the principles presented in the scripture just repeated. The two important facts stated are these. The steps of good people are established by the Lord, and the Lord takes pleasure in the way of such people and the good people may fall they shall not be utterly cast down, for the Lord, Creator of heaven and earth upholdeth them with his right hand.

In the bible sense, good people are those who are willing to take the sinner's place and thus come in communication with the Savior of sinful men, and accept the reconciliation graciously and earnestly proposed. The good man is the one who confesses with the mouth the Lord Jesus, and believes beyond all doubt that God has raised him from the dead (Romans.) To such a man the Lord imputeth not iniquity, his sin is covered up, and his transgressions are forgiven.

A consideration of this text fixes our attention on the doctrine of a special providence. Cicero, the Roman writer and orator, says: "Providence is that by which any thing is foreseen before it takes place." One of the most devout thinkers of this century says: The doctrine of Divine Providence is that all things are sustained, directed, and controlled by God."

There are a good many young people in Pocahontas County prepared to give one of the best statements of this doctrine when they repeat these words: "God's works of providence are his most holy, wise, and powerful, preserving and governing all his creatures and all their actions." Human dependence on God is summed in these Apostolic words: "In him we live and move and have our being," or existence. The dependence of all of God's creatures is universal and perpetual. Were one link in this chain of dependence severed annihilation, passing out of conscious existence, is the least evil that would follow.

God governs by restraining and guiding. He restrains by holding the solid worlds in their orbits and places by the law of gravitation, and by the power of His hand He withholds free agents from natural and moral evil. In preserving and governing all His creatures and all their actions, God rolls the planets along and stations the suns, and arranges as one vast and mighty host the heavenly spheres, and works wonders among the inhabitants of the world. Without God's works of providence atoms and planets, angels and devils, saints and sinners could do nothing what ever.

Now in reference to the truly good in the sense already explained, God's providential works are sure and beneficial. All things shall work together for good to them, that love God, and are the called according to His purpose. (Romans 8.) Whoever then wishes to have his steps ordered by the Lord, and thus go through life securely and happily, can best realize his hopes and aims by observing the fixed provisions and principles of God's providential dealing. There is a proverb that teaches us "He that walketh uprightly walketh surely, but he that perverteth his ways shall be known," or found out. The tenth chapter of Proverbs is eminently recommended to such of our readers as would desire to have their steps ordered by the Lord. The promises and provisions of God's providential dealings with good men are set forth in the Ten Commandments. In virtue of these principles and provisions, their power was a prevention of those Commandments, and their power will be a prevention, but what did or will at one time bring untold misery.

Just here it is comforting to note specifically also in virtue of God's special provision in ordering the steps of good men, that for a good man fall he shall not be utterly cast down, for the Lord upholdeth him with his hand.

Curious questions have been raised about this feature of God's providential dealings permitting good people to fall and sometimes to all appearances dealing more kindly toward those who never pray to him nor try to love and serve him. Because the sun shines upon the just and the unjust and God sends rains and fruitful seasons upon the good and the unthankful, it does not follow that He fails to show distinguishing mercies to those that sincerely serve Him. The secret of the Lord is with them that fear Him. The Lord loveth the way of the righteous, but the way of the wicked he turneth upside down. The Lord knoweth the way of the righteous, but the way of the ungodly shall perish. Notice the contrast in the first Psalm. The Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptation and to reserve the unjust to the day of judgement to be punished. (2 Peter ii 9.) The righteous are preserved but the ungodly are reserved and there is a wonderful difference between the dealings of God's providential preservation and the dealings of His providential reservation.

To impress the significance of our text upon our minds let us mingle with good people and notice how goodly in many ways their lots in life have been. Born of good parentage, wonderfully guided in many steps of their lives, how pleasant have been their friends and children; even the little ones whom Jesus early called to himself seem still to come back and nestle in the bosom of parental love. How many good books they have had to read; what kind and skillful physicians have attended them in sickness. When disease has come upon them what good places they have had to be sick in; how infrequent and short their bodily infirmities are; how seldom have they suffered for the want of suitable food, clothing, or shelter; how marked the hand of God in ordering the general tenor of their lives. Often have their feet well nigh slipped, but God had held them up. They have been in the midst of almost all evil, but it has not been allowed to sweep them away. Often they would not perform their undertakings that would have proved their ruin.

In conclusion let it be impressed upon our minds that with us now it is as it was with those who who have gone before. Unseen dangers, men and demons, friends and foes, darkness and pestilence are surrounding us. Could we have seen them in the past days or see them now, our lives would be unbearably wretched and miserable. How kind in God to hold us with his hand and give us a heart and temper to enjoy life and His mercies. His hand upholdeth us, —how much better is that than our hand upholding Him.

"I confess that often and often when I had been calling at the Burtons, and the cat had made himself objectionably conspicious, attracting unreasonable attention, I had found myself wishing that something bad might happen to him; that he be run over in the street, or get choked on a chicken bone; avail himself of any of the many ways by which a cat may leave the world, but never in my most miserable moment had I dreamed of being his murderer. Well I knew that the man who either intentionally or by accident laid violent hands on the animal on which the Burtons had bestowed their choicest affection could hardly hope to continue to enjoy further acquaintance and companionship with the family, even if he was on the eve of becoming a member of that family. I shrank from what was before me: the melancholy duty of announcing his sad end and I inwardly raved at Fate and Miles for putting a man whose nerves are not made of brass in such a position.

"But, as I stood there gazing down upon the lifeless Adonis, so unnaturally quiet and well behaved, I had no idea of shrinking my task of informing the family of the sad occurrence, altho tormented with the dreadful thought that which I had done might banish me from Maude's presence forever. When I laid the facts of the case before Miles, who was considerably puzzled at the concern I exhibited over a cat, he was inclined to give way to unseasonable mirth, but something in my manner warned him that this was no time for laughter and he became duly thoughtful.

"Well to make a short shorter, I took the advice of Miles who seems to have rid himself of those niceties of conscience, so hard to retain in this grasping world, not to mention the unfortunate occurrence at all. We would bury the cat, thereby concealing all evidences of my crime. The family would mourn for him a day or so, but there would be a good deal to occupy their attention in our approaching marriage, and in busy preparation for that pleasing event they would not think so much of the missing Adonis. Miles also forcibly reasoned that it would be an awkward business explaining. He could not see how I would go about making them believe I had done it accidentally: doing it on purpose would have been so much easier. So he reasoned and so I agreed with every thing he said, except that the cat would be forgotten in a day or two; I knew better. I make no excuse for listening to Miles, who with his positive "it was meant to be this way and could not be otherwise" way of reasoning that brought on one of those passionate slips of conscience that cause so much entertainining misery these days.

"I suppose we had put in an hour over the lamented remains of Adonis. Then we buried him in a moist place in the woods, "the mole with our hypocrisy turning," which was a part of a sort of dirge which Miles chanted all thro the performance. Then impressed with the frailty and uncertainty of life—especially cat life—we mournful marched back to the village. It seemed to my excited mind that it had been a year, instead of a few hours, since we had passed the Burton residence and was Adonis alive and well sitting on the gate post. He had received my pleasant salutation with a statuesque indifference, remarkable even in such a mannified creature as a cat. He was gazing placedly off into the distance, no doubt thinking of taking a chase after some bird or chipmonk; hence abrasion into the woods from whence he was never more to return, thanks to me. We had already reached the village, I making no effort to extricate myself from my moody reflections to my friend Miles, who seemed to be making exertions to rouse me, when a turn in the road brought us face to face with Maude and her mother

Mike, the gardiner and man of all work. The meeting was altogether too sudden, even if I had had the intention of making a full confession, I could never had done it; when Maude cried out: "Oh, Judy! have you seen anything of Adonis? He's been gone for three hours; something must have happened to him."

"I was thankful that it was too dark for her to see anything in my face, but the sympathetic interest which she could not have seen if there; but, bless her heart, she did not doubt me then. I remember hearing Miles giving some information with great fluency and ease regarding a cat he had seen going off in a certain direction, and seeing Mike go off in search. The ladies had some mind to follow, but we persuaded them to go back home. Miles and I, (who here entered upon a systematic course of prevarication and falsifying that makes me blush even now to remember), assured them that Adonis, like all other cats, who felt the time hang heavy on his hands, (or paws, whichever is correct,) had thoughtlessly strayed away for a little while, and they would find him on the gate post when they got home. Maude, seeing the cheerful view I took of the case, brightened up and began laughing at some pleasant remembrance connected with the cat, for she began: "Oh, what do you reckon he caught last?" I could have told her exactly what he caught and where he caught it, but it would never do to be going on in this light manner so soon after the decease of the subject of these remarks. By this time Burton's gate was reached, and we took leave of Maude and her mother.

"Perhaps an extended account of all the phrases of mental perturbation which I experienced in the next ten days and was still permitted to mingle with sensible beings, would be interesting to psychologists, but I can hardly at this day think with calmness of that time. How I offered a reward of a hundred dollars for the recovery of the cat, and was beseiged at all hours of the day and night by persons with cats, hoping to secure the reward. Of course I was very weary of the position I found myself in, as any conscientious man would have been, but I had never considered the possibility of my nerve farseking me, until my wedding morning when Maude and I stood before the clergyman making promises which, Heaven knows, I meant to keep, when I happened to glance at the clergyman. Horrors! perched on the good man's shoulder was Adonis, the cat I had slain, with such a malignant look on his face that I actually shivered. In an instant his ugly head had vanished and we were receiving the congratulations of our friends.

"For eighteen months I was no doubt happier than I deserved to be; after the deceit I had practiced, but it is a very wise man who knows what he deserves. I think I must have arrived at the conclusion (madman that I was) that I had taken the best course. Any other plan of action would have been disastrous, I felt, and besides I had promised myself that Maude should know the whole story some day, and so would have a gay laugh over it.

"Maude was to hear the whole story much sooner than I had expected, but not from me. Would that she had, but I don't suppose my account of the unfortunate occurrence would have made any difference, the result would have been the same. Of course it was Miles who, in the end, was the instrument, in the hands of Fate, that caused my undoing. I have always thought that had I been alone on that miserable gunning expedition things might have turned out differently, but from that time on I had played a losing game.

"Maude had been up town on a shoping excursion and was returning. Miles and a friend of his happened to be on the same train occupying the seat directly in front of Maude. Miles was in a state of artificial hilarity, a condition all too common with that gentleman, and by some mournful chance his conversation turned on me and my poor affairs. He began in that loud penetrating tone which considered so ornamental in the court room:

"'Did you ever know Stagg?' Stagg who is running for commonwealth's 'torney down in his county? Awfully careless boy Stagg is. Did you ever hear 'bout him killing his sweetheart's cat and pretending he didn't know any thing about it, offered rewards and all that sort of thing? Well, it was this way—' and he meandered out a most remarkable tale.

"Perhaps it was all true, there are more ways than one of telling a story. My way would have been a very different one no doubt. I am certain it was told in a very effective way, for no other story ever took effect more quickly; I am sure of that. When I reached home that afternoon there was a short note waiting for me which proved to be a stern farewell.

"In it I could see that Maude was well able to represent that admirable class of women whose greatest achievement is to be sufficient unto themselves and always true to their convictions. (Sometimes too true.) I made no defense in the subsequent proceedings. I had no heart to, for in the words of Prospero: "My spirits as in a dream were all bound up, my nerves were in their infancy again and had no vigor in them." I lost no time in leaving the country and in other climes to seek forgetfulness.

* * * *

Two weeks ago I happened to be down in the neighborhood where all these things took place. Passing the Burton's house, long shut up, I could n't help noticing a small tablet set in the side of the house. I could easily read from the road the following inscription:

In Loving Memory of ADONIS,
Cruel y Put to Death
October 9, 1889.

"This was all, but quite enough. Rushing hastily across to the station to catch the train I almost stepped on a kitten some children were playing with in the road. They jerked it quickly out of the way. I suppose they thought I meant to step on it. They need n't have been afraid. I have killed one cat."

The Treasure Trove.

PART I.

IT was a dull day in Blankton, the county seat of one of the mountainous counties of West Virginia. The inhabitants did not notice particularly that it was a dull day, for they had long ago accepted the state of dullness as their own, and found life very pleasant by not thinking whether they were having a good time or not. Down the long hill leading into the town rode a tall, good-looking young fellow on a bay horse. The loungers on the store porch watched him with inquiring eyes. They knew almost every body in the country at a distance by his horse, his clothes, or his motions long before it could be seen that he had a nose on his face. The most expert among them had to give it up however.

A boy spoke, "I know him, he's that feller what is courting Mary Saunders; I seen him at meeting with her up at Wordbine Sunday."

"Rides purty good stock," said one.

"Say, mister, want ter trade that hoss?" said a somewhat inebriated young man sitting on his horse in front of the store porch.

"Not today," was the smiling reply. "Would you please tell me where I will find Lawyer Wilson's office?"

He was directed to the right place, and as he rode away Abe Riggles, the blacksmith, said:

"Sure you don't want to go to the county clerk's office to get the papers?"

"No, sir, I am sorry to say that I don't today," came back as he rode away.

Dismounting he knocked at the one story frame building the office of "T. L. Wilson, Attorney-at-Law," as some faded letters on the window read. They were put there many years ago, not because a sign was needed, but because that was all that the lawyer ever got from a man who could paint signs when he had defended when charged with assault and battery. Entering the room, he found the lawyer engaged in entertaining his friends, some of the other members of the bar who had called; or rather congregated, to while away the time which often lays heavy on the hands of attorneys between courts. Seeing the stranger had something on his mind, they withdrew with remarkable tact and went their several ways.

"I see you don't remember me Colonel Wilson. I am Sam Weston, the son of J. L. Weston, of Richmond. You were at our house when I was a little boy, and gave me a half dollar for which I am still much obliged."

"Bless my soul! Are you Sammy? How did you leave your father? Your first trip to our part of the country I suppose? Your mother well? Take a seat! Have off your overcoat? Is your grandma still alive? Come far today?" and good old Colonel Wilson welcomed the boy heartily.

"I came from the neighborhood of Woodbine," said young Weston, answering the last question.

"Traveling through the country or visiting friends?"

"I have been at Mr Saunders' most there for a week or so."

"Which one, Old Man Saunders or John's?"

"I have been at Mr John Saunders', said Weston blushing slightly.

"Bless my soul! You have, have you. I smell a rat! Know Miss Mary? Fine girl! We are particular friends; last time I went up there she took my horse by the bridle and led him out to the stable, when I said I would n't would n't, must n't, ought n't to stop with them that time. But she got me off my horse some way, and she shortly got me to bed some important business with me, and it was three days before I left there. I did regret take a day's fishing, and the next day John L. and I took a squirrel hunt,—young man, if I was thirty years younger I'd be a thorn in your side! Roads pretty muddy, ain't they?"

"Coming from Woodbine, yes sir!"

"All your roads lead to Woodbine I guess," said the Colonel. "And you are Joshua Weston's boy? My son, your father and I were at college together; and I think if I had ever thought as much of a woman in those days as I did of him she would have been in danger of having me as a partner for life, whether she wanted to or not. Bless my soul! But is there any thing particular I can do for you?"

"Well, yes, Colonel, I think I am needing some advice, and I hope I am not too late in seeing you. You havn't been retained to fight me in a matter which has arisen between Mr Judson, whose place joins Mr Saunders', and myself, have you?"

"Bless my soul! Here is a letter from Judson. Let's see what he says. Do not take a case against him, and will be down, tomorrow. Um-m. Well, too late, Sammy, we will make a reservation of you; but if those fellows hadn't made things so lively here but what I'd read the letter, and Judson is a good client of mine and it would have been different. What 's the rub between you two?"

"That, Colonel, I will answer as they say the Yankees do, by asking you a question which will about state the case. If one man finds a buried treasure on the land of another man, which has the best right in law to it?"

The Colonel shifted uneasily in his seat, then got up and paced back and forth across the office floor. In a moment he said:

"Young man, I'll answer that by asking you another question: which side are you on?"

"Excuse me, Colonel, but I don't know any thing of law, I am as ignorant of it as a horse," pleaded young Weston, "and I thought out that way of putting the matter as I rode along today, so that I could get you to look at it in an abstract form, and say partiality you might feel for me would be entirely out of your way. I do n't know whether any one else ever thought out such a way to state his case to his lawyer. It seemed to me to be an original —"

"Original, the cat's foot!" fiercely ejaculated the Colonel. "Half the born idiots that ever lost their cases through their own stupidity, have come blundering up to their lawyers with what they thought was an question of law that covered the case; now young man do you think that I do n't know how the case stands between you and Judson. You have n't a foot of land on the books of this county, and Judson has. What I mean is tell me all about it. That question has never to my knowledge come up in this State, and when there is no law laid down in the statutes and no precedents in the courts, the right stands a show to win, if I put the case to a jury of sensible men. We have had splendid juries here of late years. Found any thing valuable on Judson's land, lay low?"

"I found a seam of money in gold in some wood-land belonging to Judson."

"Not very much, I suppose, every man in this county has had one fat coney dollar he would get a man that ever accumulated any coney but and I kind of

The Pocahontas Times.

Marlinton, Friday, Feb. 4, 1898.

Entered at the post-office at Marlinton, W. Va., as second class matter.

THE longing for ignoble things;
The strife for triumph more than truth;
The hardening of the heart, that brings
Irreverence for the dreams of youth;
All thoughts of ill, all evil deeds,
That have their roots in thoughts of ill;
Whatever hinders or impedes
The action of the noble will;
All these must first be trampled down
Beneath our feet, if we would gain
In the bright fields of fair renown
The right of eminent domain.
—The Ladder of St. Augustine

O. A. PERRY has been appointed postmaster at Charleston.

A RESIDENT writes us from Huntersville that the Greenbrier Railroad is a thing of the past. We would remind him that the darkest hour is often just before dawn.

GENERAL APPLETON is compiling the names of all Union soldiers and sailors who were citizens of West Virginia. He has 40,000 names to go over. They will be placed alphabetically with date of enlistment, promotion, death or discharge, and other matter which may be specially mentioned.

SEVERAL persons were trying to locate the direction of Cuba the other day. They all agreed it was an island in the Atlantic Ocean southeast of us, except one who claimed it was directly south. Upon examination it was found that the meridian passing through Pocahontas County would cut Cuba half in two, making the island directly south of us.

A TRAGEDY occurred at Montgomery last Friday. George P. Tucker came home unexpectedly and found William McAllister with his wife under compromising circumstances, and shot and killed them both. He gave himself up to the authorities. The woman was about 40 years old and has three grown children. McAllister was about 21 years of age.

THE Marion County school case has been submitted to the Supreme court. The case was started by John Kennedy to prevent the school teacher from reading the Bible in opening school, on the grounds that it was against the constitution of the State to give religious instruction. It is to be hoped that the four men who compose our Supreme Court will declare for the sake of appearances that the Bible is higher law even than the constitution of the State and unlike it does not need to be amended.

OUR progressive Superintendent of Free Schools, Professor D. L. Barlow, has adopted the plan of the other superintendents of West Virginia counties and made arrangements to start a normal school at Pine Grove, near Edray. (See advertisement elsewhere in this paper.) The rule is that every county should have one of these normals, with the exception of those counties where the State has established a State Normal School. The neighborhood of Pine Grove is one of the most suitable in the county; a large number of interesting young people have their homes there; the people are noted for the comfort in which they live, and board and lodging can be secured for six dollars per month. We wish to refer once more to the advantages of an education, the lack of which one does not feel until it is too late to remedy it. If young people could only realize how acutely they will resent the failure to educate themselves during the time between childhood and when they have to "root pig or die," they would work at their books in order that they might have the comfort and solace then life of an educated mind. The young boy or girl must petition their guardians for an education. We have never known it to fail where the child insisted upon going to school but that he went, and in a few years the money invested in the schooling brought a hundred fold. Some parents send unwilling children to expensive schools, and the result is—nothing. But where the desire for schooling originates in the student the parent can spend his last dollar to advance his child, and the money will be well invested.

CONGRESSMAN DORR'S SPEECH.

We have received a copy of the speech delivered by Congressman Dorr, January 10, on the maintainance of the present civil service law, and have read it with great interest. It is a very able argument against the continuance of the law and advocates its repeal. It is a good, wholesome speech, in which the speaker is opposing the policy of his party. He says he is opposed to the civil service law because it is "an innovation upon the system established by our forefathers, the wisdom of which has been demonstrated by experience . . . and a step in the direction of reestablishing the form of government that was repudiated by the American people in 1776. Mark that word repudiated!

The speaker prefers to follow two noted Democrats in the selection of his subordinates, "Jefferson and Jackson."

Mr Dorr called attention to the fact that in that city there was what was known as "The National Correspondence Institute," conducted by Mr J. W. McKinley. It's claim to patronage is based upon the theory that it has peculiar facilities for preparing applicants for a civil service examination. The proprietor has already netted a handsome fortune. All his money has been extracted from a credulous and hopeful people, and the blame does not attach to him so much as to the law that enables him to thrive.

During last year 50,244 applicants were examined; 24,163 passed successfully; 3,308 were given places. Over a million dollars were spent by these applicants in expenses alone to pass the examinations, and all waited for months in uncertainty.

He sees behind this vast establishment of officers to life-tenure a civil pension list. Deliver us from more pensions. The framers of the Constitution thought that life-tenure should only be extended to the Federal judiciary.

"I have no patience with that class of people who are constantly sneering at the 'office seekers' when they themselves have been seeking office all of their lives. I am an office seeker. I do not deny it. So are you all, Mr Chairman and gentlemen of the House." Just at this point Speaker Reed looked as tho somebody had let the cat out of the bag.

Mr Dorr closed with the following oratorical passages:

"The voice of the people cries out for repeal. The voice of the people is the voice of God, and woe unto the political fortunes of him who does not heed it.

We omitted to mention that attention was called to the effect the present law has upon the locality of the office seeker under the present "merit system." By fair proportion the District of Columbia would be entitled to 39 positions in the Departments at Washington. Under this law it has received 2396.

PRESTON COUNTY had a schoolhouse case recently. In Grant district the Board of Education discontinued a school in a subdistrict and the patrons of the school appealed to the county superintendent. He decided against the discontinuing of the school, and the Board of Education refusing to acknowledge his authority, a mandamus was issued by the Circuit Court, and the school reestablished.

GENERAL TURNER ASHBY fell in 1862 in a skirmish near Dayton, Virginia. Had he lived a few years longer no name would be greater than his in the annals of the war. To mark the place where he fell the Turner Ashby Camp has decided to raise $500 and buy an acre on the spot and erect a monument. Contributions are solicited and should be mailed to Turner Ashby Camp, Harrisonburg, Va.

IT is the belief of a good many that the Teller resolution defines the attitude of the two parties this year. On the Republican side the policy is to further debase and make subsidiary the vast amount of silver money in this country. The Democrats say that the bonds can be paid under law in either money, and that they could not be paid kept the Cleveland issue of bonds down $15,000,000. For the Administration now to give the bond holder the option is to work a fraud in favor of those who own bonds and who will realize a profit to whom profit on their investment.

KNAPPS CREEK.

Fine weather for February. It will soon be time for sugar making.

Price Moore went to see how Jim was getting along.

A. M. Oliver caught a fawn last week.

Miss Myrtle Harold's school closed last Friday.

C. B. Sweeker, attorney at law, blew up Saturday.

W. A. Bussard is going to build a railroad engine in the spring.

Summers Sharp has the rheumatism at this writing.

W. A. A. W. R. C. says, "Woe be unto the short-hand writer!"

J. A. Moore is going to build a store house, we suppose. He is getting the lumber.

Price Moore killed six rats in sixty shots with a shot gun, last Monday.

W. A. Bussard has got a new turning lathe and is turning out hay poles for the next hay harvest.

I. B. Moore and the new commissioner attended the sale at Green Bank last Saturday.

A. M. Oliver got left and M. F. Herold lost his shawl and the good work goes on.

It snoweth, it melteth, and J. A. Moore getteth in his sled and goeth to Frost for a load of rock.

A young man on the Creek received a letter two weeks ago. The name of the sender has not been learned.

COVE HILL.

James F. Hively's school is progressing nicely.

Hurrah for Cronin Dilley's gray hound and hickory nut shells!

A little warmer. The sun shines brightly and the ground hog has gone to hole.

Billy is still working on his house. We hope he will get it done before the railroad comes.

Lightburn Kellison of Mt Grove who was here last week, has returned home, accompanied by Nimrod, the great fox hunter.

The people of this part are enjoying good health, but we would like to have a good doctor, for fear some of us might get sick.

Miss Bettie Sharp has returned from Brown's Mountain. She says she likes it very well down there.

T. M. Gum's old rooster is dead. That is all. ASPEN.

[The Cove Hill correspondent has omitted to report a serious accident in his neighborhood. Last Friday night, at eight o'clock, the lamp went out and left a family in total darkness.—Ed.]

IT is likely that Mr Dayton's bill dividing this State into two Federal districts will be passed by Congress. A letter from Judge Jackson is holding the matter up for the present. He wishes the State held intact as long as he is judge, and then to be divided into an eastern and western district. Under the present bill Pocahontas is put into the southern district, and Hinton or Charleston will be the place of holding courts.

BUCKEYE.

The sick are all improving.

Mrs J. G. McNeil's hand is no better.

Sleighing and skating are the orders of the day.

W. McClintic's hands has been hauling hay from his mountain place to his lumber camp.

J. D. Pullins and S. B. Scott jr. came down to Buckeye on the ice Sunday. We would suppose Mr Scott was a dunkard, as he went in head formost.

The Lobelia correspondent must have got on the new railroad and left, as he don't seem to write any more. MOUNTAIN ROVER.

To the Public.

I have a large stock of goods on hand too large for my capital—and am compelled to sell out close to pay my bills and get ready for my Spring Stock.

A Pointer.

Always if you want to buy cheap go to the man who is compelled to sell. "One one, come all." I will give you better bargains than ever before for cash and good trade.

All persons knowing themselves indebted to me, please call and settle. My rule is "Cash or good trade," but by special arrangement I have a few accounts out. On those I can give but short notice.

YOURS FOR BUSINESS.

S. J. Boggs.

Assassinated!

We do not mean to assassinate you, as Wilkes Boothe did Abraham Lincoln, but warn you of the truth that you are daily assassinating your Pocket Book by not giving us your trade. Our stock is fresh, and constant increase of Business show that Prices are Better than elsewhere.

Constant sales allow no shop worn goods to remain on our shelves, and MONEY with ORDER enables us to obtain BARGAINS which we gladly share with our customers. This means no fraud or deception. Our figures are plain and bold, and you don't have to guess or ask. You can't tell what the bottom price of an article is until you see it HERE. Every day in the year is a bargain day with us.

Our stock is worth INSPECTION and all are invited to call and be convinced that as to Quality of Stock and Lowness of Prices we are surpassed by none. We want your trade and friendship.

We will take Beeswax and Fur. Our nine-years' experience as buyer and shipper enables us to pay highest prices. For quality of stock, lowness of price, and prompt business, we are respectfully yours,

L. D. Sharp.

Local Events.

It is a mistake about the Greenbrier Railroad being let to contract. The preparations are considerable, mostly and rocties.

The Green Hill school will close Friday, February 17, with appropriate exercises on the evening of that day beginning at 7 p. m.

Col. Robert W. Eastham, who was paralyzed in the Tucker county jail, has rallied and will probably recover from the attack.

Clifton Forge will hold a primary election at the suggestion of Congressmen Yost as to who shall be postmaster. All Republican voters are allowed to cast a ballot.

A Marlinton man won a bet of $10 to one cent that the Greenbrier Independent would make full use of "Ground hog day" as an interesting item of news.

Hon. J. Marsh Price entered upon his duties of Mayor of Ronceverte. There was a pleasant interchange of amenities between the outgoing and incoming councils upon the occasion.

At Charleston, J. W. Goshorn, ex-county clerk, is being tried for grand larceny, one of the four indictments found against him. The indictment charges him with having stolen a bunch of canceled road orders.

B. N. Rayburn and W. W. Tyree, the two blacksmiths of this town, have formed a partnership and will operate the shop and general store at the west end of the bridge, under the name of W. W. Tyree & Co. Mr Rayburn will move into the Golden building.

In Webster county, a five year old son of William C. Mace got possession of a dynamite cap, and, filling it with powder, set it on the hearth and put a live coal on it. The cap exploded, badly mangling the right hand of the Websterian youth, and necessitating the amputation of the thumb and two fingers.

The death of Wm. Ripley is reported from Greenbrier County. He drank 24 bottles of a flavoring, and died in great agony. His purpose was to procure a stimulant and it was used as a substitute for whisky. It is not uncommon for inebriates to drink patent medicines and such substitutes when the wants for drink is on them.

A negro was lynched last week at Beanswell, McDowell county for killing a watchman on the Norfolk & Western Railroad. The murder was unprovoked, and, while murders are not uncommon in that section, this so aroused the indignation of the people that they turned out and strung him up. West Virginia has been very free of lynchings in late years.

The skating was very fine last week and large parties of young people, some forty or fifty, were on the ice in the moonlight evenings. The following conversation was heard between two belles of the town: "Why didn't you come down, yesterday, as promised?" "Oh, too much skating! I could n't have walked that far to save my life!" "Oh, but I know you didn't fall down any oftener than I did!"

The Marlinton Literary Society will have a meeting open to the public February 18. For Friday of this week selections will be given from Poe's writings and the question debated: Resolved, that the introduction of labor saving machinery has a tendency to displace labor. To affirm, J. D. Pullin and J. H. Bird; to deny, S. B. Scott, Jr., and Norman Price. As was announced, Byron was discussed last Friday; and there can be no doubt that much valuable knowledge of this interesting man was inculcated by the society.

Rev. R. M. Caldwell, notice of whose departure for Kentucky was made a few weeks since, writes us as late as January 29 that he arrived safely at his old Kentucky home. He appears much encouraged with hopes of ultimate success and of happily resuming the work he loves so well and prepared home if for at so much time and pecuniary expenditure. The writer, up to the time of his letter had been unusually well. Kentuckians seem to be basking in the beneficent beams of prosperity as all kinds of farm products are bringing remunerative prices.

The building of the Greenbrier Railroad, beyond the bare fact that it will be built, is involved in a good deal of uncertainty. Public opinion generally in Pocahontas and the neighborhood meeting was held last week and rumors are abroad that the road will be built up the Greenbrier River from the C. & O. R. R., and those reports have been strengthened by the fact that there have been some land deals on the river below Marlinton, made by men who are in possession of the deeds here. The impression is that this perfect organization will overcome these difficulties and some of us will know where the road will run until it is too late to use the knowledge for speculation.

PERSONAL MENTION.

W. A. Bratton arrived here Monday.

H. S. Rucker went to Greenbrier last week to attend to a law suit

J. H. Bussard was in Marlinton last Saturday.

Rev. W. A. Sharp will preach at Marlinton next Sunday, at 3 o'clock P. M.

A. D. Williams expects to attend the Normal at Athens for the Spring term.

Miss Daisy Yeager has returned from her visit in Highland County.

G. W. Wade, late of Oklahoma, is now at his old home on Anthony's Creek.

Capt Smith was in Ronceverte last week and mentioned among the distinguished visitors.

S. B. Scott, Jr., took a plunge bath in Greenbrier River, last Sunday, on his way to church at Buckeye.

Mrs Ligon, of Clover Lick, is very seriously ill. Drs McClintic and Larue, of Academy, were there last Sunday in consultation.

Mrs E. I. Holt, of Academy, who has been seriously ill some weeks, had several convulsions last Saturday.

Mr John S. Guy, of Deerfield, Augusta County, died last week aged 65 years. He was a prominent citizen of that neighborhood and an uncle of W. A. Bratton, of this place.

Paris D. Yeager, who is now in the express office at Cheyenne, Wyo., sent an Indian tobacco bag to be added to Norman Price's collection of Indian Relics. It is the work of "Cow Horns," a Shoshone from the Reservation, north of Cheyenne. Every pipe smoker, who has seen it, covets it to carry his tobacco in. It is made of fringed buckskin and the bead work is very elaborate and of many colors. He writes that Klondikers are going thro by the hundred.

Shooting Match.

A big shooting match will be held at Wm. McClure's, Saturday, February 18th, 1897, between the East and West side of Greenbrier River. The shooting will be done with rifles, and the distance and other rules will be made known on the day of the match. The prizes will be valuable and be announced hereafter. All the rifle shots in the county are invited to be present.

There are some well known shots on Elk and Clover Creek who have been talking of meeting some of their kind from The Hills and Knapp's Creek for years, and finally the match has been made and set for that day.

Persons are allowed to use peep sights but not globe sights. The distance will probably be sixty steps with rest and forty steps off hand, but that will have to be agreed on that day. Rain will not delay the match as there is a large barn which can be used for shelter.

A Wild Cat Hunt.

The Courtney boys and Bob Geiger have had a big hunt in Marlin's Mountain during the recent cold weather. Bob Geiger brought his hounds with him and came down on a visit. The result of the hunt consisted of two wild cats, two gray foxes, one red fox, and a polecats.

When Mr A. M. McLaughlin lived near these woods his pack of hounds had very nearly driven all such game out of Marlin Mountain, but lately there have been signs that wild cats and foxes are plentiful there.

The wild cats were chased on two consecutive days. They circled in the laurel thickets, and one of them ran within a few feet of the senior Courtney. He had no gun and was compelled to wave his stick to make it pose at a safe distance. In both cases the wild cats were treed and shot by Wilson Courtney with a shotgun.

The proper name for the wild cat of this region is the bay lynx (L. rufus). It is noted for its keenness of sight, and from it the expression "lynx-eyed" is derived. When chased by dogs, if it hears no sign of men, it will make short circles and finally take refuge in a tree. If it sees the hunter approach it will jump down and run away. In both cases last week the animals were shot as they were running down the body of the tree to escape. The wild cat is very destructive to lambs and fawns, and getting rid of two of the two worst creatures will help a good deal. One of the bodies was on exhibition last Thursday in Marlinton. It was about the size of an ordinary dog, had long legs, and was covered with reddish fur. It's claws were long and dangerous. It's head seems an exact counterpart of the domestic cat's, only larger.

The gray foxes killed by this party were caught by the hounds after circling several hours, but the red fox ran off to Brown's Creek some seven or eight miles and as I say, you can have them for nothing.

Expert Opinion.

All things considered, the writer considers that he is justified in saying that Hugh Sharp, hands down to the scratch and looks after the bumps in the winter. Grin, don't you say so Sir?

J. S.

HUNTERSVILLE.

Quite a number of drummers visited our town last week.

Mrs J. W. Loury has been very ill for some days and is no better at this writing.

A protracted meeting has been going on for the past week on Beaver Creek, conducted by Revs Perry, Underwood and Hogsett.

Sam Stewart, col., who was thrown from a horse some days ago and badly injured, is now able to be around.

Our blacksmith, George W Ginger, is working at Peter's camp and will remain there for a short time.

Our merchants received quite a lot of new goods last week. Judging from the amount of goods they sell, times can not be as hard and money as scarce as people suppose.

Your writer is reliably informed that at a meeting held in New York a few days, the Greenbrier Railroad Company was finished and at an end, and that the Chesapeake & Ohio has decided not to build any new rail road. This information came from parties in New York and Washington, who were interested in the building of the said Greenbrier railroad. This communication was received on last Saturday by one of our citizens and the writer read the above report. So, we guess, the grand old County of Pocahontas will have to remain in oblivion a few years longer.

With best wishes, I remain.
Yours truly, Alfred.

A Cutting Affair.

From the Independent-Herald we learn that Engineer Jim Eubanks, a brother of Dick Eubanks of this county, and Thomas Chilten got cut by Hugh McFadden, in a restaurant in that city. McFadden was arrested and held under $1000 bail to answer an indictment:

Mr Eubanks was sitting at the lunch counter when Hugh McFadden came in with Major Parker's pet monkey and threw it on him. Eubanks slapped the monkey away and it ran out of the room and made its escape. McFadden went out and, failing to find it, came back and began to curse Eubanks. The latter tried to avoid any difficulty, but was finally drawn into a fight; McFadden drawing a knife and cutting a bad gash in one of his arms. Several people rushed in to separate the combatants and Mr Chilton got cut in one of his wrists.

C. R. McDannald, Executor of Mary C. Bias, deceased; —Plaintiff.
vs.
Warwick G. Bias, —Defendant.

The object of this suit is to obtain a decree against the defendant in favor of plaintiff for $607.34 with interest thereon from the 1st day of July, 1896, and costs, and to attach and subject to the payment thereof, the undivided one sixteenth interest of defendant in lands in Pocahontas County, whereof his grandmother, Margaret Gatewood died seiz'd.

And it appearing by affidavit filed that the defendant is a non-resident of the State of West Virginia, it is ordered that he do appear here within one month after the first publication of this order and do what is necessary to protect his interest in this suit.

DIED.

At his home on Greenbrier River, January 22, 1898, Mr Allen Galford, aged 81 years, 10 months, and 7 days. He was a professed Christian in the pale of the Presbyterian church. That which follows was written by him a short time before his death, and found between the leaves of his bible:

Our own Heavenly Father: I trust that my heart has been so changed that I love God, hate sin, and seek for a cheerful submission to the will of God in all things. I am conscious that in all thi gs I come short of being what I should be or doing as I should. Imperfection and sin are mixed with all that I am and with all that I do; I have never been as active in the service of God as I should have been. But from all my sins and imperfections I fly to the cross of Christ mercy bought with blo d is my only plea, but this is a plea that will not fail. As I enter on this year, not knowing whether I shall live to see its close, I enter on it in the midst of many trials and surrounded by great difficulties, I desire to cast myself re newedly and more entirely on the grace of God; to commit myself and all that concerns me for time and eternity into the hands of Him whom I have believed, well assured that he is able to keep that I have committed to Him. To God's grace in Christ I commit my wife, my children, from whom I am at this time painfully separated; and my possessions. I desire that I am a follower of the Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ.

HOW TO FIND OUT.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What to Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root, the great kidney remedy fulfills every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold urin and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following the use liquor, beer, or wine, and over comes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists, price fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet both sent free by mail. Mention The Pocahontas Times and send your address to Dr Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Tee proprietors guarantee the genuineness of this offer.

West Virginia's Leading Family and Political Newspaper.

The INTELLIGENCER is in its forty sixth year, and throughout the period of its existence it has been carrying information to the homes of the State. The year 1898 will be a history making year scarcely less in importance than those which have preceded it. The first regular session of the Fifty-fifth Congress will be notable, as it will witness the debates and action on vital questions that affect the people the proposed reforms in our monetary system, the Cuban question, Hawaiian annexation, and many foreign relations now pending.

The year will be important politically. A new State legislature and a new Congress will be elected. The campaign will involve vital State and National issues, and in West Virginia the choice of a U. S Senator.

New York News Letter.

THE Administration at last has seen fit to send a war ship to Havana. The Maine arrived there on Tuesday. It is rumored that Consul-General Lee urged this step.

A fillibuster sprung a leak Wednesday and sunk. Four of the crew were drowned. It was in command of the famous fillibuster captain Jack O'Brien, so latest reports say. The Cubans claim that a Spanish spy was on board and scuttled the ship. The ship was, it is claimed by the Spaniards, loaded with dynamite, ammunition, and death-dealing devices.

* * *

These fillibuster captains run a great chance. If caught by our revenue cutters or war ships they are sentenced to fines and long terms of imprisonment. But if successful they receive large sums for the performance of their duty.

Here is a queer case of a woman. Mrs John G. Smith, after being married eight years, suddenly forgot the fact that she was a married woman, and married another man. When arrested she claimed that she had been hypnotized by Smith. She is now on trial for bigamy.

Angelo Carbone, who was to have died in the first week of February, charged with killing a man on the street, will have another trial. A persistent detective has been working on a clew that another man did the killing, and at last caught him in Baltimore, got a confession from him, and has also secured the weapon (a knife). When the condemned man was told of his good luck he was crazy with joy and exclaimed: "Let me go!" This man all along has proclaimed his innocence. Carbone was actually railroaded to the death chair on circumstantial evidente, his trial being the shortest on record, lasting 8½ hours.

A policeman, while strolling along Madison Avenue the other morning at 3.30, noticed a light in the basement of one of the houses. Upon asking what was the matter, he received the reply that the person inside was "one of the girls." As the voice sounded decidedly masculine the policeman demanded admission, and upon being refused rang up the occupants of the house. A careful search was made in every nook and cranny, but Mr Burglar could not be found. As a last resort the policeman opened the large furnace door and there was the man. If the burglar had staid there much longer he certainly would have been cremated. He was profuse in his thanks for rescuing him and said that prison was preferable. He served a year and a half for robbing this house once before.

It was reported the other day that Richard Croker and others have purchased a large brewing plant in this city. What Mr Croker does he does well, and I have no doubt that the brew of his beer will be good.

* * *

By telegraphic news I notice that the State of Georgia will sell her convicts, but they must go in batches of fifty, and the State promises to keep an eye on them. Whipping must be abolished. This letting out of convicts to capitalists at a certain figure may and may not be a good move. Time will tell.

* * *

David Blackwood, a farmer near Plainfield, N. J., is in hard luck. The other day a mad dog bit his cow and the cow now has hydrophobia. He has it chained in the middle of a field. The cow is in terrible suffering, jumping and convulsions at stated intervals. After these spells are over the cow is completely exhausted. The cow will be shot, and Mr Blackwood will send in a bill to the township for damages.

The big mill strike is still on at New Bedford, Mass. So far the outlook has not changed. The New England manufacturers are backing up the New Bedford mill proprietors, and if any mill given in to the strikers it does "dreadful" must be good. Those mill strikers have been having a hard time of it for years. They are fined for every thing—even if they look up from their work. Wages are very small (dividends to the proprietors are very large). By this wholesale system of fines their wages are reduced in many cases one half. Every man who has a drop of honest blood in his body will pray God that these hard working, down-trodden people will win. Public sentiment and the press throughout the country is with these people.

Tuesday afternoon we had quite a fall of snow, but during the night a heavy rain set in which entirely washed the snow away. People hereabouts were wishing for good sleighing, but nature changed matters.

GEORGE M. SANGSTER.

THE writings of the late poet laureate of England was the topic discussed by the Marlinton Literary Association recently. To persons with "eyes to see" this poet is a timely teacher. He seems to have been raised up to interpret the signs of the nineteenth century and impress their significance upon the minds of those willing to give their attention. His "Vision of Sin" is justly regarded as the most impressive parable ever spoken since the time when the Divine Teacher used parables. By sin the poet alludes to those "harmless amusements" and "innocent recreations," so called, that are scientificing to persons of "elegant leisure" as to become about all that are cared for as things worth living for. The song, the game, the wine cup, and thrilling mazes of the undulating whirl all enrapture d with beauties enfolded forms. The poet sees that the day for such pleasing ways of passing time has an evening, and he notices a person whose life's day has thus mainly been spent, on the lookout for the final lodgings, and represents the devotee of sensualistic indulgencies as saying as he dismounts at the close of the day:

"Wrinkled hostler, grim and thin,
Here is custom come your way;
Take my brute and feed him in,
Fill his ribs with mouldy hay."

"The brute" is the run down, abused body; the stall implied is a hole in the ground six feet by two; and the "wrinkled hostler" is the party often seen delineated in the guise of a skeleton with hour-glass and scythe with which he has mown the "mouldy hay." Then much of the vision is about the long talk "the gray and gap-toothed man as lean as death" had with the "grim hostler" upon alighting at the "ruined inn."

The Treasure Trove.

II.

THE lawyer and his young friend proceeded to the village hotel, the Colonel remaining in a deep study as he walked along. He was the pride of the bar of his county, and attended the courts of the adjoining counties. What Wilson said was law with a great many people, and often a young lawyer was confronted with the assertion that Wilson had said he couldn't do it. In settling debatable questions in connexion with property, some of the knowing of the local business men in making the adjustment would throw in what Wilson had said about it; and tho Wilson had not said it, the magic of the name was sufficient. Occasionally two such men would meet. One would say that Wilson said he could, and the other that Wilson said he couldn't claim a good title to the piece of land, or other point in controversy, and a good many legal mistakes were perpetrated in his name.

He was a man with a good understanding to begin with, and he had thrived with the world. He was kindness personified and his face shone with good nature and good living. He was a power in his native land, and had been rewarded for his honesty and charity to men. He was an ardent politician, but had been content with being more of a power in his party rather than reap the rewards as an office holder. "Put myself up as a target? Not I," he would say; and he had gone on practicing until he was a lawyer known far and near. It was odds in Weston's favor when he secured him for the case.

Weston had intended to give Judson the benefit of his attendance to Dantown, where the treasure was conveyed, but his sweetheart Mary's mind had turned to her old friend Colonel Wilson, and had sent him down to secure his services. As both these young people are total strangers to us we must look up their history a little bit before we go into the details of the finding and disposal of the treasure, which has since been so widely known as the "buried gold case."

Ten months before the story opens, Weston rode along the country road until he came in sight of Woodbine. The village hotel offered no special inducements to any man at any time, and on this evening Dogwood Creek was too high to be forded. The sight of the swiftly flowing, muddy water water was sufficient to tell the observant traveler that the crossing was impracticable for what lay beyond it—a cheerless evening in the village hotel. The stream ran just by the village. The hotel keeper, eagle eyed for customers, sat on the porch and saw the well dressed stranger ride up to the ford at sunset. The rider drew rein and seemed to be hesitating. The landlord became anxious.

"Pears like the pesky critter air thinking of turning back," he muttered. "Hey, Ide! Ide!" he shouted to the cook, "gin that there bell a ring for supper!" Adding in an undertone, "If that dont fetch him I don't know what will."

He waved his hand encouragingly, but with one more glance at the stream the rider turned his horse slowly, while the feeling of the landlord was very much that of the spider which sees the fly turn back just in time to escape the web.

"Dad burn it, gal! ring that there bell harder! Maybe the water racer so he can't hear it. Put more life in it!" But it was no use. The electrically gifted on the bell set up on the top of a tall pole, and the sound floated over the water and rang in the ears of the young man even after the winding road had shut off the sight of the village.

"A very well conceived plan," mused Weston as he rode along, "and it would probably have succeeded had I not been to well acquainted with the Woodbine Hotel. I think I can make a good excuse of that same high water to stop the night with some farmer hereabouts, and it may be that he will be as willing to keep me as the hotel keeper, and I don't want to pass another night at the Woodbine."

He had noticed a well kept farm house a mile back, and to that place he took his way. A neat, white house set back among the trees. He had intended to give the customary "Hello!" at the gate and ask to stay the night, in the business like way that he had learned in traveling in the mountains, but the unmistakable air of refinement was about the place, and he hitched his horse to the rack and knocked respectfully at the door.

This was the home of the Saunder's. The proprietor himself came to the door. Offering his hand, young Weston introduced himself and explained the cause of his presenting himself thus and trespassing on his hospitality. The host immediately put him at his ease by asking him into a lovely room, and remarking in a most courteous manner:

"In this thinly settled country we have come to believe that the favor is more often conferred by the traveler than those who keep him. Have a seat while I call a boy to take your horse!"

Weston was left alone. He was standing in the window looking at a negro boy who had come to take his horse. The boy, after a close inspection, seemed to be satisfied as to the desirability of the horse, and put him down as one of the several he would like to own. Weston saw that his horse had made a friend as well as himself, and was mentally congratulating himself upon his good luck in being so hospitably received in such a comfortable home, in the way that a traveler in a strange country, who has been uneasy as to where he shall lay his head, and who at last is safely housed. As he was thus thinking with his nature open to be favorably impressed, the event of his life happened. The door opened and Mary Saunders entered the room. She had not known of his arrival and had come the room in a hurry to get some unimportarticle she needed. Weston introduced himself, and he was able to do it in such a gentle and unobtrusive way that the beautiful girl forgot the shyness and meditated flight long enough to get acquainted.

On that great occasion when they finally made up with each other for life, the girl asked him did he know how near he came to not getting acquainted with her.

"If I had known you had come," she said, "I would never have come in to see, for strangers often stopped with us and I ate at the second table and they would go off and never come back."

"Well, sweetheart, but I came back. No body can deny that and we have liked each other better each time I came, havn't we?" and here he called her some names which we will not repeat.

"One time you didn't make any speed with me, sir; and that was the third time you were here when you told mama your name was Sam. I had thought it might be Reginald. I just thought then that that settled it, but when you stayed away so long after that I got over the name pretty well."

"You have the prettiest name in the world, Mary, and I have got it by heart. I say it over to keep from forgetting it."

But this was a long time after—several months. It is not for us to describe the beautiful girl, the only child of this household. As she stood before Weston, that evening, tall, lithe, graceful, with wavy hair, she aroused the enthusiasm of that woman which comes into every man's life as his all in all. Old men may remember the visions of the past. Young men in the passionate longing after the line which is to "complete and content their own," can appreciate the inability of telling what may be graven on the soul. We firmly believe that in many cases of great and soul absorbing love, young people know each other when they first meet. It was true in this case tho they did not know it. Only there seemed to be no turning back. But enough of the story of their love making for the present.

Mary returned to her mother in the kitchen and told her of their guest, and she also told her that he seemed to be "such a nice young man." After a few visits no power on earth could have dragged any words of commendation from her, no matter what an exalted place he occupied in her heart. Her mother must have had an intuitive knowledge of her daughter's fate, for a shade of anxiety crossed her face, and when she met him at the supper table she was prepared to wage war against him. But he was a man to be trusted, and by the power which is only vouchsafed to anxious mothers, she knew it, and she trusted him well.

The party sat down and ate and Weston spoke of the bell ringing incident. He said that he had observed that he rarely ever passed these houses of entertainment without hearing the bell ring, if it was within a few hours of meal time.

"Oh, that's an old trick," the head of the house remarked, "they try to toll you in," and it is not known to this day whether the old gentleman was aware of the pun he made. "A man may have intended to ride some six or seven miles farther, but the wayside inn sees the stranger coming, and rings the bell and makes him lawful prey."

For The Times.

STRATFORD-ON-AVON.

OVER my mantel hangs a small tinted photograph, representing a little town nestled amid trees, and couched upon a bright stream gliding thro' willow fringed banks. It brings to my mind a fair, July day when we climbed to our places in the daily coach for Stratford, as said coach was drawn up with a flourish before the town-hall of Leamington.

The four, fine bays impatient to be off, sprang forward, and with a loud blast of the footman's horn, we whirled through the streets of Leamington, and were soon in the pretty, shaded suburbs of the town.

And we were really en route to Stratford - on - Avon! As many times while in England, I was fain to pinch myself, to be convinced of my own identity, so it seemed almost incredible to be actually setting my face to the far-famed town, towards which, in spirit, I had long, long ago made pilgrimage. Over the perfect road, bordered for a long distance by the great overshadowing Warwickshire elms, we rapidly made our way. Soon the towers of Warwick Castle appeared against the summer sky.

This central county or shire of England holds in its embrace many spots of historic and romantic interest. With Leamington for central headquarters, one can easily walk to the old town of Warwick, with its stately castle, to which the tourist has access (sixpence per head); Guy's Cliff the scene of the redoubtable Guy's hermitage, and the cool sparkling spring at which he slaked his thirst; Blackton Hill, the spot where Piers Gaveston was murdered "by Barons as lawless as himself," in 1312, the ivy-covered ruins of Kenilworth, the well preserved graceful Stoneleigh Abbey, and above all an easy ride to Stratford-on-Avon!

We were soon beyond Warwick, its castle, St. Mary's Church, and the Earl of Leicester's Hospitable founded in 1572 or 3. It was a delight to be borne by the good horses, who seemed to find the coach no burden, the driver used his long whip only to crack it beside the shafts, never once touching the spirited steeds. To one a lover of animals of all kinds the skillful driving of Scotch and English coachmen added greatly to the pleasure of excursions. They knew how to drive, getting speed out of their horses, but yet sparing them, and rarely using the whip. It is true the smoothest of roads are beneath the horses feet, and hills are rare. Stratford is but ten miles from Leamington, we had four horses, and these were changed at the end of the first five miles. There was no delay, as we drove into the little village the fresh team was awaiting us, and quickly harnessed, we again sped on our way. The country beautiful in summer's luxuriant foliage, the neat cottages by the wayside *were bowers of roses and honey*suckle, and the ever present ivy, the well cultivated fields green with various crops, wheat beginning to yellow for the garner. To our American eyes it was strange to think of harvest the latter part of July. Now and then a field scarlet with poppies glowed in the sunshine. The poppy, red and yellow, occupies the same place that the oxeyed daisy does with us. It may not be a boon to the farmer, but is certainly a thing of beauty and a joy, to the color loving eye. Away in the distance we catch glimpses of Edgehill, and the waving of the British flag. These peaceful fields and lanes were once trodden by the grim soldiers of the Parliament and the Crown.

The deep green, and intense quiet of luxurious groves delight our eyes. Here and there are great herds of deer, lying peacefully in the noontide heat beneath the branching oaks. This is, it must be, Charlecote! The driver confirms our supposition. One of our fellow passengers becomes almost pathetic as she appeals to the coachman in no wise to fail to point out to her the stile over which Shakespeare climbed when he invaded the park to help himself to Sir Thomas Lucy's deer. Soon a gap in the hedge reveals a broken rather rickety stile—the place if not the stile over which the erring youth pursued his nefarious way.

Charlecote manor house is called one of the best specimens of Elizabethan architecture. From the road we had a very good view of the large, many windowed mansion. Tourists are allowed to wander through the park, and inspect the house if the family is absent. From this point, Stratford is but a short distance. A fine bridge crosses the Avon just at the entrance to the town. A stock sale was in progress, and flocks of sheep occupied much of the roadway. We passed by the market place where cattle, sheep, and hogs, and busy-looking men and lads were congre*gated. A short way up the street* and our four horses drew up before The Red Horse Inn, celebrated by Washington Irvine. Our first steps were of course turned towards the house in which Shakespeare was born. A dingy, low half - timbered house with overhanging roof—well represented in the pictures one sees of it.

From its eaves, and across its small diamond paned windows I saw the first, and most of cobwebs, I had discovered in England. You see age, ruins, decay, grimy, in*deed, but never cobwebby.* England is nothing if not tidy!

A stout gentleman suddenly appeared from somewhere. So suddenly that the thought was suggested that he was in hiding nearby ready to rush forth at the appearance of tourists. He speedily unlocked the ancient door, and when we were inside, as speedily locked it again. A good - sized, stone floored, shadowy room in which we stood. I remember no furniture save perhaps some old chairs ranged against the wall. From this room we were led out into a smaller from which a short, unsteady stairway led to the upper room in which Shakespeare was born. Like the rest of the house, it is very clean and bare. It is a low room with a beam across the ceiling—a long, low window, open fireplace, and uneven oak floor. The small panes of the window, said to be the original window are a sore of diamond-cut sights to me, so closely, indeed, are they scratched that the light is dim—of equal, if not greater interest to me, than even the Shakesperian relics, was the clear cut signature of Sir Walter Scott! The signatures of *Byron, Charles Dickens, Thacke*ray, and other literary and dramatic celebrities are to be seen.

From this room, we descended the stairs and entered the museum where various relics are preserved. It is hung with pictures, several of Shakespeare, and some of his kindred, also of actors who have represented in noteworthy manner Hamlet, Lady Macbeth, Richard III., and others. There we were shown the Bard's chair from Talcon Inn, Bidford, where he held revels—drunken ones—unworthy to be remembered of anyone be he poet or no. Shakespeare's desk from the grammar school in Stratford, with his boyish carving upon it. The visitor is charged an additional sixpence to view the museum. No fire or any artificial *light is ever used about the build*ing, as it is a most inflamable one. The custodian does not live on the premises. A garden adjoins the house, in which are cultivated all flowers, shrubs, and plants mentioned in Shakespeare's plays and sonnets.

On leaving the house, we were at once besieged by small boys anxious to act in the capacity of guides. But we wished none of them.

Taking our way towards New Place, Shakespeare's residence dur*ing the latter part of his life*, and where he died in 1616. The foundations of the old house are all that remains. The beautiful grounds, once the poet's garden, are open to the public. Great beds of green-glistening ivy are everywhere. As one proceeds along High Street on the right is seen the "Ancient House," a fine piece of architecture of the 16th century, bearing the date of 1596. It is of the heavily half-timbered style, elaborately carved. At the Town Hall is a fine statue of Shakespeare, the poet represented as leaning upon some volumes on a pedestal pointing to lines upon a scroll, the lines are the well-known ones from a Midsummer Night's Dream, beginning: "The poet's eye in a fine frenzy rolling."

On the plinth is carved—

"Take him for all in all
We shall not look upon his like again."

We now directed our steps towards Trinity Church, where the bard lies in his long slumber. Our way was directly along the Avon, the narrow streets were very quiet, and we met no passers at all. In its shaded churchyard, filled with graves, stands Holy Trinity. We passed up the main avenue, flagged with flat blue slate gravestones, the inscriptions nearly obliterated by the tread of many feet, and entered the church which is said to stand on the site of one built before the Norman Conquest for Stratford dates back to the times of the Saxon kings, and was the seat of a monastery three hundred years before the Conquest.

*The church is a cruciform build*ing, and the attention of the visitor is called to the fact how it is "skerved." A straight line drawn up the nave would hardly touch the altar at the east end of the chancel. It is thought by some, this is to represent our Lord's head inclining on the cross, while others say that the chancel points to the exact spot where the sun rises on the day of the dedication of the church.

The length of the church is 131 feet, the breadth including the aisles 67 feet, and the height of tower and spire 163 feet. At the west end of the south aisle is the old font where Shakespeare was baptized, and near by the chair fonts of the church is preserved. The edition of this Bible being of 1611. In the sanctuary near the north wall we find the stones which cover the dust of William Shakespeare and Anne, his wife, and here beneath the bust of the poet is the far famed epitaph:

"Good friend, for Jesus' sake forbeare
To digge the dust enclosed heare.
Blest be the man that spares these stones,
And curst be he that moves my bones."

The bust represents the poet in the act of composition, holding a real quill in his hand. It was no light thing to stand at Shakespeare's grave, yet I cannot say that even in the dim religious light of the old church, and beside that tomb, I was as thrilled with emotion as when I stood beside the empty chair of Sir Walter at Abbotsford, a few weeks before. In my early, literary studies I had learned to admire Shakespeare, but had never the deep love for him which Scott had always inspired in me.

In the south is the American window which was unveiled on Shakespeare's birthday in 1896. It represents the Infant Christ in his mother's arms, and on either side are English and American worthies in attitudes of adoration. On one side are Saint Eguin, Bishop of Worcester, King Charles 1st, Archbishop Laud, who first proposed sending a Bishop to Amer*ica. On the other side are Americ*go Vespucci, Christopher Columbus, and William Penn, and below, the Landing of the Pilgrims at Plymouth Rock. The inscription on the window is, "The gift of America to Shakespeare's church." And in some parts of the church other cool inscriptions inform the tourist that if each American will contribute a certain sum, the win*dow can be completed at an early* day! We passed into the pretty churchyard, where the sunshine filtered through the intertwined branches of the lime and elm trees, and made our way to the river bank. The Avon flows directly by the church yard walls, and in the calm afternoon, listening to the river's murmur, we ate our simple luncheon in the rear of Holy Trinity. The Avon is but a narrow stream, but quite deep, and swift, but it is a lovely sheet of water with a gentle murmur of its own, and when one has wandered thro' the meadows bordering upon it, or lain at noonday under the green hedges not far from its banks, or gazed long into its clear waters, one learns to love it, apart from Shakespearian association. Says Winter: "One does not know Stratford until one knows Avon."

Not far from the church, we went to the boat house, and soon a stout boatman was rowing us to the town. Those hours at Stratford can never be forgotten. We did not visit Anne Hathaway's cottage, a walk across the fields of a mile and a half. Neither did we inspect the Grammar school where the poet is supposed to have acquired his "little Latin and less Greek," which was founded about 1483, as we were glibly informed a little urchin of not more than seven years, as well as by the guide books to Stratford. We did not rhapsodize at the Red Horse Inn over Washington Irving's armchair, and the poker with which he stirred the fire, for we had safe in America his Sketchbook, with his fine description of Stratford.

The horses were being put in, the footman mounted to his place, the coachman took his seat, and gathered up the reins, and we whirled away from Stratford, with its old low houses, quiet streets, fine memorial fountain, the gift of Mr George W. Childs, of Philadelphia; the beautiful, gray, old church, and shining river. The sun was rather low as we pursued our homeward way, and we were not inclined to talk over much. The low beams gave a beautiful light to meadow and river, tree and shrub, and shut off the Cotswold Hills areas, giving a slight resemblance to our distant mountains. L. S. P.

The Pocahontas Times.

Marlinton, Friday, Feb. 18 1898.

Entered at the post office at Marlinton, W. Va., as second class matter.

THREE riders raced on the broad highway—
The devil, a woman, a man—
And, spurring his steed, laughed the devil gay,
"Come, follow me, ye who can!"

Three riders raced, and the stakes were six,
Over the broad highway,
And the devil was second in coming in—
For the woman led the way.
—Life.

WE have recently had the hottest February day in many years.

SENATOR ALLISON acknowledges that the Dingley Bill is an unmitigated failure as its predecessor, the Wilson Bill.

FAMINE is bringing the war to an end in Cuba. The more loss of the island will not be half the punishment Spain should be made to suffer for her inhumanity.

THE ocean steamer Veendam, bound from Rotterdam to New York, struck a sunken wreck and sank. The crew and passengers, numbering 212, were saved in the nick of time by the St Louis.

THE United States demands an apology of Spain. For barbarous cruelties inflicted on Cubans? No, but for words taken from the mouth of the Democratic Editor and spoken by one man against Mr McKinley.

WITH Alaska cleaning our surplus population on one side, and on the other fighting Spain, will make more room for the rest of us, if we go to war over the patriots who are trying to get the inestimable blessings of liberty which we enjoy, and gribble.

THESE sunny days that bring
Thoughts of beauteous, balmy spring,
Add new vigor to the life,
Make us stronger in the strife
For the noble end, our aim,
In the battle for good fame.
But within my soul there steals
Promptings that the farmer feels.
Instinct brings the message now,
"It is time to start the plow."

WE Democrats have called President McKinley names a thousand times worse than those used by those used by the Spanish Minister, De Lome; but we consider it just as much an outrage as the most consistent Republican in the land. The right to vilify our leaders belongs to the American people, and when the foreigner repeats some of our stock expressions we rise up in our wrath and make him go home.

SINCE the New York Sun refer*red to the Harrisonburg "Spirit of the Valley" as "our esteemed contemporary," the editor thereof has been fast getting too big for his breeches. He feels that in exchange for that bright luminary he can dispense with a whole field full of ordinary contemporaries. He therefore begins to discard. He calls the editor of the Pocahontas Times a "polecat." He probably, does not know that in those words that is a mortal offence, and is an insult that can only be wiped out by combat a la mort. We therefore throw down our glove to the "esteemed contemporary of the New York Sun."

WE have endeavored to get some particulars concerning the finding of the dead body of a game warden near Hutton in Randolph County, but have been unable to do so. The Beverly and Elkins papers, from the county in which it happened, were overrun with a two inch notice of this ungrateful matter, and did no more than verify the report. They were compelled to give room to extensive articles on the money question. When the game law was passed, those acquainted with the temper of the mountain people, said that the game warden would not search a man's house with impunity, and those most anxious to protect the game predicted such results to the most adventurous of these officials. Hutton has recently had some trouble with game wardens and there have been some fatalities and convictions or two for violations of the game laws. A correspondent to the Alleghenian up to very recently of these dreary scenes says: "I see now terrible marks of the fatal war between the hunter and the man who was making his laws."

THE GREENBRIER RAILROAD.

An article in this paper two weeks ago pointing out the fact, that the Greenbrier Railroad was apparently missing the best route, has occasioned a good deal of comment. An anonymous writer in the Greenbrier Independent discourages the investigation which we invite, but we do not care to reply to him further than to say we do not contend with a man who fights under cover. We feel quite able to tell even so great a man as Mr Ingalls, or anyother stranger, a great deal that he does not know in regard to the county of Pocahontas. Great man that he is, he does not know who lives on the back road to Edray.

When the internal improvements of the old State of Virginia were projected into this county there were some grave mistakes made. The staunton and Parkersburg turnpike, by wirework in the legislature, crossed the mountains at the highest and most out of the way points. When the State road was built from Lewisburg to Marlin's Bottom the road was put over Spring Creek Mountain and Droop Mountain when both could have been avoided and the road made no longer. It suited the personal convenience of some citizens of the Levels to connect Renick's Valley and the Levels, and in spite of the valley of the Greenbrier offering a natural way into the county, the engineer put the road over two of the worst mountains in the State. It so outraged an old man, who as a local surveyor was assisting the engineer, that he quit the surveying corps in disgust.

THE GOSHORN TRIAL.

For the past week or so, J. W. Goshorn has been on trial for felony in the criminal court of Kanawha County. It is almost impossible to tell what the merits of the case are. The people of Kenawha have allowed so much looseness in their courts that the old statement "what is called smartness there is known as rascality elsewhere" is more particularly true of Kanawha than probably any other county in the State. The trial will be completed this week. The case is about as follows.

Goshorn is ex-county clerk, and a man of wealth and position. He has never had the least trouble in changing his politics, and at the last election he suddenly experienced a change of heart and came out as a Republican. He fought the present clerk, E. W. Staunton, hard for the place, but was beaten Ill feeling arose between them. Last fall Goshorn was accused as he was coming out of the office with having in his pocket some vouchers in the shape of cancelled road orders. He produced them at once. The State proves by the county clerk and deputies that Goshorn had planned to get these orders and destroy them to get the late sheriff into trouble. Goshorn swears that the deputy gave him the orders to make copies of and that he would have returned them. The best that the prosecution can make out of it is that they conspired with the defendant and did evil that good might come of it.

WHIPPED BY YOUNG LADIES.

The ethics of Charleston permit the temporary suspension of the rule against assault and battery long enough to allow innocent young girls to horsewhip a man who slanders them. Charleston has a long suspension brings over the Kanawha to the Chesapeake & Ohio depot. On this bridge the Misses Ketchiner, aged 16 and 18 years, met a young man named Brittingham, and having two stout horse-whips they lent him until he ran, and followed him the whole length of the bridge whipping him every step. He then had a warrant issued for the girls and the trial was held before a justice and a jury. The evidence showed that Brittingham was a discarded lover of the elder Ketchiner young lady and that he had told Miss Lida Reveal that the Ketchiner girls were not decent and were unfit for her to associate with. Miss Reveal was true to her name, and told the Ketchiner girls. They took summary revenge on the young man in the manner above described. At the closing of the testimony the justice instructed the jury to acquit the young ladies, which was accordingly done. The girls were very impressive and self possessed. The case did not have to go out to court, and a tremendous cheer greeted the news of the acquittal.

Bubbles or Medals.

"Ayer sarsaparilla." When you think of it how contradictory this term is. For there can be only one best sarsaparilla, as there is one highest mountain, one longest river, one deepest ocean. And that best sarsaparilla is——? ... There's the rub! You can measure mountains in height and ocean depth, but how test sarsaparilla? You could if you were chemists, but then do you need to test it? The World's Fair Committee tested it,—and thoroughly. They went behind the label on the bottle. What did this sarsaparilla test result in? Every make of sarsaparilla shut out of the Fair, except Ayer's. So it was that Ayer's was the only sarsaparilla admitted to the World's Fair. The committee found it the best. They had no room for anything that was not the best. And as the best, Ayer's Sarsaparilla received the one "Award" due its merits. Remember the word "best" in a bubble are two cents; but there are pins to prick such bubbles. Those others are blowing more "best sarsaparilla" bubbles since the World's Fair pricked the old ones. True, but Ayer's Sarsaparilla has the medal. The pin that scratches the medal proves it gold. The pin that pricks the bubble proves it wind. We point to medals, not bubbles, when we say: The best sarsaparilla is Ayer's.

THE YALE PROBLEM.

The problem from the New York Sun in this paper recently has caused a good deal of comment. The question is: How much will ten yards of silk cost at $1 1—001 per yard? J. A. G. writes from Roncoverte to give the solution, as the correctness of the result has been doubted by some of the silk merchants of that town. The silk costs, $10,010.

$$\frac{1}{.001} - 1 \text{ or } 1 \text{ divided by } \frac{1}{1000} = 1000$$

1000 plus 1 = 1001 dollars pr yd.

1001 x 10 yd = $10,010.

This simple illustration will prove the quantity of the fraction, i. e.

$$\frac{.001}{.001} = 1 \text{ being } \frac{1}{.001} = 1000$$

times greater must necessarily be 1000.

Here are some questions for solution: A boy had sixty apples in his basket, which he sold at the rate of five for two cents. The basket being too heavy for him, he divided the apples into lots of thirty each. One lot he sold at the rate of 3 for 2 cents; the other lot, of thirty, at the rate of 2 for 1 cent. Did he gain or lose by the transaction and why?

Two boys, A and B, had apples. A said to B, give me one apple and I will have as many as you. B said to A, give me one of yours and I will have twice as many as you. Solution desired.

MAPLE SUGAR.

The weather lately has been ideal sugar weather. Hard freezing weather yielding to bright, clear days makes the sap to flow. Last Monday a large sugar tree was cut down near Marlinton, and the tree "bled" until the ground was soaked. The discovery that sugar could be manufactured from this tree was not made until the eighteenth century. It was a prime necessity in those days when the pioneer raised everything he used on his farm.

The maple and sycamore belong to the same genus, which includes about fifty species the world over. Maples are generally classed by their leaves, having what is called palmately-lobed leaves. The fruit is a two winged "samara." American has two species, the sugar, rock, or hardwood maple, (acer saccharinum); and the scarlet maple (acer rubrum). The wood is close grained and takes the place of oak tolerably well. It is unexcelled for fuel and charcoal, and the ashes are rich in alkaline principles. A great deal of potash is manufactured from the ashes.

Sugar is made principally from the sugar - maple. The French-Canadians use the other species sometimes, but the yield is not more than one half as great. The trees begin to flow at the first warm weather after the winter freezes. A good deal depends upon the location of the tree. Those trees on southern exposures have an earlier season than those which are more or less sheltered from the effects of the rays of the sun. Trees growing in the most situations furnish the most sap, but it is not so sweet. A cold north wind with frosty nights and sunny days incites the flow, which is most abundant in the day; sufficiently warming at night when the temperature is below the freezing point. A warming night sometimes prevents the flow. The trees stop flowing at the approach of a storm, and a south wind will often cause them to dry up. The tree is so sensitive to the cold that the sap would flow from the south and east side of the tree when the same tree would show no sign of the sap if tapped on the north or west side.

In the New-England States the manufacture of sugar is far in advance of of the process in West Virginia. There they have patent evaporators, and buckets are used to collect the sap so that it will not be discolored. The sugar is put on the market at the prices of fine confectionary. With us the same style is in vogue with not an improvement in a hundred years. A sugar trough is made from the quarter section of a block two feet long, by means of adz and ax. A "spile" is made from the elder stock and is put in an augur hole in the tree. From two to five spiles are allowed to drip in the same trough. The water is carried by means of buckets, or in large "sugar camps" by a barrel on a one-horse sled, and boiled in iron kettles, getting some color from the smoke. On the approach of warm weather the sap becomes "ropy" and will not granulate. Then it will make syrup. Later on it will not even make molasses, and a product called "sugar beer" is prepared, and the season is over.

The tree recovers from its scars in about a year. The average quantity of sap is from 14 to 24 gallons a season. Some exceptional trees have been known to produce a "bushel" of water a day, and of real sweet sap eight gallons will make a pint of molasses or a pound of sugar.

Cattle grow fond of the water sometimes, and have been known to drink enough to kid them. The water is very palatable except to that unfortunate class known as "the billions," who find it very sickening.

CALHOUN has a new paper, The Signal. It breathes forth the pure and unadulterated principles of Democracy. The editor, E. H. Craddock, in his salutatory publishes his resignation as chairman of the Republican Executive Committee of Calhoun County. In his piece he has the following word painting

"With these few broken remarks we launch our hopeful ship, fully equipped, out on the beautiful bosom of the sea of journalism, and all are invited to drop in and see how proudly she rides the crested waves and how sweetly her banner caresses to the tender kisses of the zephyrs."

He will get down to the reality of life by the time he gets a form.

LATEST—Just before going to press we received a line from a prominent man in New York City which says we can be sure that the Greenbrier Rail Road will be built.

THE novelist Zola is undergoing his trial for criminal libel. He had taken up the Dreyfus case.

DR DANIEL, of the Texas Medical Journal, referring to typographical errors, gives an amusing experience in that line. He says he wrote: "Dr Jno. Assassinated!

We do not mean to assassinate you, as Wilkes Booths did Abraham Lincoln, but warn you of the truth that you are daily assassinating your Pocket Book by not giving us your trade. Our stock is fresh, and constant increase of Business show that Prices are Better than elsewhere.

Come out and we will show you shop worn goods to remain on our shelves, and MONEY with ORDER to obtain BARGAINS which we gladly share with our customers. This means no fraud or deception. Our figures are plain and bold, and you can't have to guess or ask. You can't tell what the bottom price of an article is until you see it HERE. Every day in the year is a bargain day with us.

Our stock is worth INVESTIGATION, and all are invited to call and be convinced that as to Quality of Stock and Lowness of Prices we are surpassed by none. We want your trade and friendship.

We will take Beeswax and Fur. Our nine-years' experience as buyer and shipper enables us to pay highest prices. For quality of stock, lowness of prices, and prompt business, we are respectfully yours,

L. D. Sharp.

W. W. TYREE & CO.

We wish to call the attention of our customers, and the public generally, that we are equipping ourselves with tools and good material for the purpose of manufacturing and repairing Wagons, Buggies, Etc., and all other blacksmithing that is required by the public. Our aim is to be always at one post ready for any work that is to be done in our line.

Send us your orders for New Wagons. We guarantee to give satisfaction in all the work we do, both in prices and workmanship.

Respectfully,
W. W. TYREE & CO., Marlinton, W. Va

I wish to call the attention of the people who have patronized me during the time I have been in the blacksmith business at Marlinton, that I have located in the shop with W. W. Tyree, at the west end of the Bridge in Marlinton, West Virginia, and hope still to have a continuance of your patronage.

Respectfully,
B. N. RAYBURN, Marlinton, W. Va.

THE public is invited to be present at the meeting of the Literary Association Friday evening. A lengthy program has been prepared and a timely subject for debate announced: "Resolved, that the United States should recognize the belligerency of the Cubans."

THE body of Deputy Game Warden Wilbur Teeter was found in the woods near Harman, on Dry Fork, Randolph county. There were two wounds, one in the hip and the other thro the heart. It is supposed that Teeter, who had made many enemies by informing upon violators of the game laws, was shot while tracking some one through the woods. His body was discovered by a dog, lying beside a log and covered over with bark.

A LOCAL weather observer has noticed that the changes of the weather depend upon the moon's phrases. In the dark of the moon the weather is clear and bright, and unusually warm for winter, but when the new moon comes in, the cold waves set in and we have storms and snows and cold rains until the moon turns the point and begins to wane. This has been a winter of high and low temperatures, destined to be fatal to bees and insect life generally.

IT is said that preliminary work will begin with warm weather to build a railroad, beginning at Romney, Hampshire county, running up the South Branch of the Potomac, through Grant and Pendleton counties, of this State, and Highland county, Virginia, and connecting with the proposed Greenbrier railway at Frost, Pocahontas county, provided the Greenbrier line is built to Frost. If the Greenbrier line does not touch Frost, then the new railroad managers propose to make a connection with the Chesapeake & Ohio road at some other point.—Cumberland Times.

"We have several lots of season-able shoes inside for this fall and winter trade which we wish to dispose of at once. Will sell them at a low price. Write at once." The above is taken from a letter I received from a prominent manufacturer, and explains why I am able to offer you shoes at these low prices. I have secured the lot referred to in the letter. My idea is to be of the greatest possible advantage to those who choose my store to deal in. By the way, do you like fish? I have them as low as anywhere. I have reduced the price of airtight stoves about 25 per cent as the season is late.

D. L. BARLOW, the Principal of the Pocahontas County Normal School, is a graduate of one of the best colleges of West Virginia. He holds a State Certificate, which was issued to him last fall by the State Board of Examiners. He has had seven years of practical experience in the school room as a teacher, and he is now serving his second term as County Superintendent of Schools. Most of his life has been spent in the school room as a teacher or as a student. The school is located in one of the best neighborhoods to be found, and considering the low price of board and tuition, this is by far the best all the teachers and students of that county have ever had. You are advised that school during the whole twelve weeks to be taught there would take you to the middle of the State Normal. Mr Barlow will close in the Pine Grove school building a set of the best stoves the market affords, and we are aware the students that we offer will be exceed in value from anywhere else in all cases for I want to treat to feel perfectly at home.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Misses Mollie Smith and Lillie Friel visited friends at Edray last Saturday.

C. E. Hevener was in Marlinton Monday. He was on his way, it is said, to have a conference with Locells and the other directors at the Hot Springs.

Miss Lillie Smith's school, in West Marlinton, closes next Friday. It has been one of the most successful schools ever taught at that school house.

HUNTERSVILLE.

To the Editor of The Times:

If you will allow me space in your valuable paper for a brief account of the news happenings for the last week by your pessimistic correspondent of Huntersville, as you call him, he will promise to say nothing more about the railroad. He freely admits that he may have been feeling somewhat pessimistic when he wrote you last week, but the feeling was brought about after reading the article in your paper the week before entitled, "Where the railroad should run." Now before reading this article the writer supposed that we were going to have a railroad right away. He further supposed that Mr Ingalls, President of the "Big Four," understood something about the topography of the country through which they expected to build the new road, and after having engineers in the county for several months he thought they ought to know something about the topography of the country. But when the article above referred to appeared your writer well knew the effect it would have in railroad circles, and felt sure a halt would be called in the building of the new railroad until this newly-discovered country of wealth lying along the Greenbrier River between Marlinton and Ronceverte could be explored; and the "level-headed man," the discoverer, could be examined as to his sanity.

Mr Editor:—Being first duly sworn, we meet the famous fish stories of Marlinton and the snake stories of the upper end by the biggest fish story of 1898. Miss Belle Burnsides, on her way to school, was crossing the Greenbrier River in a canoe. She saw a large catfish and killed it with the pole with which she navigated the canoe. The fish was 24 inches long and weighed 17 pounds. She says she was not out fishing, nor was it a good day for fishing either. In matching this story bring forth nothing but true tales.

THE Battle Ship Indiana sprung a leak in her boilers, while on her way to Key West, and had to be towed for six hours in port. This ship cost $5,000,000 to build.

TO-DAY, Jan. 31, witnessed New York City and vicinity with an old-time snow storm. The snow appeared about 4 A. M. and came very fast. As the thermometer registered 4 degrees above zero the day preceeding, the ground was in the right state to hold snow. Sleighing is being indulged in by the fortunate ones. The small boy is in his element. Snow is a beautiful thing to look at in the country, but in the city it soon becomes very dirty-looking on account of the heavy traffic. The snow fall was five inches.

A BIG fire, causing a loss of nearly a quarter of a million of dollars, occurred in Brooklyn Sunday morning. As the fire was surrounded by frame tenement houses, the whole fire department was called. The large building was a cardboard factory, and over a hundred employees will be thrown out of employment.

THE strike at New Bedford, Massachusetts, among the mills is still on. It looks, from the present situation, as though the captalists had the best end of the argument. The mills are warm, but these cold days the homes of the strikers are cheerless—no money to buy coal, etc., and sheer desperation is surely driving these down-trodden, unjustly-dealt-with people back to their work at the same old pay and the same old fines.

While John Walch and two other men were shoveling malt from chutes in a large malt-house at Leroy, New York, a large pile of malt on which Walch was standing suddenly gave way, and he was precipitated to the bottom and buried under four thousand bushels of grain. To recover his body, it took six hours of steady shoveling. His death must have been instantaneous.

Two men were rescued, after drifting on scows for three days on the stormy Atlantic. The way it happened was in this wise: As is the custom, all garbage collected in Brooklyn and New York is put on board scows and a powerful tug tows two of them out to sea and the stuff is dumped, and is food for the fish. Spring stormy, wintry weather the sea runs high and frequently the hawsers break and the scows are lost. These two men were sighted away out to sea, and, after a heroic attempt, were got on board a life boat and brought to this city. The two scows, which are valued at $10,000 each, are still floating around the broad Atlantic.

AN accident, which came near causing great loss of life, occurred on East River, January 31, during a driving snow storm. A ferry-boat was noisily crossing the river when a Sound steamer loomed up all of a sudden and crashed into its side. By the greatest of luck, the ferry boat managed to make its slip. The boat was crowded, every one on board ran for life-preservers and pandemonium reigned. The boat was nearly sunk.

EIGHT thousand men are at work in New York City removing the snow. Many of these men are starving. Every big snow storm is a God-send to them.

IT is estimated that over 100,000 men are idle in New York City at the present time. The poor of this city are suffering terribly this winter, as the cold has been unusually severe. The station-houses, almshouses, hospitals, and all charitable institutions are over-crowded. Every thing is done that can be done by charitable people for the relief of these unfortunates.

INSTEAD of the churches taking up collections for foreign missions, they should devote the money to the poor of their own country. Instead of missionaries to India, etc., they should be sent to the tenements and do some good work among the poor and downtrodden.

THE Poultry and Pigeon Show is now being held at Madison Square Garden. There are some 6,000 birds of fine feather on exhibition. The prizes offered amount to $7,000. There will be Brahmas, Cochins, Langshans, Plymouth Rocks, Wyandottes, Leghorns, game birds, Hamburgs, Bantams, etc. The feature of the show will be an exhibition of incubators and brooders. The little chicks hatched out every day will be eagerly sought after by the visitors. There will be a number of exhibition yards for fine birds. This show is always a success.

MR JAMES J. CORBETT has come out with the statement that henceforth he is out of the prize-fighting business. From now on he will strive to be a great actor, no sparring bouts appearing in his new play "The Adventurer." Pompadour Jim arrived at this conclusion because he could not make Fitzsimmons come to time. What a lot of free advertising these pugilists get, since both of them have theatrical troups on the road. Do you blame them?

A POOR fellow by the name of "John Brown" turned on the gas in his room at a hotel the other evening, and laid down to die. Fortunately a porter detected the fumes of the gas and heard it. A doctor was summoned and the man was revived for a time. Upon being asked why he tried to end his life, he replied: "I haven't a cent. No work. Nothing to live for. My parents are barely able to keep themselves, and if I cannot help myself I will quit." This sort of thing is a common occurrence in this big city. The cause is that the city is over crowded. People from nearby towns flock here, expecting to get work for the asking.

MAYOR VAN WYCK of Greater New York claims that he will reduce estimates to the tune of $20,000,000. In the police department he has cut the estimate down $2,500,000. Mayor Van Wyck has turned out to be a fine figurer. When the heads of the different city departments come to him and ask for an inbrease, he hustles out his pencil and figures. Invariably "they get it where the chicken got the ax."

OUT on Long Island the other day, a married woman spanked her former pretty servant. The cause was jealousy. If the spanking had been done in the house the young lady would not have cared, but it was on the public highway, in the presence of the townspeople. Considerable hair pulling was resorted to. The case was taken to Court, but the Judge threw it overboard.

SPRING-TOOTH HARROW.

The frames are made in one piece of steel angle bar, and formed to withstand all strain without buckling or warping. The teeth in this harrow are so spaced that they will not trail each other. Pulverizing the ground thoroughly. The steel pipe tooth bars are mounted in malleable boxes secured to the frame, and will not bend or break. The peculiar shape of the teeth curling two thirds about the bar gives the greatest amount of spring possible without straining the bolts, and because of their shape and fastening are stronger than used on any other harrow. By the levers the depth of work can be regulated while the harrow is in motion. The draft is steady and direct as the harrow has no side motion.

III.

WHEN Weston was 23 years old his father, by a succession of misfortunes in business, had become much reduced in fortune. The clearing time of his life found him with only a very limited capital when his affairs were settled up. Young Weston had always expected to carry on the mercantile business which his father had established, and had so prepared himself. Their reverses closed the house and continued bad luck caused them in the one act of assignment to lose the advantage gained by a life's hard work and honest living. An endorsement which was made as a "mere matter of form" for a man who was supposed to be as safe as the State itself precipitated the fall, and a few months' active work in changing all assets into money by the peculiar process known in courts, which requires two dollars to pay every one owed, left remaining very little in the hands of the old merchant. He could go into business again on a smaller scale, and he fully intended doing it, but he thought he had better wait a little and see how the trade was.

It was for the sake of his only son that he desired to establish the house again, and the old man was full of hopes and plans. He had no intention of rushing into the first thing that offered, and many and long were the conferences between the senior and junior Weston as to what their second venture should be. In one of these talks the father told his son about a singular misfortune he had had with a sum of money during the war of the rebellion.

When the war broke out he was living in Mississippi and owned some land on which he and his partner raised cotton. He had gone there as a boy and his father having died and left him nearly a a thousand dollars. He used the money in advancing it to farmers on their coming cotton crop.

There was a middle aged farmer in the neighborhood named John Harvey. He had worked for this man and he had a splendid reputation for truth and honesty. He was unmarried and lived alone on his farm. He owned no slaves. He had come from Virginia, and when he got into trouble through having been a surety for a county officer who had before then befriended him, he was forced to raise money to settle the debt.

Weston loaned him his money, and within a few days the weight of the debt pressed on Harvey so heavily he induced Weston to buy a share in the farm, and the two men operated in partnership for several years before the breaking out of the war.

They prospered and a warm friendship grew between the bachelor and the young Virginian. The country became involved in the great Civil War, and the two isolated, cool-headed farmers became disgusted with the whole affair. Harvey was one of the few men who thought that the war was going to amount to very much.

"Look here!" he said to his partner. "The North is coming to the slave question, and pretty soon the politicians are going to cost their eyes on the nigger and free him, and, mark what I tell you money, they'll vote him, too. The politicians are going to say, 'Let my people go,' and that is going to cause the biggest row to range the country ever saw, for the South is going to fight like tigers for that class of property."

This was in short Mr Weston's comprehension of the reasoning which his partner took, and they decided to sell out and go to Canada, and let the cool fight it out to suit themselves in the best-headed, fashion manner as they did. They sold their farm, stock, and after some delay started overland on a horse journey in the summer of 1861. They were bound for Upper Canada.

Harvey had served as a young man in the United States army, and had had much experience as a scout. He had been captured by the Indians and had remained with them for months, being detained in a friendly way. When the time came to make the trip to the Canadas, they obtained three mules, using one of them as a pack animal to carry such goods as they needed. They journeyed north by easy rides through Mississippi, Tennessee, and Kentucky. Mr Weston said that he thought it the pleasantest experience of his life. The trip was made in summer, and the men would generally camp at night on the grassy banks of clear streams. They procured food for themselves and stock as they traveled, and they made good progress.

They had with them over sixteen thousand dollars in gold, which weighed forty or fifty pounds avoirdupois, and was stowed away in the pack on the led mule. Nothing eventful happened unt l they were traveling in what is now West Virginia. Weston, who was riding in front of his companion, was captured by some irregular Union troops. Harvey had stopped to adjust the pack on his mule in a hollow which the road they were traveling crossed. A hundred yards or so farther on was a cross-roads. Just as Weston reached this cross-roads a squad of troops rode up and took him prisoner. Their route lay on the road that ran at right angles to the road on which the two were traveling. The capture was made without halting. Weston was glad that they were out of sight before they discovered his partner and the goods. The guerillas rode swiftly until they came to a house about noon. There they produced a rebel uniform and compelled Weston to put it on instead of the clothes he was wearing.

That night they joined a regiment of regular Union soldiers, and turned Weston in as a prisoner taken wearing the uniform of the enemy on duty as a courier. In vain Weston protested and told how he came by the uniform. It was regarded as a lie of the whole cloth, and he was sent to a Northern prison. His captors had divided the money he had been carrying in his pocket, several hundred dollars in gold, and they were rejoiced at their strategy in making the plundering so easy.

Nothing was believed when told by a man who charged Union soldiers with having dressed him up in Confederate clothes. Mr Weston knew nothing more of his partner. He may have been taken by another band of lawless soldiers, or he might have made his escape with the money, as he would probably have thought that Weston was just ahead until it was too late to find him.

After a year in prison he escaped. There was no exchange for him for he had no place in any Confederate troop. He made his way south and caught the war fever and enlisted. He never went back to the place he parted company with Harvey, and had never heard of him afterward. After the war he advertised in a number of Canadian papers, but he received no reply. Others had thought that Harvey had turned dishonest and gone off with the money, but Mr Weston had always said that he would stake his life on the honesty of the man.

Sam Weston listened with the greatest interest to this story, and it occurred to him that it would be a grand thing if he could get a trace of this man. He did not have the confidence in Harvey's honesty that his father had, but it struck him forcibly that if he could come up with him in the thirtieth year after and make him disgorge something like eight thousand dollars with thirty years' interest it would about set the Weston family on its legs again.

"Anyway," he said to his father, "I'll go to that crossroads and find out if he ever left that neighborhood. We have just decided not to harvest one cropin this year, and I will take the train and go to West Virginia, buy a horse, and take my much wished for trip on horseback that has been put off so long."

Mr Weston favored the plan, taking the view that it was a holiday for his son, and that he was playing a waiting game with his capital, while Sam was inclined to adopt every opening that offered.

When Sam announced at the breakfast table the next morning that he was going to take a tour on horseback among the mountains of West Virginia his mother exclaimed, "But think of the Hatfields!" "And the McCoys!" said his sister. "And the Smiths and the Wesons and the Winchesters," said his father. "There are lots of prominent families out in that country."

But the young man went.

Branchless Trees.

It is curious to note in these days of genealogical study how many people are mistaken in their pedigrees.

One of the most common errors in this country is to trace direct descent from some hero of history. It is a natural and amiable weakness. The Bayards of Delaware have been credited with claiming the Chevalier as their progenitor, altho he was killed in the retreat from northern Italy while comparatively a young man, and had never been married. By the way, his family name was Terrail, and not Bayard.

Many of the Knoxes, scattered throughout the country, claim descent from General Knox, of Massachusetts. Washington's first Secretary of War, but it is perfectly well known that he never had any children born in wedlock.

One of the most prolific of our earlier worthies, if we can credit recent claims, was Ethan Allen, the hero of Ticonderoga. Immediately after announcing the appointment of the Hon Ethan Allen Hitchcock as Minister to St. Petersburg, more than one newspaper informed the public with particularity that he was a great-grandson of Ethan Allen of Vermont and the Continental Congress. This statement was received with some incredulity by the real descendants of the Allen family of Vermont, for the reason, well known to themselves, that the old hero was never married, altho his brothers and perhaps his sisters were, and did their part toward populating the country.

These are a few cases, of many.—New York Sun.

A New Half-Breed: the Zebroid.

"The mule," says Cosmos, "partakes of the qualities of the ass and the horse. The zebra having now been domesticated, it has been asked whether we can not obtain from it an analogous half breed. The Baron de Parana has obtained one and calls it the 'zebroid.' The young animal is now six months old; it is a male of a bay color, with stripes similar to those of the zebra. These stripes are well marked on the neck, the head and the legs; those of the body are not visible, because of the thick winter coat. The mane is black and resembles that of the zebra; the tail looks like a mule's, but has longer hair. The ears are small with rounded points like the zebra's. The muzzle is well formed, rounded and quite large; the chest is long and high, which makes the animal hold its head high and consequently gives it a good carriage. The eyes are large and full of feeling; the nostrils large; the lips small and much like those of Arab horses (the mare, the mother of this zebroid, was one quarter Arab); the head is small; the legs muscular, but delicate, showing that he will be very agile; the hoofs small, black and very hard. He is very lively, but very gentle, and loves to be caressed. He eats very well, not only in the stall, but in pasture. These facts, we are told, are from a communication made by the breeder to the national Acclimation Society.

HENRY GRADY said of the decision, Liquor: "It is the moral enemy of peace and order, the despoiler of men and the terror of women, the cloud that shadows the faces of children, the demon that has dug more graves and sent more souls unbaptized to judgment than all the pestilences that have scourged life since God sent the plagues to Egypt, and all the wars since Joshua stood beyond Jericho."

"I should like to know your tradition, sir," said the old man to the youth who had been calling up his daughter with great regularity for a long time.

"Same here," replied the young man promptly. "I'd like to know yours."—Chicago Post.

BIOGRAPHIC NOTES.

By W. T. P.

AMONG the early permanent settlers of Knapp's Creek, and a citizen of some prominence in county affairs, was Michael Daugherty. He was a native of Ireland and came from Donegal, and settled here about 1770. The property he owned is now in possession of the Cleek brothers, William L. Harper, and the Ruckman sisters Margaret and Nancy. Mrs Daugherty was Margaret McClintic, whose parents lived near Staunton, Virginia.

When these persons settled here the Indians were troublesome, and the family frequently went to fort first on Jacksons River at the Warwick place, and afterwards in the neighborhood where Washington Moore now lives, in the old orchard

Mr and Mrs Daugherty were the parents of seven children, four daughters and three sons.

Their daughter Martha became Mrs John Frame and lived in Nicholas County.

Isabella Daugherty was married to William Nicholas, and lived on Douthard's Creek, now owned by Henry Sharp. The late Thomas Nicholas, on the Indian Draft, was one of her sons.

Elizabeth Daugherty became Mrs Adam Sharatt, and early in the century located on the Greenbrier three miles above Marlinton, where he built a mill traces of which yet remain. The dam remained long after the mill went out of use and went to ruins. It was finally destroyed, as the backwater became injurious. A more substantial structure of the kind perhaps was never constructed any where in this region. Thence the Sharatts went to Jacksons River, near the headwaters.

Margaret Daugherty became Mrs William Ruckman, and first lived in Highland, and afterwards came to Knapps Creek to the old homestead. In reference to her family we have the following particulars.

Isabella Ruckman died at the age of fourteen years. Mary Ann Ruckman, a very sprightly, interesting person, was an invalid from her early youth, and died but a few years since. Two other daughters, Margaret and Nancy Ruckman, now live on the homestead.

Michael Daugherty Ruckman married Jane Minter, of Cumberland County, Virginia, and settled near Mingo, in Randolph County, W. Virginia.

Thomas Ruckman married Mary Minter and settled in Cumberland County. Mrs Mattie Riggleman is his only surviving child.

Samuel Ruckman married Elizabeth Hall near the Big Spring of Elk and settled in Randolph County. Mrs Lula Sweeker and her sister Ardelly Ruckman are his children.

Jesse Ruckman died at the age of 13 years.

In reference to the sons of Michael Daugherty, the pioneer, whose names were John, Samuel, and William, we have this information: John Daugherty went to Kansas soon after its admission into the Union, married Margaret Clark, and settled in that State Samuel Daugherty died in early youth at the old home on Mill Run. William Daugherty married a Miss Collins, and after living a few years on Knapp's Creek, went to Wythe County, Virginia.

Wellington G. Ruckman, who now lives near Sunset, is a great-grandson of Michael Daugherty.

It is believed that Michael Daugherty built the first tub-mill propelled by water power anywhere in this whole region. The site was on Mill Run, near Sunset, and some traces of it yet remain. This mill seems to have been pretensioned by all sections of upper Pocahontas and had the reputation of being one of the best of its kind.

It may be news to many of our intelligent readers that there was a "real, old Irish gentleman" among those who endured the toils, privations, and perils that were peculiar to the early occupancy of our now secluded and peaceful land of the sky. Yet such appears to be the fact, as attested by authentic tradition. He grew to manhood having the privileges and advantages enjoyed by the sons of the Irish landed gentry, or, as it is termed nowadays, the Irish aristocracy. As far as possible he wished to have aristocratic usages in his home on the frontier. He was one of the few settlers that attended sales in Staunton or Culpepper Court-House where the services of passengers were put up at auction in order to secure the charges for transportation from foreign ports. If a passenger could pay all charges himself and show a receipt for the same it became his patent of nobility in the new world; but if he could not, it seems he could not make good his claim to be "one of the quality," some of us older people used to hear so much talked about. In those old times when Michael Daugherty was living if a person could pay his own way across the ocean and hire or purchase the services of such as were less fortunate then he was one of "the quality." As he was able to do both, then Michael Daugherty was one of the first of the "new-fledged nobility" that occupied the Knapp's Creek region.

With the notions peculiar to the Irish gentry, their young people felt it was essential to their comfort to have servants to come and go at their bidding. Such a domestic arrangement was a pleasant shade in summer and a good, warm rousing fire when it should be as "cold as Christmas." The tradition is that Michael Daugherty was one of the first to enjoy the shade alluded to and the holiday fires.

It is believed by his descendants that his father had designed his son Michael for the Catholic priesthood, and with a view to this had given him special educational advantages. Before receiving holy orders, the father died. It appears that in arranging the affairs pertaining to the settlement of the estate in some way a serious disagreement arose between Michael and his step-mother, and he thereupon received a portion of the goods allotted him and he came to America, and seems to have been lost sight of by the Donegal Daughertys. In this way valuable documentary evidence was impossible to make up tracing the descent of his posterity. It is believed with good reason that could Michael Daugherty's descent have been shown to the satisfaction of the Irish Court of Claims that his West Virginia heirs would have come in for a handsome share of the ancestral legacies.

OLD "HOWD'YE" MARTIN.

Exit of the Only Congressman Who Ever Blew Out the Gas and Who Never Surrendered.

William H. Martin, of Texas, the only Congressman, so far as the records extend, who ever blew out the gas, is dead. He died at Hillsboro on Sunday of pneumonia. He was 70 years old. With him went one of the unique figures in public life of the decade. He had outlived his time. There is no doubt that he did blow out the gas in Willard's Hotel, Washington, D. C., on the night of January 25, 1887, that the people in the hotel broke in his door, and that he was dragged into the hall unconscious. He was sick for about two days, but as soon as he was well enough to appear on the streets he hunted the newspaper man who had been most instrumental in spreading the tidings of his catastrophe and boxed his ears until they sang. If the man had made the slightest resistance, Martin would have killed him where he stood.

In person he was six feet high and broad of shoulder, but very gaunt. His hair and beard were untrimmed. His arms swung loosely and he walked with the long stride of a man who in his early life had done much of his traveling on foot. His oaths were so plentiful they ceased to be profanity. The words rolled from his mouth as unconsciously as his breath. I heard him tell once of the failure of a morning's stroll after squirrels. "I riz," he said, "one—fine day an' snatched hold of my—old rifle. That—son of mine had been a wearin of my kittredge belt. I went into the—woods an' was walkin' down the—road when I seen a—squir'l settin' on a—tree. I pulled the—trigger and the—gun weren't loaded. The—squir'l set thar an' liked to laughed his—head off. I loaded up an' she wouldn't work. I got a—45 calibre kittredge into the—44-calibre gun an' I never killed a—squir'l."

On the morning of the day when "Buck" Kilgore—also of Texas and also dead—kicked his way to freedom by smashing one of the House doors, there had been a wordy passage between Johnson of Indiana, Republican, and Crain of Texas, Democrat. The two approached each other excitedly and a collision seemed imminent. At that juncture the eyes of the quiescent members were transferred from the principal figures in the debate to the center aisle. Crain and Johnson were not liable to hurt each other with anything more deadly than their hands, but in the center aisle a dozen Democrats were slowly bearing back "Howd'ye" Martin to the cloakroom. His jaws were set, his face was pale with the pallor of death, and his eyes blazed. Tightly gripped in his right hand was a 6-inch clasp-knife with the blade opened. This was a kife he carried, not for purpose of offence, but to trim his nails with every month. He spoke only once, and then in response to a whispered word of soothing from the venerable David B. Culberson: "D—— it, let's have a settlement!" He was shouldered out, however, and taken from the Capitol. It is rather a singular bit of Washington journalism that an account of this incident did not appear in any print.

"Old Howd'ye"—so called because that was his invariable salutation to man and woman, boy and girl, white and black—took out a Texas regiment in 1861. They went direct to Virginia and faced the Federal lines. The statement seems incredible, but it is strictly true that in 1863 the personnel of this regiment was entirely changed. Every man of the original recruitage was dead or incapacitated by wounds. "Howd'ye" went back to Texas and got another. Not many of them were left in 1865 when Grant's mighty and victorious host was bearing down upon the starving and disheartened legions of Lee. An old Southerner has told me of meeting the Texan on the morning of "the surrender," as it is familiarly called in the South. He was five miles from Lee's headquarters and his dirty regulars were bivouacked by the side of a country road. Martin asked him for the news. He was told that General Lee had surrendered. Martin drew a pistol from his holster. "If you say that again," he declared, "I'll blow your head off." When he was assured that it was true, he turned to his men and said: "Boys, I'm goin' back to Texas, where a man can live as he blacks can't run as. Who's goin' with me?" A few of them responded. The others were too weary and heartsick to move. He marched his little band due south, turning his back upon the chilly Virginian fields. He got through the scattered Federal lines somehow and made his way home. It was two days, but as soon as he was his heart to the day of his death well enough to appear on the streets he hunted the newspaper man who had been most instrumental in spreading the tidings of his catastrophe and boxed his ears until they sang. If the man had made the slightest resistance, Martin would have killed him where he stood.

COMPLIMENTARY NOTICE.

William B. Blake, more familiarly known as "Old Ragged-Edged Bill," is the owner of the Valley Messenger and News. The paper has no editor, but depends on clippings from other papers "until it makes them look like scives," to quote a recent confession. Last week he chose to make us the subject of an odious comparison. He gravely announced the well known fact that the editor of the Pocahontas Times is not as accomplished a writer as his father. We maintain that we have never pretended to equal many men as writers. But the evil that men do lives after them. "Old Ragged-edge Bill" has offended us, and we propose to tell of his qualities as a writer.

In 1874, when this old pawkey-wit was in the heyday of youthful wit and beauty, he wrote a touching serial story called "Stammering Bill," for the Musical Million, then published at Singer's Glen. We have it before us and are gloating over it. We know that any time we can publish it, and if we do the people of Roneeverte will rise in their wrath and drive him clean out of the country.

His scene is laid in the "loviest valley in all christendom. Only one thing to mar the quietude and and peacefulness of nature. A row of great mills, whose ceaseless jar, and clang, and clatter, made it quite disagreeable living near them." Such is the elegant construction of his sentences! Stammering Bill is a mill hand. He stammers. It would be queer if he did not. The owner of the mill has a son. To-day he would have been called a plutocrat. It took a stick to describe him when Blake wrote about him. This plutocratic youth used to lam Stammering Bill around whenever he felt like it. Stammering Bill supported an aged Brahmin who lived in the woods. One day the Brahmin died. Bill went to sleep in the mill. He had a chance to push the young plutocrat into the water but did not do it. One night he saw the dam burst. The whole town lay below the dam. Stammering Bill had a notion for a while not to do a hate. But a song had been sung in the mill that day and a fragment which had lodged on the rafters overhead fell on his ear and softened him. He got a move on himself and rang every bell in the place, and every body got back to the hills, and though every house was swept away not a life was lost except Stammering Bill, who was finally overtaken by the flood.

Blake's sons may draw better pictures than he, but they can never, no never write an account of a bursting dam to come up with their romantic father.

BRYAN'S PLATFORM.

Hon William J. Bryan, tho perhaps self-elected, seems to be general director of the Democratic party, has prepared the following platform as a declaration of our principles for the campaign of 1898, and it seems to be good, sound doctrine, and will serve to express our sentiments better, perhaps, than the famous Chicago platform:

First—We are unalterably opposed to gold monometalism.

Second—We demand the immediate restoration of Bimetalism at the present ratio by the independent action of this country.

Third—We oppose the retirement of the greenbacks.

Fourth—We oppose the issue of paper money by national banks.

Fifth—We oppose the issue of interest bearing bonds in time of peace.

Sixth—We favor the income tax as a means of raising a part of the revenue necessary to administer the Federal Government.

Seventh—We favor the abolition of trusts.

Eighth—We are opposed to government by injunction.

Ninth—We are in favor of arbitration as a means of settling disputes between labor and capital.

THE available men for military service in the United States number 10,445,986. The number of men organized into companies 114,366.

A PROBLEM.

We failed to state a problem correctly last week. It is as follows. A boy had sixty apples in his basket, which he sold at the rate of five for two cents. The basket being too heavy for him, he divided the apples into lots of thirty each. One lot he sold at the rate of 3 for 1 cent; the other lot, of thirty, at the rate of 2 for 1 cent. Did he gain or lose by the transaction and why?

Under the first sale he would sell 60 apples at 5 for 2 cents giving him 24 cents for the sixty.

When he divided them into two lots, 30 at 3 for 1 cent equals 10 cents; 30 at 2 for 1 cent equals 15 cents: 10 plus 15 equals 25 cents the amount of the sale of the 60 apples when divided. What makes the difference?

IF you take the trouble to investigate, you will find, in a country community, that the young men who subscribe for local and city papers are the ones who are foremost in business. And there are others.

WEYLER says the destruction of the Maine was due to the "indolence of the crew." This is regarded as an insult to our navy. If he had said that the whole treacherous affair was due to the indolence of the administration he would have been nearer right.

THE natural interest and indignation aroused in this country over the condition of the Cuban patriots has stirred the natures of the loyal Spaniard to its greatest depths. The blowing up of the Maine was a natural sequence to the feeling of hate which prevails among the Spanish people.

THE day is past when a country paper can charge more than one dollar as a subscription rate. Anything over one dollar has come to be regarded by the public as velvet for the publisher; and when we consider that a rate for advertising must necessarily and primarily be founded on a circulation basis, we see the folly of a deterring subscription price.

THE Monroe Watchman says that a young lady aged 16 years died in that county recently whose parents were fatalists. The daughter was not necessarily sick of an incurable disease, but the parents deciding by some occult means that their daughter was to die, refused to give the medicine prescribed and furnished by the attending physician, tho the patient begged them to do so. If there is proof sufficient, the grand jury of Monroe County should indict these people as a warning against the practice of fatalism that may sometimes prove fatal.

A Winter Thundder Storm.

THE thunder storm last Sunday was as pronounced as those of summer. All the forenoon the air seemed saturated with moisture. About two o'clock the rumbling of distant thunder was heard. Some of the reports resembled the sound of a horn. The thunder became louder and the flashes of lightning could be seen. The redness of the flashes was peculiar. One flash observed was that rare phenomenon, known as "globe lightning." In the west a globe of light, about the size of the sun, seemed to drop from the clouds, and remained stationary for a perceptible length of time and burst into thousands of flashes, accompanied by a tremendous clap of thunder. It was the color of red-hot iron. The rain began then, and in a few minutes the most severe hailstorm which has visited this county for years was in progress. The hailstones were about as large as peas, and were falling so thick that objects a few yards distant were totally obscured. All the while the thunder was rolling and crashing. The storm continued for about a quarter of an hour.

G. Washington Poage.

DIED—At his home at Walker, Vernon County, Missouri, January 15, 1898, G. Washington Poage, aged about 83 years.

He was a son of the late George W. Poage, of the Levels. About 25 years ago he moved to Missouri from Beaver Creek, near Hunterville. His wife was Miss Cornelia Blanchard, of Monroe County.

He was seized by his final illness in August, and was unable to leave or feed himself ever since. Since requiring constant attention on the part of his devoted family. A few days before his sickness he said to a neighbor that he was going home. Ever since the death of my mother he has seemed to be always waiting for the call to come up higher." Thus his daughter writes in her letter to her cousin, Miss Mary Beirne, of Hunterville.

He has lived a consistent Christian life for many years, and there is consolation to mourners in the knowledge that such lives will be well."

DILLEY'S MILL.

Jasper Mace, of Webster County, is visiting his uncle W. B. Dilley.

The farmers in this part are plowing making ready for early crops.

Isaac Gregg has rented and moved to Prime Dilley's property.

Gilmore Sharp is preparing for a saw set on his farm.

The show at Mt Zion schoolhouse, proved to be a tramp who sang a few comic songs.

Miss Nola Shrader was home on a visit, accompanied by Annie Lee Ervine.

Mr James Hively discontinued school part of last week owing to a severe cold.

Miss Florence Hively was home from school last week on a visit, and returned with her best fellow to escort her.

The football fever seems to be reviving. At Frost and Dilley's Mill they still keep it up. George Sharp broke a blood vessel while playing at Frost Saturday.

Mrs Manda Sharp is talking of going to Texas where her sons Hanson and Frank are.

We are having most beautiful winter weather now. So very warm for February. Stock is showing up well and feed seems to be very plentiful in this part.

Charles McKinley Shrader died on the 11th instant, (son of William Shrader), 10 months old. He died of pneumonia, and was sick two days.

Yours truly, "JENKINS."

MILL POINT.

Our strong men are returning from the lumber camps.

What of the compulsory school law? Is it any good?

P. G. Shafer, of Virginia, is in our vicinity operating a gramophone.

Valentines have been floating around here a great deal of late.

Sherman Pyles, the supposed intended, says he is going to Klondike.

There will be a spelling contest at Riverside, Friday night, February 25. Come, all ye champions, for ye have champions to contend with!

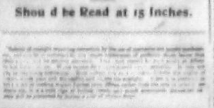
We hear that our County Superintendent highly commended the Riverside school and its discipline as being the best in the District.

The school on Stamping Creek closed last Saturday. Although some persons were disappointed the last day, the school was considered a success. The scarlet fever in the vicinity prevented any entertainment.

One of the 'pets' in a certain school not long since got whipped. His father concluded to have his revenge upon the teacher by making a complaint of cruelty to the trustees. The "post mortum" examination of the body of the victim revealed three little red stripes two inches long. The jury rendered a verdict of not guilty, and the trustees permitted the teacher to continue the school as before, and left him a switch in the room, also. They said they had as well stop the school as to forbid the use of the rod.

MUM.

SOMETHING appeared in the Alderson Man about the Pocahontas Times recently. It was to blurred and indistinct to be read. That populistic luminary, "looks like it had been set and made up in a blacksmith shop and printed on a threshing machine."



Notice.

All persons are hereby notified that taxes due me as late sheriff of Pocahontas County and as receiver of J. C. Arbogast, must be paid at once. Do not neglect this notice to get ready to pay.

J. M. CUNNINGHAM, M. D.

DAVID LILLY, of Summers county, aged 15, killed his cousin Arthur Lilly, aged 16. The fight was on account of jealousy of a young girl. The two boys were on their way home from a spelling match the elder walking with the girl. The boys fought three times, being separated. Twice the young homicide was the aggressor. The last time he entered the fight with a rock in a cloth and with it he crushed the other boy's head, killing him instantly.

Local Events.

Lightning struck and demolished a poplar tree on Jerico Sunday.

Mr P. D. Yeager, of Travelers Repose, leaves this week for a city hospital where, it is supposed, that his arm will be amputated.

Died: At her home in Edwarter, Randolph County, Miss Mattie Sue, daughter of the late Adam Sloe.

Died: At her home near Travelers Repose, Mrs James S. Rayner in the 23d year of her age. She was a Miss Cutlip, of Nicholas County. Obituary next week.

Andrew McAlpin caught two eagles in steel traps, and kept them alive. The largest measured seven feet and one inch. Mrs J. C. Gay also caught two large eagles, the bait being the carcass of a sheep. The immense talons of one of these birds were added to this office collection of curiosities.

As required by the book of Church Order, the session of Marlin's Bottom Church has been instructed to call a congregational meeting to act upon the resignation of the pastor. This meeting is called for the first Sabbath of March, immediately after public worship, and a full attendance of the membership is desired.

Nearing The End.—Every tick of the clock is bringing the last month of winter to end, and I still have some nice, strictly all wool melton over coats with velvet collars, the kind you used to pay $10 for, only $4.95. Those who have known me the longest are my best customers, as I back up the statements I make with the goods themselves. Yours for comparison,

Paul Golden.

Ellis Baxter shot a large wild cat last Thursday. He had gone out to feed and had his Winchester rifle with him. Some hounds were running near him in short circles. He saw the wild cat several times, and finally got a shot at it and broke its back; he claims two hundred yards. While it was crawling towards some rocks he gave it another shot behind the shoulder. This is the third wild cat which has been killed near the town in it's day.

An impending slander suit was adjusted last Friday by a conference of parties at the court house. George Allen and L. D. Sharp had a difference of one dollar in a settlement, and Sharp wrote in his haste to Allen and accused him of changing the receipt. This being damaging to the character of Allen he threatened suit and secured L. M. McClintic as attorney. Sharp employed H. S. Rucker, and the matter was compromised by Sharp paying Allen $75. This is a very happy ending of the matter for a slander suit is the most disagreeable task ever undertaken by our courts.

Died: Edgar Truss, a young colored man living in the Brush, aged 23 years. This is the third death in this family of fever. There have been seven cases. The first case was contracted at Marlinton last year when the fever was so prevalent here. The house and wood pile at the Truss home is above the spring and the refuse of the house drains into the spring. The family had gone several months without a case of fever, and, in spite of the doctor's warning about the water, they resumed the use of it. Their facilities for nursing are poor; a family of eight or ten persons being confined in one room for cooking, eating and sleeping.

Sunday evening a number of people had gathered for preaching at the upper church on Seneca. Bill Hefner arrived drunk and disorderly. He tried to pick a fuss with Howard Kellison who went home. Bill then let off some steam by firing his revolver several times. Later he was still hunting trouble and he and Mart Barnes had a fight in which Bill's head was cut open. He gets on a spree in Marlinton occasionally. When under the influence of liquor he lets off all manner of heels, and makes a noise that can be heard a mile. Owing to the absence of the minister there was no preaching, but the gallery of the church had their hands full managing the disturbance.

Last Friday word had been received here of the Maine disaster, as the manner which great events reach us, ahead of the mail and telegraph. Long before the dispatches were received in the city of Washington the fact of the explosion was known. It was discovered that the mail carrier had been short of horses and had not transported the newspapers further than Valley Springs. At least, that was the tale brought by the hunt and carried who brings the mail to Knapp Academy. The appearance of a newspaper caused quite a rush, and it was soon scanned by different citizens. After a few minutes four boxes, the only ones now received on Cass, could not be found. The Department is sure to be Department.

FATAL ACCIDENT.

Harvey Maupin Killed Suddenly by Sliding Logs.

The greatest sensation this village has ever experienced was the killing of Harvey Maupin while at work in the woods about a mile from town, last Tuesday evening about 3 o'clock. He was working with Thomas Courtney and sons Amos and Wilson on the north side of Buckley mountain opposite the Linden Bottom. The men were engaged in getting out railcuts. The ground was very steep and frozen hard. The logs had been cut and frozen hard. The logs had been cut and were being slid down the hill. The deceased was working without calks in his shoes. A small chestnut lay across and two large red oaks end on had caught on it. He went to the lower end and was cautioned by Thomas Courtney who told him that there was danger in loosening up the logs as they lay. He remarked that he thought he thought he he was able to take care of himself.

When the logs started he was thrown down by his gaithook directly in front of one of the large logs. He was borne back in a waiting position for fifty yards down the mountain. At the bottom the logs went clear and he was found lying apart from them. He was conscious and remained so until he passed away. Dr Price reached him in a few minutes after he was hurt. His injuries consisted of a badly mashed left leg, a broken arm, a bruise in the side, and and other bruises and hurts on different portions of his body.

The deceased resided at the old Price place. He was 26 years old, and leaves a wife and one child. He was a man of most exemplary character and a sincere and consistent Christian. He was a member of the M. E. Church, South and was active in the affairs of the church. He was President of the Epworth League at this place and led the last meeting.

He seemed to have a premonition of his death, as he remarked to one of the men who were working with him as they passed the graveyard a few hours before his death that he felt like he might be "buried there tomorrow."

In connexion with this Mrs Maupin, a few nights before, had a dream that was out of the ordinary. She saw her husband with Wilson Courtney and heard him say, "Take care of Flora and the baby." There was such an indefinable feeling of impending separation in it all that she awoke and the terror of the dream impressed her so that she was afraid to mention it to her husband but thought of it constantly until the body of her husband was carried.

The interment will be at Green Bank Thursday of this week.

Dazzling Display.

The public was treated to an exhibition of galling bumptiousness, Friday night. After a tedious session of two hours and a half, the judges rendered a decision, purely on the merits of the debate, for the negative. The affirmative appealed to the house, and was promptly sat down upon by a long suffering "public." The question was "That the United States government should recognize the belligerency of the Cubans." Norman Price and S. B. Scott, Jr., affirmed, and N. C. McNeil and J. A. McLaughlin denied. Judges, H. A. Yeager, J. Woods Price and Dr Cunningham. Dr J. W. Price chairman pro tempore.

The recitation by Miss Daisy Yeager and declamation by Mr E. H. Smith were given in fine style and showed much careful preparation.

Literature is the sole and only aim of this body. Shakespeare is to be revived at the next meeting.

Shooting Match.

The shooting match at Bill McClure's last Saturday was well attended by the dead game sports. The prizes were some of money and in all $10.30 was jeopardized in the six matches of sets. The distance was sixty yards. The contestants from the West side of the river won $7.55 and those from the East side $4.75. The prizes were for first, second, and third.

First Set—Ed Malcomb, 25c; R. S. Malcomb, 50c; H. F. Johnson, 75c.

Second Set—C. S. Johnson, 1.00; Ed Malcomb, 75c; C. S. Johnson, 25c.

Third Set—Woods Valley, $1.00; H. F. Johnson, 75c; C. S. Johnson, 50c.

Fourth Set—Robert Dilley, $1.00; H. F. Johnson, 75c; Josiah Dilley, 50c.

Fifth Set—S. D. Dilley, $1.00; Jasper Dilley, 75c; Josiah Dilley, 50c.

Pocket Match—C. S. Johnson, 50c.

Grant Johnson, who furnished us this report, had very bad luck. He shot a hundred rounds that day and spent $1.50 on the prizes and failed to win.

The next match will be at Marlinton on Saturday, March 5, 1898. Everybody is invited. The Post Boston Friday offers a purse for competition to the marksmen making the best shot at the population the town during the day; in case of a tie to be shot off as determined by judges.

Democracy, which means so much to the people of this county, is held by Hon. Henry Bruce Lovenstein to be a commodity hard for the people to get enough of.

DUNMORE.

Pete Oliver thinks he weighs about 240—Its a girl!

Morris of Buckhannon, the machine agent is out.

S. P. Sheets is going to bring in a large new sawmill to Green Bank.

B. M. Yeager went after the railroad again.

Captain McNeel's team brought up a load of flour for Payne Bros.

Stonewall and his girl took in the big dance at Marlinton, 14th.

Loop Bill Smith lost a fine horse last week.

Sid opened his sugar trees, and lo and behold how they did run!

Otis Warwick, of Midway Inn, was in town Monday night.

The price of land and town property went down with the railroad.

D. B. McElwee and Charles Palmer were up prospecting.

Mr Liss Nottingham, of Montana, is home on a visit.

The boys of town gave an oyster supper which was greatly enjoyed.

J. C. Gay and Q. W. Poage, cattle men, were over last week looking at their cattle.

S. R. Kerr is out to Staunton for a load of goods and to see the cars.

The auction sale at Green Bank the 5th was largely attended and goods sold rapidly.

Price Moore was up a few days ago locating a railroad tunnel or a bee course.

George Hoover is going to move to Randolph County, and will probably run for Prosecuting Attorney over there.

Most of the boys are home from the lumber camps. Too much prosperity and not enough work.

Several sales will take place in the near future.

Professor William Bussard, of Frost, got a shorthand letter which was a little too canonicle for Billy.

The debates still go on. It is strange how smart men will differ in their opinions.

Fine weather, and the railroad went went went to the devil—just as we expected.

Emmet Nottingham, of Mill Point, is up to see his father and mother, who are sick at this time.

On the sick-list: Mrs C. B. Swecker, Mrs L. E. Campbell, Mrs R. L. Nottingham, William Carpenter, J. B. McCutcheon.

Died: At his home on Back Alleghany, Samuel Gragg, aged about 25 years.—On the 5th instant an infant child of Mr John A. Sheets.—On the 11th instant, a child 10 months old of Mr William Shrader, of near Frost.

The Sweet Maree Show went where the woodbine twineth and the whangadoodle mourneth, and the little birds sing their doola doo and jump from branch to branch. When the perfotmers began to play the boys and girls all went away. The girls were a little struck with the show men till they put on their false faces.

Spoke Shave.

February 18, 1898.

Cold, stormy, frosty weather.

A. J. Dilley is in town to day.

Harry Nottingham is critically ill at this time.

P. D. Yeager is going to Baltimore this week to have his fractured arm treated.

Mrs C. B. Swecker and Mrs L. E. Campbell are still under the weather.

George Bambrick and W. B. Hanna have ordered some good home-made furniture.

J. B. McCutcheon fell in the fire place a few days ago and got badly burned.

Will Jackson is off to Greenbrier county this week.

Cutlip Geiger has bought Adam Geiger's mill and store house, and will run both in the future.

Wash Oliver is going to build a coop. Look out, he will have a hen in it before long.

Died: At her home, near Travelers Repose, Mrs Jamee Burner, a young woman highly respected. —Also Mrs Carr near the Sinks, this county. Also, an infant child of Danie' Smith near Dunmore.

We hope that the road from Dunmore to Meadow Dale. The Pocahontas side will be looked after by our county court next week. We must have county roads before we have a rail road.

Lieutenant John Slaughammer.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Mrs E. I. Holt, of Academy, continues most seriously ill.

Cecil Marshall, of Mingo, was in town Monday.

Ralph, son of C. A. Yeager, has been sick.

Frank Beirne has returned as post office clerk.

Mrs Lipscomb, of Clover Lick, is suffering from spinal trouble.

Misses Lou and Rachel Clark were visiting in Marlinton last week.

Married: At Shenadoa, Virginia, Mr Oliver Price, of Rosecrans, and Miss Gertrude Fulton.

A. D. Williams and Talbert Sharp passed Marlinton last week on their way to the Cumberland Mountains.

HUNTERSVILLE.

Mrs Wm. Cole, who has been sick for some time, is no better.

Mrs J. W. Loury, who has been very ill for the past three weeks, is convalescent.

The old man Titus Carter (col.) is very sick at this time. We are informed that he has pneumonia.

Attorney H. M. Lockridge, who has been on the sick list for some time, is now able to be out again.

W. E. Lyons, the fur buyer, was at the Huntersville Hotel, last Friday and Saturday, buying fur for the Baltimore markets.

Captain Edgar, of the Levels, was at the Wagner Hotel, last Saturday night, on his way to the Hot Springs.

Messrs Henry W. and John H. McNeel, of Academy, were in our town, one night last week, with a lot of fine cattle which they bought of M. O'Ferrel, of Mountain Grove.

Thunder and lightning, sunshine and clouds, rain and snow, and mud. Last Sunday, about three o'clock, a very severe hail storm visited our vicinity, followed by heavy rain. Our roads are very muddy and almost impassable.

Perry Rydell, a first class silver smith, spent several days last week repairing clocks and watches. He does good work and at a very reasonable price. He left last Saturday for Dunmore; from there he will go to Hightown, Virginia, and return to Huntersville the last of March.

James F. Gabert, who lives on George W. Ginger's farm on Buckley Mountain, combs his hair three times sday and parts it in the middle, and says he don't give a fig if the rail road never comes—It's a girl!

DRISCOL.

There has been no preaching here since last fall.

J. A. Reed made a business trip to Dunmore last week.

Cam and Craig still make very frequent trips to Hustersville.

Mrs L. W. Herold has closed a very successful school at Driscol We need a larger school house.

We understand that W. S. Parmer is going to move to Glade Hill soon.

The fever patients of this vicinity are all well, except Harry Rimel, who is able to sit up a little.

The railroad talk has subsided. We suppose the people will go to work to make a living some other way.

Mrs Van Buren and son, of Anthony's Creek, were visiting Mrs J. W. Loury last week. Mrs Loury's health is improving slowly.

Miss Lillie Friel, accompanied by Miss Maud Yeager, of Marlinton, spent Saturday and Sunday at home.

The Douthard's Creek school, taught by Miss Lucy Sharp, closed last Thursday.

It is a very common sight to see the venerable M. F. Herold, of Frost, on his way up Douthard's Creek, who, notwithstanding his great age, is as spry as a widower of sixty-five.

New York News Letter.

LUETGERT, the Chicago sausage maker, who was accused of boiling his wife in one of his huge sausage vats, has been convicted and sentenced to life imprisonment. This man has had two trials. The first resulted in a disagreement. His lawyer will apply to the Supreme Court for a new trial. This trial has been the sensation of the day.

The other day in Brooklyn a woman killed her step-daughter, and then hacked her husband with an ax. The cause was insane jealousy of her husband's daughter, who was 17. The man is slowly recovering.

The Spanish Minister De Lome has been recalled. This man wrote a letter insulting the President. As in the case of the British Minister, Lord Sackville, during Cleveland's administration, prompt action was taken by our government. De Lome's letter was written to a friend, Senor Canalejas, but it never reached him. The general belief is that Cuban spies in some way intercepted it. At any rate, the Cuban Junta in this city, have the original. Spanish spies are about trying to bribe Cuban officials, so as to obtain the letter, offering $5,000 to $20,000 for its delivery. But the letter is more precious than gold to the Cubans.

Another mutilated body of a man was found in the East River. It was headless and limbless. The only marks to identify it is a mole on the groin and another on the back. The breast bone and nearly every rib was broken, some being driven into the lungs. The supposition is that the man fought hard for his life. A bullet wound was also found in the left leg. The police claim there was a woman in the case. The police now-a-days saddle every thing on a woman. Their theories make one tired. As usual, crowds are visiting the Morgue to look upon this ghastly object.

Two thousand barrels of good 'red eye' (whiskey) exploded, killing five men and injuring many others, at Pittsburg. The explosion occurred in the bonded warehouse. A whole block got ablaze. Loss $500,000.

The counsel for Mrs Nack will apply to the Governor for a pardon. You will remember this woman was recently sentenced to fifteen years' imprisonment for complicity with Thorn for the killing of Guldensappe.

A couple of detectives, of Chicago, were sent to arrest a man named Clark. It seems that Clark is the owner of a vicious and well trained circus donkey. The detectives spied their man in a field, feeding the long-ear animal. One of the detectives started over the field to serve his warrant, but the donkey gave chase and the detective put for all he was worth to the barb-ed wire fence and got over just in time. It is said this donkey has killed ten keepers. Mr Clark is still guarded over by his faithful donkey.

President Barrios, of Gautemala, has been assassinated, and his place has been taken by the vice president, Cabrera. This man was a dashing fighter and was much loved. The Presidents of these Republics have anything but a smooth time. When things seem to be going on serenely, along comes a smoking assassin and the deed is done. Up bobs another man to take the vacant chair and the uncertainty of living a natural life.

Another one of these dense fogs enveloped this city Wednesday morning. Two elevated trains crashed together; a ferry boat got lost on the East River for a couple of hours and at last crashed into a dock, injuring several; two boats, belonging to the Erie R. R. came together in the North River, causing horts to a number of people; two boats of the Pennsylvania R. R., on North River also, did the same trick and the rails and guards were smashed; the Long Island ferry boat, in making her slip, bumped into the bulkhead with great force and one man received several scalp wounds and others were shaken up. These fogs cause a lot of trouble in more ways than one.

This Saturday—February 12—is a legal holiday. Everything is closed up in honor of Lincoln's birth day. On the 14th St Valentine has his inning, and tokens of love in the shape of valentines will be exchanged. On the 22nd of February, Washington's birth day will be honored.

When McKinley was elected, Prosperity was promised. There is none in sight up here. Have you seen any down your way?

GEORGE M. SANGSTER.

A Damper to Genius.

A north Georgia farmer, who was possessed of some means, entered the office of his country paper and asked for the editor. He was accompanied by his son—a youth of seventeen years—and as soon as the editor, who was in his secret sanctum, was informed that his visitors were not bill collectors, he came forward and shook hands.

"I came to git some information" explained the farmer.

"Certainly," said the editor, "and you came to the right place. Be seated."

The farmer sat on an end of the table, while his son sat on the floor.

"This boy o' mine wants to go into the literary business, and I thought you'd know ef thar wuz any money in it not. It's a good business —ain't it?"

"Why—yes," said the editor after some little hesitation. "I have been in it for fifteen years, and you see where I've got to."

The farmer eyed him from head to foot, glanced around the poorly furnished office, surveyed the editor once more, then, turning to his son, who was still on the floor, said:

"Git up, John, an' go home an' go back to plowin'!" —Atlanta Constitution.

Is Kissing a Crime? It appears to be so in New Jersey. In a small village of that moral State a young woman was recently fined ten dollars for allowing herself to be kissed. The heinous offense was committed in the hallway of an apartment-house at the hour of 10 o'clock at night, and, while there were no eye-witness to the disgraceful scene, two maiden ladies residing on the floor above testified that the noise of the contact was distinctly audible to them and produced a perceptible vibration throughout the whole building. Whereupon the village recorder, a man learned in the law, mulcted the young woman in the above mentioned sum. Why the gay Lothario in the case was not called upon to contribute to the piper's income, does not appear. However, it is to be presumed that the recorder knew the respective rights and liabilities of the kisser and the kissee, and decided according to the law and justice of the case.—Law Notes.

How Talmage Was Entrapped.

Even the saintly divines are not proof against the summer resort divinity clad in a bathing suit, cut decolette at both ends. Dr Talmage, just married for the third time, met his last destiny at a seaside resort, last summer. He is 66 and she is 40, just the age that females show up best in bathing suits.—Telluride Journal.

An enthusiastic young revivalist of the M. E. persuasion was recently conducting a series of meeting in one of the lovely villages in which the Mill Creek vally abounds and he wanted his hearers to "get a move on 'em." Said he, "Let all Christians arise to their feet." A few got up. "Let all who want the prayers of the church raise their hands!" No response. "Let all who want to be saved hold up their hands!" Not a fingers went up into the air. The young brother got "hot under the collar" and blurted out: "Let all who don't want to be saved get up and leave the house!" —and some fifteen or twenty proceeded to march out.—Jackson Herald.

A 70 YEAR old ex-Union veteran was awarded a pension of $300 and forthwith proceeded to invest in a 22-year old spouse. This calls to mind the observation of our old time distinguished friend Sol Sass, who remarked that there were four things that he did not understand —The way of an eagle in the air, the way of a ship in the midst of the sea, the way of a serpent on a rock and the way of a man with a maid." Yes, verily.—Nashville Banner.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that contain Mercury.

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions of reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. The frames are made in one piece of steel angle bar, and formed to withstand all strain without buckling or warping. The teeth in this harrow are so spaced that they will not trail each other. Pulverizing the ground thoroughly. The steel pipe tooth bars are mounted in maleable boxes secured to the frame, and will not bend or break. The peculiar shape of the teeth curling twothirds about the bar gives the greatest amount of spring possible without straining the bolts, and because of their shape and fastening are stronger than used on any other harrow. By the levers the depth of work can be regulated while the harrow is in motion. The draft is steady and direct as the harrow has no side motion.

HOW TO FIND OUT.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What to Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root, the great kidney remedy fulfils every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold urin and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following the use liquor, beer, or wine, and over comes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists, price fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet both sent free by mail. Mention The Pocahontas Times and send your address to Dr Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The proprietors guarantee the genuineness of this offer.

New York News Letter.

LUETGERT, the Chicago sausage maker, who was accused of boiling his wife in one of his huge sausage vats, has been convicted and sentenced to life imprisonment. This man has had two trials. The first resulted in a disagreement. His lawyer will apply to the Supreme Court for a new trial. This trial has been the sensation of the day.

The other day in Brooklyn a woman killed her step-daughter, and then hacked her husband with an ax. The cause was insane jealousy of her husband's daughter, who was 17. The man is slowly recovering.

The Spanish Minister De Lome has been recalled. This man wrote a letter insulting the President. As in the case of the British Minister, Lord Sackville, during Cleveland's administration, prompt action was taken by our government. De Lome's letter was written to a friend, Senor Canalejas, but it never reached him. The general belief is that Cuban spies in some way intercepted it. At any rate, the Cuban Junta in this city, have the original. Spanish spies are about trying to bribe Cuban officials, so as to obtain the letter, offering $5.000 to $20.000 for its delivery. But the letter is more precious than gold to the Cubans.

Another mutilated body of a man was found in the East River. It was headless and limbless. The only marks to identify it is a mole on the groin and another on the back. The breast bone and nearly every rib was broken, some being driven into the lungs. The supposition is that the man fought hard for his life. A bullet wound was also found in the left leg. The police claim there was a woman in the case. The police now-a-days saddle every thing on a woman. Their theories make one tired. As usual, crowds are visiting the Morgue to look upon this ghastly object.

A couple of detectives, of Chicago, were sent to arrest a man named Clark. It seems that Clark is the owner of a vicious and well trained circus donkey. The detectives spied their man in a field, feeding the long-ear animal. One of the detectives started over the field to serve his warrant, but the donkey gave chase and the detective put for all he was worth to the barbed wire fence and got over just in time. It is said this donkey has killed ten keepers. Mr Clark is still guarded over by his faithful donkey.

President Barrios, of Gautemala, has been assassinated, and his place has been taken by the vice president, Cabrera. This man was a dashing fighter and was much loved. The Presidents of these Republics have anything but a smooth time. When things seem to be going on serenely, along comes a smoking assassin and the deed is done. Up bobs another man to take the vacant chair and the uncertainty of living a natural life.

Another one of these dense fogs enveloped this city Wednesday morning. Two elevated trains crashed together; a ferry boat got lost on the East River for a couple of hours and at last crashed into a dock, injuring several; two boats, belonging to the Erie R. R. came together in the North River, causing hurts to a number of people; two boats, of the Pennsylvania R. R., on North River also did the same trick and the rails and guards were smashed; the Long Island ferry boat, in making her slip, banged into the bulkhead with great force and one man received several scalp wounds and others were shaken up. These fogs cause a lot of trouble in more ways than one.

GEORGE M. SANGSTER.

A Damper to Genius.

A north Georgia farmer, who was possessed of some means, entered the office of his country paper and asked for the editor. He was accompanied by his son—a youth of seventeen years—and as soon as the editor, who was in his secret sanctum, was informed that his visitors were not bill collectors, he came forward and shook hands.

"I came to git some information" explained the farmer.

"Certainly," said the editor, "and you came to the right place. Be seated."

The farmer sat on an end of the table, while his son sat on the floor.

"This boy o' mine wants to go into the literary business, and I thought you'd know ef thar wuz any money in it not. It's a good business—ain't it?"

"Why—yes," said the editor after some little hesitation. "I have been in it for fifteen years, and you see where I've got to."

The farmer eyed him from head to feet, glanced around the poorly furnished office, surveyed the editor once more, then, turning to his son, who was still on the floor, said:

"Git up, John, an' go home an' go back to plowin'!" —Atlanta Constitution.

Is Kissing a Crime?—It appears to be so in New Jersey. In a small village of that moral State a young woman was recently fined ten dollars for allowing herself to be kissed. The heinous offence was committed in the hallway of an apartment-house at the hour of 10 o'clock at night, and, while there were no eye-witness to the disgraceful scene, two maiden ladies residing on the floor above testified that the noise of the contact was distinctly audible to them and produced a perceptible vibration throughout the whole building. Whereupon the village recorder, a man learned in the law, mulcted the young woman in the above mentioned sum. Why the gay Lothario in the case was not called upon to contribute to the piper's income, does not appear. However, it is to be presumed that the recorder knew the respective rights and liabilities of the kisser and the kissee, and decided according to the law and justice of the case.—Law Notes.

How Talmage Was Entrapped.

Even the saintly divines are not proof against the summer resort divinity clad in a bathing suit, cut decolette at both ends. Dr Talmage, just married for the third time, met his last destiny at a seaside resort, last summer. He is 66 and she is 40, just the age that females show up best in bathing suits.—Telluride Journal.

An enthusiastic young revivalist of the M. E. persuasion was recently conducting a series of meeting in one of the lovely villages in which the Mill Creek vally abounds and he wanted his hearers to "get a move on 'em." Said he, "Let all Christians arise to their feet." A few got up. "Let all who want the prayers of the church raise thier hands!" No response. "Let all who want to be saved get up and leave the house!"—and some fifteen or twenty proceeded to march out.—Jackson Herald.

A 70 YEAR old ex-Union veteran was awarded a pension of $300 on forthwith proceeded to invest in a 22-year old spouse. This calls to mind the observation of our old and distinguished friend Sobonon, who remarked that there were four things that he did not understand:

"The way of an eagle in the air, the way of a ship in the midst of the sea, the way of a serpent on a rock and the way of a man with a maid." Yes, verily.—Nashville Banner.

The Treasure Trove.

IV.

THE venture that young Weston made was not conceived in the certainty of success that precedes so many failures. It happens every day that the best laid schemes bring ruin and disaster upon men, while other enterprises in which no man in his right senses would engage bring forth abundantly. A man takes a turn to the left and meets fate waiting for him, whereas had he gone on his usual path another set of circumstances would have influenced or destroyed his life.

We cannot always tell, that is admitted. The question is can we ever tell? We see a drunken man lying beside the road with his head in the gutter. We know his personal history. He had as fair prospects as ever man had. A fortune left him; he was well educated; he had many influential friends, he married one of the sweetest women of his acquaintance,—but drink did for him. He has been a faithful and consistant user of whiskey since his boyhood. There he lies like a hog, only he lacks that animal's sensibility. We all say what a man he would have been had he left whiskey alone; yet who among us can say whether he would have been alive had he pursued a different course. He might have died of a chill in the flower of his early manhood. But we, who cannot help posing as the Pharisee and exclaiming that we are thankful that we are not as he, will say that it were ten thousand times better that he had died than he had ever tasted one drop of the fiery joy that cup brings the toper. But we are not capable of judging, and it would be hard to convince him that his duty to humanity was clear; that he would make amends for a good deal by one act if he would knock his brains out against the next stone wall, or otherwise dispose of himself. He would not accommodate you, but live on for years; and the suicide we read of in the negt day's paper is of a man of good habits who feels that the world has no charms for him.

Weston's task might have been easy had he undertaken it thirty days after his father and Harvey had parted company. But lapse of time has a good deal to do with trailing, as every hunter knows.

Weston felt that he would appear foolish to ride up to a mountain home and ask if they had seen a stranger pass that way leading a mule, and the question would then be, when? Thirty years ago! And then the lady of the house, still courteous, would reply: "I don't rightly remember; I'll ask pap." And the venerable old man would come out to the fence, and while he might be able to remember what happened thirty years ago better than the events of yesterday, he could only answer "he mout, and then again he mouto'nt."

But Weston laid his hopes on some peculiarities that might fix Harvey in the minds of the people about that cross-roads. In the first place, the active hostilities when his father was captured were probably among the first of the events of the war to happen in that part of West Virginia, and Harvey, if he were honest, where he missed his partner would search the neighborhood over for traces of him. If the country had remained unchanged in its settlers they might remember the man, and it might be possible that he had left word there for his young partner. Again, Weston's father had described how the old Indian scout and plainsman had packed the led mule with the innumerable ties and cinches, and had put a top heavy load on the back of that obstinate animal that would not shift an inch in a day's ride. Weston felt sure that the mountaineers would find such a sight unusual, and that it might fix it in the memory of the people along the route of travel. Anyway, as we have remarked, he intended to have a look at the place, the cross-roads near the village of Prattsville; and after buying a horse, to ride away in some direction. It would serve for a purpose, or, at least, an excuse.

The train took him within forty miles of his destination, and he got off at a thriving village of a thousand or more inhabitants. The two rival hotels had their black porters there to meet him, and there being no other legitimate prey upon the plaform, both reached him at the same instant. "Hotel Vale, boss!" "De Mountain City House, Captain!" they pleaded alternately, and as they seemed to make it a personal matter with him he found it as hard to decide between them as a Congressman would between two applicants for the same post-office, if we can imagine such a case. Finally he decided to favor the Mountain City House, and when he had spent the night there he decided that he had made the mistake of his life. Afterwards he stopped at Hotel Vale (once), and if he ever goes that way again he will so arrange matters that he will not have to stop.

Here he made inquiries about Prattsville, and was told that the mail hack would carry passengers, and that he had better engage a seat in advance. Weston was full of pleasurable anticipations as to a ride of forty miles over mountains on a mail hack, which he supposed was a kind of stage coach. He sought out the driver and was told to be ready by ten o'clock the next day and that they would start from the post-office. He was there on time and was thinking that he would soon see a coach and four dash around the corner, when he was told to hurry up. He then saw what he had failed to notice particularly, his friend the mail carrier in a two-wheeled, skeleton cart, behind which was fastened the leather bags of the United States mail, while between the shafts was an old and boney horse. It all had the air of desperate, hopeless misery.

Weston stowed his long legs away in the front of the cart and found that the old horse, being high, threw the cart at an angle that made the passengers sit in the attitude of those confined in the stocks.

The horse made a preliminary movement or two as tho he were not quite certain of his legs, and the wheels went round. When once on the road the driver, in answer to questions, explained that he would go thirty miles with him to Stratton, and stay over night there with "Old Man Belknap," and go on with the other mail-carrier to Prattville, if that mail-boy had been able to make "a raise of a horse." "Old Boney," he continued, "hed the good luck to lay down in the road and kick the bucket day before yistiday, and Sol Depew, what carries the mail 'tween Stratton's and Prattsville, had to hoof it there and back."

"How often do you make the trip on your end?" asked the passenger.

"Six times a week; this here's a daily mail, and the mail what comes down passes us at Sunrise."

"Does the government pay you well for this kind of work?"

"Young man, air you makin' fun o' me. Dang my buttons, don't this yer rig look like I war prosperin'? I am the d——d fool what contracted for to carry this ——— mail for sixty miles a day for $579 er year. Last spring a feller come around lookin' for a dang fool for sub-contractor. I think he must her bin cootered me inter takin' it. My wife lows, 'Don't yer git to talkin' about carryin' the mail, fer I most allers notice that when a man gits ter foolin' with a' mail-route or a sawmill they air pretty sheerly on the bustup'; and of I wasn't just thinkin' about telling her about Jim Dresher wantin' me to buy a half interest in his sawmill, you may shoot me. Sawmill what blew up her fell and killed three men. I spose you hears about it?"

"No, I can't say I did. But how are you coming out with your contract?"

"Well, mister, come next July my contract will be up, and if I kin git out of it with losin' my year's work, and all the grain I raised on my farm last year, I shell be mor'n satisfied. I've lost all my religion carryin' this ——— mail, and the women air carryin' on about it, and I aint able to go to preachin' Sundays anymore after travelin' in this here cart six days, and I met the preacher on the road tother day and he said something about backslidin', and I told him to look at this here seat and see what made me slide back. He made me promise to quit carryin' the mail, fer he said this here work was leadin' me to destruction, and I mellered up enough to tell him if the Lord let me live until the 30th day of June, 1892, that I would turn old Bill here out to grass and git down on my marrow bones and pray fer fergiveness, fer a misspent year in carryin' the mail."

Presently they came to a toll-gate, and a determined looking woman demanded toll, which was firmly refused. Having done this she retired looking daggers, while the mail-carrier explained there was a fight on between him and the toll gate keepers, and they always asked him for toll.

"But they dassent draw the gate on me fer Uncle Sam's mail has got ter go through."

Walking up hill and riding down the day was passed and when the sun was only to be seen on the top of the highest peaks, Stratton came in sight with its churches, stores, and dwellings, and Weston was welcomed by old man Belknap, the tavern keeper, who took very good care of him from the time he said "Hev a cheer!" to "when you air passing, call!"

LEVEL HEADED OPINIONS.

It is conceded by all, whether party friends or opponents, that Senator Daniel, of Virginia, is one of the most level headed persons now in public life. In a recent interview he expressed the opinion that were greenbacks retired at this time, and thus contract the volume of currency, as the friends of the gold standard recommend, there would be another money panic. While there is an abundance of money piled up in New York, there is not enough money in the South to give the Southern people a living chance, and it seems like frivolity and satire to talk about less money with the prevalent low prices prevailing in realestate and Southern cotton.

All the talk about opposing and putting down trusts and monopolies will be perfectly useless while the GOLD TRUST, managed by a syndicate of which the English monarchy is at the head and all other European monarchs the directors, is producing stringency and decline of prices all over the world.

Like the noble, magnanimous Virginian he is, the Senator does not vituperate or villify those who differ from him and prefer to work in the interest of the gold trust, so beneficial to English prosperity and the Eastern section of the United States at the expense of the middle West, the far West and the South. This is a free country, so called, and its citizens should be allowed to have their preferences, yet it does seem that, in politics as well as in other respects, charity should begin at home, but need not stay there. This is how the revolutionary veterans felt, and when they had secured prosperity for themselves they freely shared it with those of other countries who want about it in the right way.

BIOGRAPHIC NOTES.
By W. T. P.

THE ancestor of the Varner relationship in our county was Joseph Varner. He came from Pendleton County very early in the century and settled on the crooked branch of Elk, on property now in the possession of William M. McAllister, Esq. Mr Varner's parents, it is believed, came from Germany to Pennsylvania, thence to Pendleton County, among the earliest settlers of that county. The given names of these parents seemed to have been forgotten. The father lived to the age of 112 years and died in Pendleton. The widowed mother came to live with her son Joseph, on Elk, and died there, and her remains were buried near the home. Her reputed age was 114 years, the oldest person that ever lived in this region.

Joseph Varner's wife was Susan Herold, sister of Christopher Herold, whose memoirs have been already published in The Times. They were the parents of four sons — John, Adam, Eli, and Samuel. Their four daughters were Elizabeth, Alice, Susan, and Amanda. The Varner sisters seemed to have been ladies by nature, and were remarkable for their beauty, sprightliness, attractive manners, and tidy housekeeping.

Elizabeth became Mrs John Holden, and lived many years at Huntersville. During the war the family refugeed to Rockbridge and never returned. She died near Lexington, Virginia, and is buried there in the cemetery not far from the grave of Stonewall Jackson.

Alice Varner was married to Hiram Scott, for years a well-known and highly respected merchant at Frankford, Greenbrier County, W. Virginia. Mrs Captain Dolan, at Hinton, is her daughter.

Susan Varner became Mrs Thomas Call, for many years a tailor at Huntersville. Her family finally went to Missouri.

Amanda, when about fourteen years of age, was sitting on a rock just in front of her cabin home one Sabbath evening reading her testament. The button-pole of the roof fell upon her, killing her instantly. The stone is still to be seen where this mournful event occurred. She is spoken of by the older people as such a beautiful girl, and so dutiful to her parents, and was so capable and helpful in domestic affairs. She had been to Sunday school and prayer-meeting in the morning.

In reference to Joseph Varner's sons we note the following particulars.

Adam Varner married Caroline, daughter of William Gibson, Sr., so many years a merchant at Huntersville, and settled in Lewis County, West Virginia.

Samuel Varner was a merchant tailor, a business he learned from John Holden at Huntersville. He settled at Frankford.

Eli Varner was never married. He excelled as a mower. One season while moving hay at his uncle Christopher Herold's, on Douthard's Creek, a serious accident happened him. While grinding a scythe it was struck by the crank, and turning in his hand came near severing it at the wrist. The flow of blood was alarming, and it seemed as if he would bleed to death in spite of every thing that was done to check the bleeding. Mrs Katie Herold, Peter Herold's wife, gets the credit of saving his life by checking the flow of blood with the use of certain words as a charm. It is believed the words used are found in Ezekial xvi. 6. "And when I passed by thee and saw thee polluted in thine own blood, I said unto thee when thou wast in thy blood, Live! Yea, I said unto thee when thou wast in thy blood, Live!"

John Varner married Lucinda Hannah, daughter of David Hannah, a soldier of the war 1812, and an early settler on Elk. They began on the woods and built up a prosperous home at Split Rock. There were five sons, David, John, Samuel, William, and Benjamin. The five daughters were Margaret, who became Mrs Clinton Slanker; Mary, who was Mrs Robert Wilson, near Lexington; Virginia Susan, now Mrs William Snyder, of Iowa; Alice, now Mrs John Stewart, Valley Head, Randolph County, Jennie became Mrs Hamilton Snyder, Taylor County, Iowa.

John Varner married Miss Mary Moore, daughter of Washington Moore, and lives near the old homestead.

Samuel Varner married Ann Showalter, of Rockbridge, and lives near Linnwood.

William Varner married Mary Gibson, of William Gibson, and lives at the Gibson homestead.

Benjamin Varner married Ella Moore, daughter of Washington Moore and lives in Iowa.

David Varner, the eldest of John Varner's sons, is remembered and spoken of by all who knew him as a very amiable and interesting young man. He died in the battle of the Wilderness in May, 1863, at the time the Confederate lines were broken and General Edward Johnson's command mainly taken prisoners of war. David Varner was in his place at the front with his face to the foe. He received the fatal shot near his heart, moved a little distance and fell upon his face, and was dead before a comrade could reach him.

In one of his letters to his sister Mrs Slanker, he wrote in such a way as to impress the idea that he had premonitions of the sad fate that awaited him. It was his earnest wish that if he should fall to be brought home and buried. Search was made for his body, but it could not be identified. The field had been burned over about the time he had fallen and destroyed all traces of identity.

The writer had the pleasure of meeting Mrs Elizabeth Holden at Lexington, some years after the war. Her emotions overpowered her as she endeavored to tell me what had taken place since we last met at her pleasant home in Huntersville in 1861. I was told by others that she was one of the most regular attendants upon public worship and did more than her part in the benevolent work of the congregation, considering her broken health and reverses. She plied her needle with such industry that she lived nicely and had something to spare.

It greatly pleased the writer to hear it remarked, You must have good people in Pocahontas if Mrs Holden and a certain person, here nameless, be fair specimens. What can be more worthy of aspiration than to be a credit to the people among whom we may happen to be reared. To be a credit to our families, our religion, and our country is about the noblest aim that can stimulate true and useful endeavor.

Sweetness and Light.

Put a pill in the pulpit if you want practical preaching for the physical man; then put the pill in the pillory if it does not practise what it preaches. There's a whole gospel in Ayer's Sugar Coated Pills; a "gospel of sweetness and light." People used to value their physic, as they did their religion,—by its bitterness. The more bitter the dose the better the doctor. We've got over that. We take "sugar in ours"—gospel or physic—now-a-days. It's possible to please and to purge at the same time. There may be power in a pleasant pill. That is the gospel of

BURGESS—"Do you want my daughter?"

"I do."

"Have you any money?"

"A little. How high do you quote her?"

Then they glared at each other in silence for a minute, and as if by mutual consent all references to financial matters was eliminated from their conversation after that.—Chicago Post.

WIDOW BY GASFIXTURATION.

Short and Simple Annals of a Lady Who Saw a Gen'man Carve Another Lady.

She was a witness in a Minnetta lane stabbing case that was being tried in the General Sessions before Recorder Goff.

"And did you see what happened that night?" asked Assistant District Attorney Hennessy.

"Do you mean when th' tall gen'man cut de lady wif his razor?"

"Yes," said Mr Hennessy. "Describe how it happened.

"Why, he just carved her wif one carve," answered the big negress.

"Well, what led up to it? Did n't she say something to him?"

"Say somethin'!" exclaimed the witness. "Say somethin'!" How kin a lady talk when her gurglin' veis is cut? Why, you speak like you were brought up in de backwoods."

"Where were you brought up?" asked counsel.

"In Jackson's alley," answered the witness. "I were borned, married, and buried ma husband dere.'

"So you are a widow?"

"Yes, I'm a widow! An' I'm not snoozin' around for another man either. One fool were nuff for me, I tell yer."

"Was the man you married a fool?" asked Mr Hennessy.

"Look a-heah, lawyer, don't you think a man what goes off an' gasfixturates hisself is a fool?"

"What did he do?"

"Gasfixturated himself."

"You mean asphyxiated himself," explained Mr Hennessy. He turned on the gas and asphyxiated himself."

"Gasfixuration," corrected the witness; "afterward I made up my mind I'd nebber marry de best man de Lord made. When yer married, nobody but yer husband will look at yer; but if yer a single widow de men jes' chase yer round An' den if yer smack 'em in der jaw dey come back next night wif a present for a new introduction."

"You're speaking of the African custom," remarked the Recorder; "but they don't end quarrels so lovingly among the Spanish and Italians."

"Look a-heah, Judge," said the witness, "I'm no Italian. Don't take de fo' no Spanish. I'm a nigger, dat's what I am."

"I'll apologize," said the Recorder, as the time for adjourning court had arrived.—The Sun, New York.

PROBLEM.

This problem was given in The Pocahontas Times, February 11.

"A said to B give me one of your apples and I will have as many as you. B said to A give me one of yours and I will have twice as many as you."

We have received from Covington, Virginia, a solution in which our correspondent gives the answer A 2 and B 3, having taken a construction of the proposition which we had not foreseen.

In order that an addition of one to A's would make it equal to B's, the apple would have to come from an outside source; for if B gave him one of his, as the problem requires, they would just change places. On the other hand, if A decreased the number of apples one to give it to B, B would have four times as many of A.

The figures 3 and 7 answer the question. We would like very much to see the solution.

By continuing to whoop it up for silver one day and gold the next, Mr McKinley is proving that he is the President of all the people.—Detroit Tribune.

Opportunity.

Master of human destinies am I!
Fame, love, and fortune on my footsteps wait.
Cities and fields I walk; I penetrate
Deserts and seas remote, and passing by
Hovel and mart and palace, soon or late
I knock unbidden once at every gate.
If sleeping, wake; if feasting, rise before
I turn away. It is the hour of fate
And they who follow me reach every state
Mortals desire, and conquer every foe
Save death; but those who doubt or hesitate,
Condemned to failure, penury, and woe,
Seek me in vain and uselessly implore.
I answer not and I return no more —Selected.

It is said that the conduct of nations resembles that of individuals in their troubles. Our own country has put off trouble and refused to show a bold front to Spain until, like the man who shows too plainly that he will not fight, either he has to fight in time or be run over. For the past three years our over cautious administration has refused to recognize that a state of war exists in Cuba. We had only to take this initial step and matters would have resolved themselves that the war would have been one conducted on the fair fight principles that the international code insures. Instead of this we have expended millions of dollars to aid Spain in her own peculiar police regulations by assisting that country in arresting and preventing filibustering expeditions. There is no doubt now that the warship was blown up by a harbor mine. In doing so the miscreants deprived our country of property to the value of the county in which we live. The administration has made a fatal error in its half way policy. It has done enough to get us into trouble, and too little to put down all opposition with the strong hand required.

HUNTERSVILLE.

Mr Jones, representing a Staunton grocery, was in Huntersville Friday night.

Mrs O. E. McKeever's school will close Friday and a nice entertainment is in contemplation.

R. K. Burns, of Academy, was in Huntersville last week, and looks as if he had been drinking at the fountain of perpetual youth.

Washington Hill, Sheriff, was in Huntersville Saturday looking after government dues, and seems hot on the track.

O. E. McKeever has completed the Beaver Creek school-house and is now at home with his outfit, and ready for some of the many jobs that claim his attention.

Mr Reece Pritchard, of Danmore, was in our town last Sunday visiting relatives and friends. Reece is a nice young man and we were very glad to have him with us.

Colonel O'Connel was at Huntersville Hotel Sunday night. He informs us that he begins to have some hopes of a railroad coming to our county, which is something he has never entertained before as among possible things.

Sunday night, February 20, Mr Boggs, one of the Huntersville merchants, was aroused from his sleep about 11 o'clock by a noise about his store door. Upon coming down to the lower floor the noise ceased, and he remained quietly in an upper room when the noise was resumed, as if some one was attempting to force the lock or remove it. He went to the window overlooking the door, but could not see distinctly. Just then two persons on horseback galloped up to the platform, whereupon he raised the window and fired his pistol. The parties on the platform disappeared in the church alley and the parties on horseback went away faster than they had come, but in what direction not certainly known.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Mrs. John W. Harris and wife of Lewisburg, will start this month for Europe for a pleasure tour.

John D. Pollen has returned from Baltimore and New York where he had an a large supply of new goods.

S. B. Hannah and C. A. Eichelberger of Grant Bank were in Marlinton Tuesday to qualify as executors of Allen Gaillard, dec'd.

Mr. Robert A. Gray, of Augusta County, died last week, aged 68 years. He was the oldest member of the Old Stone Church and had been a Sunday School for sixty-five years.

WASHINGTON VS. COLUMBUS.

The Merits of Two Public Benefactors Recited, and Superior Achievements Duly Recognized.

We aim to keep our "esteemed readers" rightly informed of what transpires in the weekly sessions of the Marlinton Literary Association. Last Friday night immortal Shakespeare ruled the roast; and the live question debated that "Washington deserves more honor for defending than Columbus for discovering America." Miss Susie Price and N. C. McNeill sustained the affirmative, and S. B. Scott, Jr., the negative. Messrs S. and McNeil held the rapt attention of their audiences for thirty minutes and one hour respectively, with learned facts and figures to prove their irrefutable arguments. The second speaker on the negative, although present, was not heard from. Miss Price, realizing the gravity of the question and not wishing to hurl her irresistible force of argument against an immovable object, led off in her usual forcible, happy-go-lucky style with a localized illustration.

In the year 1892, a dubious and wild looking stranger arrives in the ancient town of Lewisburg and anxiously inquires the way to the main business headquarters of the town. After receiving many dark and evasive answers, he at last finds himself directed to the Independent office. Here he finds the editor in a jovial mood rejoicing with his friends over the prospect of water works in the town; for as it has been well said, a good supply of cold water, a lemon, and a little sugar, makes the Lewisburger the happiest creature on earth.

An audience is granted to the fantastic stranger, who, possessed with an exhuberant imagination and from the study of certain mysterious charts and maps and by some occult means appears to be consumed by the idea that there is an undiscovered county to the north of Greenbrier; a county with modern lawyers, intelligent and up to date people, and a newspaper whose advertising columns are as eagerly scanned as those of the Greenbrier Independent.

"Go to, Columbus!" cries the incredulous audience, "you give us the heart disease!"

But it being the strangers fixed resolve to discover this county, after a tedious delay, numerous conferences, negotiations, and contracts, the philosophic veteran is supplied with a livery team and money to pay for toll, and such incidental expenses. At the second tollgate the teamster mutineers, but with indomitable courage and certainty in his convictions he leads the dispirited band to the top of Droop Mountain. Here one of the livery horses dies and the other sticks fast in the sand. He penetrates no farther, but goes back to where he came from and claims to have discovered Pocahontas,—an impertinent representation that would jar on the temperament and waste the spirit of every self respecting citizen of the county.

Five years pass away, an eventful five to that part of the world branded as Marion. Where once stood a howling wilderness now stands the county seat. A great wave of improvement has swept over the place. Where once was heard the thunderous voice of the Judge sentencing the criminal to the penitentiary, now is heard the pleasing hum of the carpenter's saw; our bowling alleys turned into grinding mills, and every where are footprints that instead of terrifying the Pocahontas Robinson Crusoe, agitate his mind with hope, the footprints of the railroad engineers.

Press day has dawned on the Times office on the west bank of the Greenbrier River. Lazy Jim turns the wheel with many an inward protestation and groan. The Times force, feeling it's importance having once more reached the adversaries of a country newspaper and gotten out the issue, is at peace with the world, when a stranger rides up, ties his horse to the door knob, and walks in. It is the editor of the Greenbrier Independent. He claims by the terms of the discovery that he alone has the right to sing songs in this county. He insists on singing to show his right the latest song, "My Sweetheart's a High Born Lady."

The stranger lifts up his voice, and the editor of the Times, calling upon his unchardoned feelings to follow him, dashes into the fray with "Wing Father Curses the Duck." Considering the singers voices were out of condition, it was a hard song to sing, and well might exhausted but triumphant the last verse was hurled at the head of the knight horn.

We thus have learned in a few second [illegible]

erary society is in session. They well know that to reach the schoolhouse first while the enemy goes around by the bridge they must cross the river, (now full of running ice). Quickly marshalling all the men on the west end, boards are lashed together, and they cross the river amid the dangers of floating ice, to say nothing of the perilous path through bastioned cornfields on the other side.

The enterprise is successful, as history shows. When the lover of the high born lady arrives the lights are out, the people gone, and nobody to hear and catch the latest song, and everybody rejoices that the town is saved.

We would like to give a synopsis of the other speeches, but it can't be done.

The case was submitted to the most honorable and upright judges who speedily handed down a decision for the Father of his Country, the plaintiff in this suit; and let it be recorded without a protest from the other side.

Mr Cash endeavored to "coon" the rope to the bank, but, when within about thirty feet of the bank, the rope broke and threw him into the water with terrific force, and it was only by the greatest effort that he reached the bank. The boat drifted against the shore below and the boy that was left aboard sprand to the bank taking with him a Winchester rifle the only thing saved of the entire cargo. Mr Cash was nearly drown ed and claims the loss to be $350. —Charleston Gazette.

HOW TO FIND OUT.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What to Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root, the great kidney remedy fulfils every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold urin and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following the use liquor, beer, or wine, and over comes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists, price fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet both sent free by mail, upon receipt of three two-cent stamps to cover cost of postage on the bottle. Mention The Times and send your address to Dr Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The proprietors guarantee the genuineness of this offer.

New York News Letter.

THE weather hereabouts up to yesterday for the past four days has been just like June; but oh, what a change to day. We are having a March in February.

The cruiser Maine blown up in Havana harbor! At 9.45 p. m. February 15, a terrible explosion occurred on the man-of-war Maine in the harbor of Havana. How it happened is, at present writing, a mystery. Some are of the opinion that it occurred in one of the magazine. The loss of life is stated to be very heavy. The explosion shook the whole city of Havana. The beautiful war ship is a complete wreck. I believe the figure to build it amounted to $3,000,000. Ten cents would buy it now.

With DeLome, the Spanish Minister at Washington, being sent back for insulting the President in a letter to a friend; the loss of our beautiful ship and hundreds of gallant seamen being blown into eternity; and the terrible suffering of the brave people of Cuba, do you not think, kind reader, that it is time to use the remainder of our powder and blow Spain off the face of the earth?

William J. Bryan has a plan for his party. Democrats, Populists and silver Republicans have issued addresses to the citizens of the United States to make war on gold. The Congressional committees of these three parties are framing plans to control Congress. They are getting into working harness. Senator James K. Jones, chairman of the National Committee, has published a stirring and ringing appeal to all good Democrats.

The other day in Brooklyn a woman (a married woman at that) was kissed by a man who kissed so hard that he kissed two of her teeth out, roots and all. The woman had the wretch arrested, very naturally, but the judge laughted the matter off and discharged the kisser, warning him to keep away from the woman and her home in the future.

Jere Johnson, Jr., the oldest and best known real estate man in this city and vicinity, died at Thomasville, Georgia, whither he had gone about a month ago with his wife to recuperate. He had been in ill health for some time, a slight cold causing the commencement of his sickness. He was born in Brooklyn in the year 1827. Mr Johnson had a novel way of drawing crowds to his auction sales of suburban property. He would advert se very heavily in the metropolitan papers and on the fences, issue excursion tickets, provide the the intending purchasers with a good, substantial luncheon and an excellent band of music to entertain the assemblage. A little over a year ago he lost a son by drowning, and a couple of years before that another son was killed aw y. Mrs Johnson has the sympathy of all in this her terrible bereavement. Mrs Johnson is known to quite a few of you.

Two women were arrested for shop-lifting the other day. They left a baby in its carriage outside and frequently one or the other would run out to see how the kid was getting on. A detective noticed the frequent trips of these women to the baby carriage, and watched. At last he was rewarded with seeing one of the women tuck something under the covers. When the women started to leave, the detective said: "Pardon me, ladies, but you are not going away without paying for some of the articles!" Oh! how indignant the women became. Upon searching the carriage they found three chinandelsticks, four cups and saucers, overcoaters, baby shoes, a pair of corsets, two baby caps, a waist, lace and embroidery, lots of underwear for both sexes, a wool skirt and a black satin skirt. Upon suspicion they said that they had robbed 16 stores that day.

The big stores in this city have to keep a small army of detectives and female "spotters" to protect them from shoplifters. The professional thief is seldom caught as they generally have an accomplice near by, who receives the goods in a quick manner. These stores are joined on every day but one are silent ered, and the ladies are just crazy for a bargain. On Monday in some stores the doors are only opened every ten or fifteen minutes to let the fair sex in. Then it is that these shoplifters get in their fine work, and in such a crowd it is only by accident that they are caught in the act.

A large fire took place last night at Rockaway Beach, the popular summer resort, and much damage was done. One large hotel and three cottages were consumed. Loss $125,000.

Business is picking up. Several large sales have been made in real estate, the stock market is all O. K., new buildings are being erected and every body seems happy.

GEORGE M. SMOOTER.

Posing Mr Bradlaugh.

It is always pleasant to see a dogmatist meet more than his match.

Mr Bradlaugh, says the New York Commercial advertiser, was once engaged in a discussion with a dissenting minister. Bradlaugh insisted that the minister should answer a question by a single "Yes" or "No" without any circumlocution, asserting that every question could be replied to in that manner.

The reverend gentleman rose, and in a quiet manner said, "Mr Bradlaugh, will you allow me to ask you a question on the same terms?"

"Certainly," said Bradlaugh.

"Then, may I ask have you given up beating your wife?"

This was a poser, for if answered by "Yes" it would imply that he had previously beaten her, and to by "No" that he continued to do so.

Born Too Late.

A young man upon whose upper lip the first faint signs of adolescence had begun to manifest themselves had become deeply enamored of a maiden several years his senior.

His home, and hers as well, was in an ambitious college town in the middle West, among whose municipal regulations—but let us not anticipate.

He had been under the influence of the tender passion for a period certainly not less than four weeks, and could wait no longer to know his fate. One eventful evening, after walking up and the side-walk in front of her home until nearly nine o'clock, he went up the door steps, rang the bell and was admitted. The young lady received him in the parlor, and without loss of time he declared himself in the most impassioned manner.

There was a brief silence.

Then the deep tones of a distant bell were heard. "Harry," she said patting him gently on the head, "there goes the curfew. Come earlier next time. Good night!"—Ex.

She Began Wrong.

The Chicago Commons says that a lady, newly awakened in her conscience, set forth one day to visit the poor. Like some other well-meaning persons, she lacked preparation for her work. One thing she fully believed: that the poor are, al nost as a matter of course, drunken and dissolute.

Her first call was upon a sturdy working woman. The lady walked in, and the woman—in her kitchen, doing some laundry work—received her with respectful politeness.

"Good afternoon," said the visitor.

"Good afternoon," said the woman of the house.

"Does your husband drink?" was the visitor's next remark.

"No. Does yours?" was the surprising but perhaps not unnatural answer.

And the good woman, as the story goes, left the house abruptly, convinced that the poor are mostly a thankless set, quite beyond the reach of benevolence.

Badly off.

The colored people found it hard times in Georgia last December during the smallpox scare. So we may infer, at all events, from a scrap of dialogue reported by the Atlanta Constitution.

An old Georgia negro, with his arm in a sling, was talking to another on a West End car.

"You sick?" he said, with emphasis, "I gone up now, for ah 'll 'Yer on dis sign, in de sling, don't you?"

"Yes."

"Well, sah," the old man continued, by way of explanation, "I is a mighty years of 'em harvest hone see lots er 'em hit in my d j ust by de grace er God I 'mine Cahlen, I mine de Yaller Chawlton, I mine de Whitecaps, en I mine de Ku Kluxes, but now, in my ole age, please God, de watermelon 'sholed en cut me!"

THE next morning very early the jingling of the bell woke up a stiff and sore traveler, and he was fain to avoid the cart of the mail carrier, and when he met the man at the hotel breakfast table he was not sorry to hear that he had not replaced the horse that had dropped in his tracks and died in the road, and he determined to walk the ten miles yet remaining in company with the man who literally carried the mail.

About two miles out they came in sight of a comfortable farm-house with its large barns and out-buildings denoting peaceful prosperity. As they passed the gate leading into the barn the mail carrier said:

"There's where my old horse died. Curious about that old horse dying right there. He were a twenty-five year old. The feller what traded him to me 'fessed up to nineteen, and he were colted on this here very farm. They kept him till about a year ago, when they give him to a man who promised to treat him well for the rest of his life. I never knowed nothing about it until after he was dead. I traded a mule fer him last Christmas and put him on this here mail-route. Whenever he would git to that there gate I would jest have to flail him along. Monday as I kem along the road here he were hobbling along mighty slow, but when he got in sight of the barn he went sailing. He stopped as he ginerally did, fer I never could lam hit out of him, and when I hed raised to give him the whip he fell all of a sudden, and I believe he was dead afore he struck the ground. The folks come running out of the house, and one of the gals hollers out, 'It's old Barney!' Then Mis' Eldridge lows to ole Captain Eldridge that this here was some of his chickens coming home to roost, and the ole Captain look blue as the mischief, and he said, 'Yes, Mandy, but Arthur insisted on not winterin' him and it was all that I could do to save his life, poor ole feller.'

"'Yes,' says Mis' Eldridge, 'that 's jest like Arthur. But 'when he cut the big vein in his leg on the mowin' scythe when he were ten year old, old Barney was the only horse on the place what could have got the doctor here in time. The doctor got here just in time, as it was.'

"Then one of the gals 'lowed she felt like she never wanted to git another letter in the mail. She'd always think of old Barney.

"Then one of the little gals hollered out:

"'I'll bet you like to git one from Jake Rallings.'

"Then the big one said.

"'Hush up, smarty!'

"The old Captin lowed he would give the old horse a decent burial. I said purty peart, 'Well, I'll furnish the corpse,' and the old gent looked at me steady for about five minutes and said, 'You git on down the road. The likes of you aint fit to be trusted with horse-flesh'; and I went. But he did n't face me none, for gittin' that across outen the road would have cost me a dollar. Over thar's the old ping's grave. But they would n't bury me half as well if I'd die in front of their house."

"It was not yet the middle of the day when Weston arrived with the mail at Prattsville. Here he was within a half mile of the cross roads to which he had been traveling for several hundred miles. The question of where to stop was quite superfluous. In the country in which he was now traveling the sign-boards of "houses of entertainment" were one of the noticeable features of the journey.

Prattsville had no exceptionally alluring one. Besides the wording necessary to tell every one that this was "Hotel Monroe," the landlord had had many gratuitous pictures in and occupying the entire portion of the board. One was a man on good terms with his mule and was labelled, "This man stopped for dinner and had his horse fed." The other was a mule throwing his rider headlong, and was entitled "This man didn't."

Here Weston secured a room. Though he came on foot he was of course genteel looking, and the landlady ushered him into the very best room in the house. It was handsomely furnished for the parlor of the hotel and had a bed in it, and only drummers and other star "transients" were put in there. Whenever there were ladies this was their reception room, and as that very evening the daughter of the house had company, and Weston very good naturedly waited until the witching hour of midnight, when the young man got as far as the front porch.

Having been duly installed, he had hardly washed his hands when he heard the ubiquitous bell of the hostelry of this region. He looked at his watch in surprise. It was eleven o'clock. He was hungry, having had breakfast early and a ten-mile walk, and he went into the hall. Seeing an old colored man, the porter, he asked him the way to the dining-room. The old man led him there. Seeing the table set, it was eternally set, but Weston did not know it, he attempted to take a seat, but the porter said.

"No, boss, de dinner aint ready. Not by er jugful. We better git out 'fore Mis Aggy come and ketches us yere! No, sah, dat bell's de ting what hab mistook you. Dat's jest de fust ringin' of de fust-test bell. Dat's meant fer de men plantin' co'n in de Little Medder. We gives dem de time er day with dat; and when dey yere's dat tin-nabum dey knows dey kin soon git ready to pull fer de shoah!"

"But how will the next bell be the one for dinner?" asked the guest.

"La no, boss, don't let de nex' one mistikly you. Dats de second ringin ob the fustest bell, and de han's wants ter be spry about wateriu' deir hoss flesh, cause Mis Aggy natcherly do raise cain when de men folks aint ready to eat when de dinnah is ready."

Weston went back to his room and waited a half hour, and heard the big bell go for the second time. He did not stir, and presently he heard a small hand bell ring vigorously. He started for the dining-room, but was stopped by his old colored friend.

"'Scuse me, boss, 'scuse me! but dat's de fust ringin' ob de second bell! De nex' time you heahs de bell, you comes."

In about ten minutes the "fustest" bell rang short and sharp. Weston hurried out and met the porter in the hall.

"Go back, boss, dat's de porter's signual. Dat's to take Kunel Asbury's hoss to de stable." As he hurried away he heard the old darkey mutter: "Dat's de hongriest man I eber see in all my born days." And as he reached the horse block, "Howdy, kurnel, howdy. How's Mis' Asbury, how's Miss Allie?"

"Very well, Uncle Ike, how are you?" was the frank reply in a powerful voice from a hale, elderly gentleman, with white whiskers growing out of a rosy red face; the genuine Virginia Colonel, the finest race of men ever made.

Weston went back to his room and was reading when he heard the handbell jingle again. He concluded he would not go again, and after a while a middle-aged man in his shirt-sleeves unceremoniously opened the door and bade him very politely walk out to dinner. The second ringing of the second bell was the lucky number and Weston was now fully "on to the racket."

Dinner was half way through with all at the long table in the dining-room when he entered. The Colonel was engaged in acting at the head of the table while the dishes were passed around by two very pretty "brown girls." They called each one at the table as they passed the dish and gave each his or her title of esteem with the exception of Weston, and they abashed him by pressing dishes on him with "Will you have some bread?" giving the you such an emphasis that it made him uncomfortable. He seemed to be set apart.

The Colonel presently made such advances as to start a conversation with him, exhibiting that lovable curiosity, or rather interest in the young man which enables a traveler to find friends wherever he goes.

"Nice time for traveling," said the Colonel.

"Yes, very."

"Looks like we might have some falling weather."

"I hope not."

"Had a mighty backward spring this season."

"Seems to have been here. I am from East Virginia, and it seems to me that winter is harder to chase out of these mountains where he has so many places to hide."

"What did you say, sir?"

Weston colored a little. His venture had fallen on the stony ground of common sense. "I said that winter seemed to entrench himself in the mountains and defy his enemy the sun."

"Oh! What house do you travel for?"

"I'm not a drummer," Weston answered, not too well pleased. "I am here to spend a holiday."

"You come from Tuckahoe, eh?"

"Richmond is my home."

"Riding or driving?"

"Neither, I am walking."

The Colonel froze in a moment. He rose from the table with an air that might have been unconcerned if it was not so studiously distant. The Colonel never saw anything to cultivate in the man who walked. He belonged to the class that would walk two miles to get a horse out of the pasture that he might ride one mile. Other men might be particular about their clothes, but to him a good horse meant everything. And when he heard the young man walked into town it settled it, and he evinced no further curiosity. It was the only thing he had against his new friend, but without reasoning an unfavorable impression had been formed.

FROM Mr BLAKE.

The following personal letter we take the liberty to publish, to show how a certain controversy ends.

RONCEVERTE, February 26, 1898.

Dear Andrew: I have just read with alarm your editorial on "Ragged-Edged Bill," and your desperate threat of publishing "Stammering Bill." I hasten to avoid further complications, and be in time to head off next week's Times, to offer you Ten Thousand Dollars to suppress the said story. I have made enormous sums of money publishing the Messenger, and would stop at nothing to preserve the fragments of a once pretty fair reputation.

Please consider a moment.

I am raising a family, the members of which, were they suddenly confronted with this damaging evidence of youthful indiscretion, might rise in just wrath and cut my hair, force on me a clean collar, and perhaps reduce me to a complete state of modern civilization. Sir, I beg of you, don't publish it.

I am even willing to acknowledge I stole "Stammering Bill." Who "Stammering Bill" is I have n't the faintest idea, but I commit so many crimes in my youth that I dare not deny it. Besides, you claim to have the proof. I now experience the truth of Scripture "Be sure your sins will find you out." Take Ragged Bill's advice and never attempt original writing, lest it return to trouble you. Of course this applies only to the future, you being innocent as yet, to the best of my knowledge.

Present my sincerest regards to your father, and tell him that I repeat my bold declaration that he is a better writer than his son.

Yours truly,
WILLIAM R. BLAKE.

BIOGRAPHIC NOTES.

By W. T. P.

THIS paper is composed of fragmentary notices of one of the early settlers of the Glade Hill neighborhood. Benjamin Arbogast, Sen., the progenitor of a well known branch of the Arbogast relationship, settled early in the century near Glade Hill on the lands now in possession of Cornelius Bussard, Clark Dilley and others. In his home were five sons and three daughters: Henry, Solomon, John, Adam, Benjamin, Carlotta, Sally and Delilah.

Carlotta became Mrs Johnathan Potts and lived in Upshur county.

Sally became the second wife of Ralph Wanless, near Mt Tabor.

Delilah was first married to Joseph Wooddell near Green Bank. Her second marriage was with Frederick Pugh, of same vicinity.

In reference to the sons, we have the following particulars gathered from a variety of sources:

Henry Arbogast married Anna Warwick, on Deer Creek, and settled on a part of the homestead. Their sons Warwick and Newton died while young. Jamieson married Sarah Grimes, of David, and settled on Elk.

Marshall Arbogast married Rachel Nottingham, of Harvey, and lives in Randolph County.

Sally Arbogast became Mrs George Arbogast and lives near Glade Hill.

Margaret was married to Martin Clark Dilley, of John, and lives on part of the homestead.

Minta became Mrs Budd Stalnaker and lives in Randolph county.

Henry Arbogast was a person of high natural endowments, and was widely known in our county, and greatly respected for his good qualities in all the relations of life. He was a local preacher in the pale of the M. E. Church, and "cried aloud and spared" not when denouncing the vices and fashionable foibles of his times. The writer once heard him preach a sermon from the text, "Pray without ceasing." The sermon was largely taken up in a description of the Magic Carpet, we read about in the Arabian Nights entertainment and then used it as an illustration, showing that the prayerful soul has in prayer something far more to the purpose than the Magic Carpet ever was or could be. He was an enthusiast in his religious views. To him Methodism was the chief of all the prevaling 'isms,' the one 'ism' that was "altogether lovely" in his opinion, and he made no secret of it. During the war between the States, he was a sincere, decided but harmless sympathizer with the Union cause. When last seen alive he and his neighbor Eli Bussard were in charge of a squad of persons claiming to be Confederate scouts. A few days afterwards, these two civilians were found dead near the roadside, about halfway from their homes towards Frost. From the attitude in which his dead body was found, it is inferred that he died in the act of prayer, heeding the text referred to above.

Solomon Arbogast married Nancy Nottingham, and lived on part of the homestead. In reference to his family these particulars are noted: Allen first married a Miss Curry. His second marriage was with a Miss Gillespie.

George married Miss Sallie Arbogast.

Charles was a Union soldier and died in the war.

Lizzie was married to Gilmer Sharp and lives near Frost.

Mary married William Cooper, near Green Bank.

Rachel became Mrs Samuel Sutton and lives beyond Green Bank.

Caroline first married the late James Rucker. Her second marriage was to Michael Swades, and lived near Mill Point.

John Arbogast, of Benjamin, Sr., married Margaret Yeager and lived near Glade Hill. He was killed by a falling tree, leaving a widow and three sons.

Adam Arbogast married Clara

They were the parents of five sons and three daughters John, Brown, Christopher, Benjamin, Reed, Dorinda, now Mrs David Sheets; Eliza became Mrs James Sutton, and Emma now Mrs J. Trace, all three near Green Bank. When a little girl Mrs Clarissa Arbogast had her arm crushed in cider mill. She was given up to die by the physician sent for from an adjoining county. The late Captain John McElwee, ancestor of the McElwee relationship in our county, had the nerve to take his joint saw and razor and amputate the arm above the mortified part. The patient recovered and lived to rear the five sons and three daughters just named. What Mrs Arbogast could not do in housekeeping with her good left arm was not worth doing. She died quite recently.

Benjamin Arbogast, Jr., of Benjamin, Sr., married Miss Gibbon, a sister of the gallant Col S. P. Gibbons, 10th Virginia Infantry who died 6th of May, 1862, on the McDowell battle field; shot through the head the moment he reached the line of fire, leading his men into action. Benjamin Arbogast, Jr., was one of the most remarkable persons that ever lived in our county. Upon attaining his majority he was appointed constable and his magnified his office and worked for all it was worth. He frequented the courts and seemed to have been infatuated with the lawyers of loose habits and alcoholic propensities and proficient in the history of the four kings. He aspired to the distinction of beating them at their own game, for he seemed to be what a gentleman should be. He soon acquired the coveted distinction of being the fastest young man in the county.

When about twenty-five years of age he came under the influence of Charles See, who taught in the family of Col Paul McNeel, of Glade Hill, and there was kindled in our young friend's mind an irresistable desire for a college education. He learned the rudiments of Latin and algebra from Mr See, went a session or two at Hillsboro then away to Dickinson College, Pennsylvania, and was graduated among the best in his class. In the meantime he had professed piety, entered the ministry and became a noted pulpit orator and one of the most distinguished teachers of the High Schools under the auspices of the M. E. Church South.

He died a few years since at Winchester, leaving a reputation long to be remembered by his many acquaintances. Last summer, one of his surviving children, an accomplished daughter, visited Marlinton.

The writer tenderly cherishes the memory of this remarkable Pocahontas man, for he often associated together for a time and was both good natured together. We last met in Winchester, in October, 1874. He invited me to Normal Winters, but as I did not go

ANDREW PRICE - - - EDITOR.

Marlinton, Friday, Mar. 11, 1898.

THE incident of the blowing up of the Maine will have the effect of causing the Administration to act in putting an end to the war in Cuba.

THE Mutual Telephone Company has been organized at Ronceverte to construct a telephone line from Marlinton to Union, Monroe County.

W. S. THOMSON, an attorney of the Greenbrier County bar, has come out as a candidate for State Senator from this district. What has become of the Democratic candidates?

THE annexation of either Cuba or Hawaii would be unwise. In a short time they would rebel against us as they did against their former rulers, and we would have the same trouble with them.

CONGRESSMAN DORR'S idea of making a government preserve of the forests around the headwaters of the rivers is very good. But as a matter of fact could not the trees fit for lumber be marketed and in their place come a more dense growth of underbrush that would answer the same purpose as a weather breeder?

THE Board of Trade of Ronceverte should get to work to make that town the junction of the Greenbrier Railroad. They might secure the right of way for a few miles above the C. & O. The question is whether the company will build a bridge over the Greenbrier at Caldwell and make the junction there, or run to the point a mile or two below Caldwell where the C. & O. crosses the river. In case the latter would be decided upon, the trains would have to run into Ronceverte, as there is no room for yards or depot at the railroad bridge.

THE executive committee of Pocahontas County will be called to meet on the first day of April Court to formulate a plan for the nomination of county officers and to call a convention to appoint delegates to Congressional and Senatorial conventions, and for any other business to be attended to. The most important question that will come up before the committee at its next meeting will be whether we will nominate our county officers by primary or by convention. We have never held a convention in this county but what gave rise to feelings of dissatisfaction among a large portion of the citizens, and conventions have threatened to disrupt the party. Also we poor devils at the county seat have been blamed with all the alleged chicanery. But we have never held a primary in the offyear. So if we order a primary this year it will entail a big lot of work to nominate men for County Court, Legislature, Superintendent of Schools, and Member of the Board of Education. If the commissioners of election will serve without pay, a primary would be practicable. The writer is in favor of a primary, for reasons stated in the body of this article. Candidates and others should give this subject their attention.

WAR CLOUDS.

We are all taking stock in our courage departments at the present time, for this is more like war than any of us of the younger generation have known. As a rule there are very few who seem to be ready to fight, and enthusiasm has not reached the height where a company might be formed in dead earnest. We are inclined to take kindly to the policy of the actor in "The Lively Nerve Nobleber," who declared that the reason the United States were not fighting Spain was that we were waiting for Spain to make a negotiation.

An old Confederate soldier was speaking of the war fever at the breaking out of the last war. A company had been formed at Huntersville with D. A. Shanks captain, and after the secession of the State, the company, clad in uniforms and marching to the inspiring music of fife and drum, moved at Green Bank for the purpose of forming a company there. The favorite speaker was Captain Shanks, who dilated on the advantages of the volunteer service over those who were drafted or conscripted into companies.

"The volunteer," he said, "when he falls in battle is buried with the honors of war, while the militiaman is left lying where he falls. Now, fellow citizens, which will you have? Will you volunteer and be afforded a decent burial, or will you wait to be drafted, and allow the crows to pick your bones?"

"Don't want to do either," came from back in the crowd.

A company was formed that day. The narrator was going to school at Green Bank, and his teacher, an ex-Confederate, had enlisted, and the school was to be broken up. He was just on the point of giving in his name when he felt a hand on his shoulder, and turned to see the man who had served through the Mexican war. The veteran told him not to take the step while he was under the influence of the excitement and high pressure of the occasion, but to sleep on it. He then gave such a graphic description of the drawbacks of camp life that he did not enlist for half a year.

A company of a hundred men was organized that day, Maj. J. C. Arbogast was elected captain. The East Virginia school-teacher was made the proudest man in the United States by his election as first lieutenant. He was to go to Richmond for uniforms and arms. When he got back to his company, having made all arrangements necessary, and wearing a new uniform, he found that the company had held another election when they were mustered in and had dropped him from the roster of officers. The disappointment killed him. He seemed to decline from that day and in a few months was dead.

The history of the late war goes to show that, with hardly an exception, those citizens who were most active in bringing on hostilities, and most prone to declare their willingness to shed the last drop of their blood, were the ones that could never by any stratagem be made to fight. They agitated the country, but they smelled th battle from afar and were conspicuous by their absence. Their zeal cooled as quickly as it had burned, and the best soldiers were those who went into the dissension with reluctance.

THE LOUD POSTAL BILL.

For several months the country editor has been receiving circulars asking him to petition his Congressman to vote against the Loud Bill, as it struck a blow at some of his postal privileges. A careful perusal of the bill impressed us with the fact that it would only cripple such country papers as the Greenbrier Valley Democrat which has sent as high as three sample copies a week to one man, or the West Virginia News which has so many readers and so few subscribers. Consequently we lost no sleep on that account.

However, Hon Champ Clark, of Missouri, takes the opportunity of paying a high tribute to the country editor in his argument against it in the House.

The bill was defeated by a vote of 161 to 119.

"The rural editor—God bless him—is the most persistent of teachers. Like charity, as described by St Paul in the thirteenth chapter of First Corinthians, he 'suffereth long and is kind; he envieth not himself, is not puffed up; doth not behave himself unseemly; seeketh not his own; is not easily provoked; thinketh no evil; rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth in truth; beareth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things.'

"He is the pathfinder of every community, the promoter of every laudable enterprise, the worst underpaid laborer in the vineyard. Counting his space as his capital, he gives more to charity, his means considered, than any other member of society. He is a power in politics, a pillar of the church, a leader in the crusade for better morals. He is pre-eminently the friend of humanity. Line upon line, paragraph upon paragraph, day by day, he is endeavoring to cold type the facts from which the Revolution, Tariff, Bimetal, or Monroing of the future will write the history of our times. He daily chronicles our advent into the world, briefly notes our sportings and our downfallings, and notices fully our exit.

"We are all more or less generally more or less broad-cast, and the country should not be ungrateful of it's editor. Without his presence and encouragement where most of us would never have been heard from, when in time of war, most of us will come to grief, he will come to relieve the widow and fatherless and stick closer than a brother."

Sport.

The Shooting Match.

The shooting match at this place last Saturday brought out a good attendance of the representative shots of the county. Elk, The Hills, Beaver Creek, The Levels, Edray, Clover Creek, and Marlinton furnished sportsmen. Jasper Dilley, who has won enough matches to retire, was there with a 45-90 Winchester, which woke the echoes in the hills, but while he shot uniformly well and could have measured string measure with any of them, failed to win a prize. The same is true of Henry Sharp, a famous shot from Elk. Fifteen riflemen formed the match. They were Jasper Dilley, W. L. Hogsett, Robert Dilley, Andrew Price, C. H. Dilley, B. J. Barnes, Norman Price, Albert Hannah, Lee Simms, Ben Johnson, Grant Johnson, Henry Sharp, U. S. Johnson, Ellis Baxter, Ed. Malcomb.

4th Match String measure, three shots;
A year's subscription to the Pocahontas Times:
C. H. DILLEY, Frankford.

The Judges were John Rorke and Renick Hogsett.

Some men would shoot quickly, while others would lie and sight for several minutes. Those who sighted a medium length of time shot best.

Honors were about evenly divided between the mountain rifle and the Winchester. Hogsett, U. S. Johnson, and Simms used mountain rifles and Dilley and Grant Johnson, Winchesters.

The last match Lee Simms did not have the price. He had shot the other matches and tried to get a check cashed. He had fifteen cents and needed a quarter. Hiram Barnes had 10 cents. They clubbed for three shots and succeeded in winning the third prize.

The distance was sixty yards—too far to see a bullet hole in the paper target. The shooting was done from a "belly rest"; a lot of pine boughs were thrown down and the marksman lay at full length with his gun resting on a framework. A friend would shade the sights of the rifle.

The Pocahontas Times prize, which was to be for the best shot of the day, at the request of the men was made a special match, and while not nearly so valuable as the others was regarded as the most honorable of the day. Three shots were measured on a string and the shortest string won it, showing the best average shot.

Frost, 2; Green Hill, 0.

An interesting game of football was played at G. B. Ryder's, on Back Creek, February 26, at 1 P. M., between the above teams. The captains tossed for ends, Frost won and chose to defend the west goal. Frost being short two men substituted with boys 14 years old, and then lined up for play.

Time was called and the ball was put in play by R. Wade, and being hotly played in Green Hill territory for about ten minutes, when W. Shinaberry scored a goal for Frost. The ball being put in play a second time by R. Wade, was soon carried back in Green Hill territory and some splendid playing done by both sides, when A. Sharp drove the ball into the hands of the goal keeper who dropped it, and was kicked through by C. C. Sharp. In the last half the ball was put in play by C. C. Sharp. The play was quick and fast, and no points were scored.

The Frost boys say it was the finest game they ever played, and thank the Green Hill team for courtesies received; and especially G. B. Ryder for his kindness and hospitality toward the Frost boys.

GREEN HILL — Henry Hiner, (goal); Bill Bird, Hiram Wood, (full backs); Klint Hiner, Joe Chestnut, Jim Chestnut, (half backs); Captain Hite Wade, Jim Wade, Bob Wiley, Otho Wade, Ed. Wood, (forwards.)

Will Hiner, J. Lute Bird, linesmen; T. M. Gum, Umpire.

THE Cheyenne (Wyo.) Tennis Association was organized lately, and the name of Julia D. Teague, formerly of Marlinton, appears as vice president and member of executive committee. It need be scarcely said that Miss Teague is a general favorite in the social circles of the city. The club was all enough and a half to secure her last year.

Commissioner's Sale OF VALUABLE LAND,

On Knapp's Creek in Pocahontas County.

Pursuant to a decree of the Circuit Court of Pocahontas County, pronounced at the October Term, 1897, in the chancery cause of Nora Susan Herold and others against Wise Herold and others, the undersigned, as special commissioners appointed for the purpose, will proceed on Tuesday, the 5th day of April, 1898, to sell by public auction, in front of the court-house of said county, to the highest bidder, the valuable farm on which Washington Herold lately resided, (now occupied by Wise Herold), lying on Knapp's Creek, near Frost, in said county, and consisting of five different tracts containing 59, 195, 303, 160, and 25 acres respectively.

This farm has on it an excellent residence, barn, and out houses and is desirable for farming or grazing, and as a home.

The sale will be made subject to the rights of the St. Lawrence Boom and Mf'g. Co. in the timber on 203 and 75 acres of said land, if by so doing sufficient money can be realized to satisfy the decree in favor of the plaintiff, and upon the following

Terms: Ten per cent. of the gross amount of the purchase money cash on day of sale, and the residue of the purchase money upon a credit of one, two, and three years in equal installments from the day of sale, the purchaser executing bonds bearing interest from that day, with good personal security, and the title to be retained as ultimate security.

CHARLES P. JONES,
JOHN W. HARRIS,
Commissioners.

I, J. H. Patterson, Clerk of the Circuit Court of Pocahontas County, do certify that Charles P. Jones, Commissioner, has given the bond and security required in the above mentioned decree.

Will you volunteer and be afforded a decent burial, or will you wait to be drafted, and allow the crows to pick your bones?"

"Don't want to do either," came from back in the crowd.

A company was formed that day. He ...then gave such a graphic descript... ...on of the drawbacks of camp life that he did not enlist for half a year.

A company of a hundred men was organized that day, Maj. J. C. Arbogast was elected captain. The East Virginia school-teacher was made the proudest man in the dis... ...nited states by his election as first lieutenant. He was to go to Richmond for uniforms and arms. When he got back to his company, having made all arrangements necessary, and wearing a new uniform, he found that the company had held another election when they were mustered in and had dropped him from the roster of officers. The disappointment killed him. He seemed to decline from that day and in a few months was dead.

The history of the late war goes to show that, with hardly an exception, those citizens who were most active in bringing on hostilities, and most prone to declare their willingness to shed the last drop of their blood, were the ones that could never by any strategem be made to fight. They agitated the country, but they smelled th battle from afar and were conspicuous by their absence. Their zeal cooled as quickly as it had burned, and the best soldiers were those who went into the dissension with reluctance.

THE LOUD POSTAL BILL.

For several months the country editor has been receiving circulars asking him to petition his Congressman to vote against the Loud Bill, as it struck a blow at some of his postal privileges. A careful perusal of the bill impressed us with the fact that it would only cripple such country papers as the Greenbrier Valley Democrat which has sent as high as three sample copies a week to one man, or the West Virginia News which has so many readers and so few subscribers. Consequently we lost no sleep on that account.

However, Hon Champ Clark, of Missouri, takes the opportunity of paying a high tribute to the country editor in his argument against it in the House.

The bill was defeated by a vote of 161 to 119.

"The rural editor—God bless him—is the most persistent of teachers. Like charity, as described by St Paul in the thirteenth chapter of First Corinthians, he 'suffereth long and is kind, he envieth not himself, is not puffed up; doth not behave himself unseemly, seeketh not his own, is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil; rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth in truth, beareth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things.'

"He is the purchaser of every community, the promoter of every laudable enterprise, the worst underpaid laborer in the vineyard. Contributing his space at his capital, he gives more in charity, his means considered, than any other member of society. He is a power in politics, a pillar of the church, a leader in the crusade for better morals. He is pre-eminently the friend of humanity. Line upon line, paragraph upon paragraph, day by day, he is embalming in cold type the facts from which the Herodotus, Tacitus, Macaulay or Momsley of the future will write the history of our times. He fully chronicles our advent into the world, briefly notes our marriage and our deaths, and writes fully records our end.

"We are all more or less generous more or less benevolent, and the country editor should not be suspected of it's contrary. Without his generous and enthusiastic labors most of us would never have been heard of beyond the limits of our own circle, and when we pretend to be proud of our literary fame we forget that we owe our first glimpse of the fairy land of letters to the country editor's generous and friendly praise."

Sport.

The Shooting Match.

The shooting match at this place last Saturday brought out a good attendance of the representative shots of the county. Elk, The Hills, Beaver Creek, The Levels, Edray, Clover Creek, and Marlinton furnished sportsmen. Jasper Dilley, who has won enough matches to retire, was there with a 45-90 Winchester which woke the echoes in the hills, but while he shot uniformly well and could have measured string measure with any of them, failed to win a prize. The same is true of Henry Sharp, a famous shot from Elk. Fifteen riflemen formed the match. They were Jasper Dilley, W. L. Hogsett, Robert Dilley, Andrew Price, C. B. Dilley, B. J. Barnes, Norman Price, Albert Hannah, Lee Simms, Ben Johnson, Grant Johnson, Henry Sharp, U. S. Johnson, Ellis Baxter, Ed. Malcomb.

1st Match—two shots. Shot off with one shot each; resulted in 1st Prize—W. L. Hogsett, Mill Point.
2d Prize—U. S. Johnson, Edray.

2d Match. Closest shot:
1st Prize, C. B. Dilley, Frankford.
2d Prize, Grant Johnson, Marlinton
3d Prize, W. L. Hogsett, Mil Point

3d Match. Closest shot:
1st Prize, W. L. Hogsett, Mill Point
2d Prize, C. B. Dilley, Frankford.
3d Prize, Lee Simms, Beaver Creek

4th Match String measure, three shots; A year's subscription to the Pocahontas Times:
C. B. DILLEY, Frankford.

The Judges were John Rorke and Renick Hogsett.

Some men would shoot quickly, while others would lie and sight for several minutes. Those who sighted a medium length of time shot best.

Honors were about evenly divided between the mountain rifle and the Winchester. Hogsett, U. S. Johnson, and Simms used mountain rifles and Dilley and Grant Johnson, Winchesters.

The last match Lee Simms did not have the price. He had shot the other matches and tried to get a check cashed. He had fifteen cents and needed a quarter. Hiram Barnes had 10 cents. They clubbed for three shots and succeeded in winning the third prize.

The distance was sixty yards—too far to see a bullet hole in the paper target. The shooting was done from a "belly rest"; a lot of pine boughs were thrown down and the marksman lay at full length with his gun resting on a framework. A friend would shade the sights of the rifle.

The Pocahontas Times prize, which was to be for the best shot of the day, at the request of the men was made a special match, and while not nearly so valuable as the others was regarded as the most honorable of the day. Three shots were measured on a string and the shortest string won it, showing the best average shot.

Frost, 2; Green Hill, 0.

An interesting game of football was played at th. B. Ryder's, on Back Creek, February 25, at 1 P. M., between the above teams. The captains tossed for ends, Frost won and chose to defend the west goal. Frost being short two men substituted with boys 14 years old, and then lined up for play.

The play was quick and fast, and no points were scored.

The Frost boys say it was the finest game they ever played, and thank the Green Hill team for courtesies received; and especially G. B. Ryder for his kindness and hospitality toward the Frost boys.

GREEN HILL.—Henry Hiner, (goal); Bill Bird, Hiram Wood, (half backs); Eliel Hiner, Joe Chestnut, Jim Chestnut, (half backs); Captain Bob Wade, Jim Wade, Bob Wiley, Otho Wade, Ed Wood, (forwards.)

A Pointer.

Always if you want to buy cheap go to the man who is compelled to sell. "Come one, come all!" I will give you better bargains than ever before for cash and good trade.

All persons knowing themselves indebted to me, please call and settle. My rule is "Cash or good trade," but by special arrangement I have a few accounts out. On these I can give but short notice.

YOURS FOR BUSINESS.

S. J. Boggs.

The hardest way possible to get along is to buy real cheap things. As a rule the less you pay, the more it costs in the long run. I do not boast too much of cheap prices, and still, quality considered, I sell at prices that ought to interest careful buyers.

VERY PRACTICABLE ROUTE.

Railroad could be Built on a Uniform Grade of Eight Feet to the Mile.

The result of the inspection of the Greenbrier River route was most satisfactory to those wishing to see a railroad built along the valley of the Greenbrier. As was reported in this paper last week, Captain Bartholemew and Mr Hays, two experienced engineers, and B. M. Yeager and Captain Smith of this place had a boat built and spent four days on the river. The result of the examination was that the distance was about from fifty to fifty-four miles and that a uniform grade of seven or eight feet to the mile could be had. The character of the hillside on which the road would be built was most satisfactory. The roadbed could be easily made into it, and the soil is such that there will be no danger of slips, which is a question of great importance in building a road on sidling ground.

The party spent one day on Spice Run. A railroad could be built up that run from the Greenbrier River side, but the land rises too suddenly from the waters of Anthony's Creek, and that route is now out of the question.

It will make it clear to the minds of many to state that a railroad could be built as cheaply from Marlinton to Ronceverte, per mile, as from Marlinton to Traveler's Repose.

Comparing the cost of the route from Ronceverte to Marlinton, and from White Sulphur by way of Driscol to Marlinton, the first route would be the longer by several miles. The cost of building would be less, owing to heavy grades, tunnels, bridges, and fills. But if the cost of construction was the same per mile on both routes, the saving in the cost of maintaining the road on the longer route would in a very few years pay for the additional expenditure. By this we mean the river route would be free from heavy grades. That the whole distance would be on a uniform grade of not exceeding 15 feet to the mile, and the hauling would of course be cheaper than upon a road where there are many up grades, in either direction, anywhere from fifty to eighty feet to the mile.

A railroad built along the west bank of the river which faces the morning sun, and where we see the first bare ground after a snowfall, would, it is said, have less filling and trestling to do than any road that has ever been built in these mountains. Almost the entire roadbed would be taken from a hill side, and a wheel-barrow would not have to make a trip of more than ten feet to get rid of all the dirt of the excavation. We venture to say that there is more timber on this sunny eastern exposure along which the railroad would run than would be in sight of a road built over the backbones of Alleghany spurs.

All the traffic of both sides of the river would be accommodated. The result would be that from Marlinton down twenty times the amount of trade would come from the west side of the river than would come from the east, and yet the road would receive from the eastern side the same trade on either route. A road twenty-five miles long if built up the river from Ronceverte would be a paying property and would be operated. Ten thousand people live between Marlinton and Ronceverte, on a low estimate, in ten miles of the river on either side. At least nineteen out of twenty live on the west side of the river, and the proportion of the wealth and resources equally as great.

The hopes of our people for a railroad center in Colonel McGraw, who has already done more for our county than any man who ever lived. He is a member of the Greenbrier Valley Construction Company, which is to build the road. The universal feeling of the people here, without taking into account their own interests, is the wish that he will realize on his investments in this county. We hear that he is now personally interesting himself to build the road, and with his known qualities as a hustler we may look for some development soon.

In our temporary disappointment over the failure of the road to be under contract, it does us all good to see a certain gang working as hard for the White Sulphur, Driscol, and Marlinton route as they were working against it a short time ago. The estimated citizens of Pocahontas, familiar with this vast county, knows that there is but one real route for a railroad and that is up and down the river.

Obituary.

Little Maudie Bell, the infant daughter of Mr and Mrs Henry Fenger, died of bronchitis, March 2 1898, aged nineteen months and two days. Little Maudie has lost one of her playfellows. Her sympathizing companions, too young to understand that Heaven has one more angel, they feel their parents be grieved. May her fond parents be comforted in this their sad bereavement by the words of our Saviour Redeemer, who said: "Suffer the little children to come unto me and forbid them not for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven."

CORRESPONDENCE.

"Twigs" from Dry Branch.

Sugar making is the order of the day now and is being rapidly pushed by Granvil Brady.

Clark Sharp and J. D. Moore are doing a job of logging for Mr Bakers.

Joseph Miller is getting out telephone poles for a new line from S. H. Wood's to Dr Cameron's and James Hebden's.

It is quite amusing to see our friend Cameron Beal stepping over his knees, simply because it's a boy.

Crummett is getting in advance of the times to some extent. He has his plowing finished and is ready to plant.

Our good old friend George Beale is quite busy this winter. He has done a large job of clearing on the farm owned by T. M. Moore, and is now ready to plant wishes for warm weather.

We understand that Mr W. H. Brady is making preparation to go to the Klondike gold fields in the near future. He has already purchased his Alaska outfit and says that he proposes to see whether the Yukon River is 20 miles wide 700 miles from its mouth or not.

We are glad to note the improvement that is now being made in this part of the community. Dick Sarecker is erecting an electric light plant at Cove Spring on Dry Branch, near G. C. Beal's. This plant is to be manipulated by the energetic Eliot Ramsey and Charley Rhea.

Married, quite recently, Mr William A. Mace to Miss Anise Lindsay, both of this place. The happy couple went to Hebden Town, and were there gayly surprised to meet a serenading party consisting of two very conspicuous characters namely, Alex Sharp and Everet Moore. Alva blew the horn while Everet listened. CODY BILL.

(Dry Branch Times.)

Weather is fine and people are making some sugar.

Mrs George Brady is suffering with a broken leg.

Mack Wood still waives his whiskers and sells the World's Wonders liniment.

Eliot Ramsey has lots of business on the Branch. He must be "lertioneering for matrimony. Let the good work go on.

W. H. McCloud, of Mingo, flew to Academy and returned last week

CUT SHORT.

Lobelia.

Miss Lucy Hill is very sick now but there is hope of her recovery.

T. A. Bruffey has finished his school on Bruffey's Creek.

Mrs Jacob McCarty spent two weeks visiting relatives on Bruffey's Creek.

The weather has improved, and there is a prospect of a splendid sugar season.

Samuel Kellison has made four hundred pounds of maple sugar Can any one beat that?

Miss Margaret McCarty seems to inherit the talent of her great-grand father, John Bruffey, who was an artist of decided ability.

The Methodist Episcopal and the Missionary Baptist churches have been creating a revival of religious sentiment for some time. May the good work go on.

Mrs Elizabeth Hill has recovered from her recent illness. She was much cheered by a visit from her sister, Mrs Henry Boggs, of Frankford.

We regret to hear of the death of Miss Willard. AVIS.

Monterey, Virginia.

Editor of The Times.—Having failed to see any "Highland items" in your paper, it is regarded that a brief communication will not be out of order.

County Court convened in regular session last Thursday, with Judge Lyntan Chaddey in the chair. Very little business was done, all cases being continued until next term.

James A. Wagoner, who resides on upper Straight Creek, four miles northeast of town, had his residence burned on Saturday evening. The origin of the fire was from a defective flue. Loss $400; no insurance.

David Colaw, of Crabbottom, was arraigned yesterday before Justice Andrew Newman for illegally distributing cider. There were two cases against Colaw, and he was fined $50 in one and $25 in the other, including the costs, making a total of more than $100. Highhead has not yet arraigned her agitator selling cider of any sort or in any quantity. Colaw is a married man, has appealed to the county court.

The plans, drawings and specifications furnished by Mr W. H. Mc-Neil, of Franklin, West Virginia, have been accepted by the building committee of the M. E. Church South, of Monterey, and the advertisement calling for bids has been inserted in the Recorder. Bids are to be received by W. H. Mack, at said church on or before the 1st day of October. The building is to be modern in every detail. It will consist of an Auditorium, a Sunday school room and a vestibule, and will seat 400 people. The two rooms are to be separated by sliding doors, and handsomely frescoed. The approximate cost of the church complete will be about $2,500.

Green Bank.

The schools will all soon be out.

Cold nights and plenty of mud in daytime.

*Miss Bessie Dysard, of Drift*wood, is visiting her sister, Mrs R. L. Brown at Arborvale.

William Woodell has finished the tailor trade and is now learning to make maple sugar.

Conner Hudson, who received a stroke of paralysis two weeks ago is slowly recovering.

Rev Envey preached an excel*lent sermon at Green Bank Sun*day morning, and Rev Clatterbuck in the afternoon at Liberty.

Miss Bertie Beard closed a very successful term at Bruffey on the 18th. That is one of the largest schools in the county and has the best average attendance. There should be two teachers, there being 43 pupils.

Died, February 21st at 9 A. M., at the home of her son, Rev C. C. Arbogast, Mrs Clarissa Arbogast, aged 78 years. "Aunt Clarissa" as she was called by everyone, was a noble woman, and her loss will be felt by every one.

CAD.

W. B. King is teaching a splendid school. Mr King talks little, but we think his greatest attraction is in lower Marlinton.

Miss Rella Clark, who taught a fine school at the Kerr Schoolhouse, has gone home.

Miss Annie King will have an exhibition when her school closes.

Oak Grove has a splendid literary society in progress.

Rev Charles Fitzgerald is waking up the community in an evangelistic capacity.

BEN.

Buckeye.

Mrs Cathrine Kellison is very ill at this writing.

James Warwick closed his school last Saturday.

Fred Wade, of Academy, brought his girl home on a white mule.

We suppose that Colbert Duncan is not afraid to travel after night.

T. M. Auldridge is building a new barn.

Misses Lilah Kellison and Laura Overholt made a flying trip to Stamping Creek.

Dr F. T. McClintic has been around to see the sick.

Several of the boys are at home from the lumber camp.

Asbury Adkison was badly hurt by a limb falling on his head, while chopping down a tree. He is recovering now.

CAESAR.

Knapp's Creek.

Sugar making and debating societies are in full blast.

C. W. Rider is off to the railroad for a load of dry goods and postage stamps.

Rev. Clatterbuck will preach at Frost next Sunday.

Dr Chas Guinn is improving we are glad to say.

It is said J. F. Hively will have a sale the 24th of March.

Calvin May, of Anthonys Creek, is around trading horses.

*Milliard Herold is very well fix*ed, as he can go to mill and see his girl on the same trip.

Rev. B. L. Parrot preached his last sermon at Mt Vernon, Sunday, for this conference year.

Geo. Shrader spent last Sunday visiting friends near Frost. He is fond of flowers especially the lily.

Judging, from the last copy of your valuable paper, the Knapp's Creek correspondents are all dead, I will give you a few items.

We are reliably informed that J. A. Cleek's mule can kick the 'sods out of a biscuit and never crack the crust.'

Price Moore went to Green Bank last week to buy a set of harness. It seems as tho he thought they were manufactured by the County Court.

Sheriff R. W. Hill is in this part now and says he will stay until he gets a mess of maple sugar.

Peyton is anxious that the R. R. be built up the Creek to Green Bank so he can go to see his Nancy every Sunday.

John Shrader, Jr., has moved to the Top of Alleghany.

Peyton Moore took the saddlepockets and went to Highland, last week, to buy a steam sawmill, but when he got there and took off the gold-rimed glasses and looked around a little, he found out that he could not carry the mill on horse back, he let her set.

Every body is talking of going to war. MCDOOGAL.

Huntersville.

Amos Barlow is on the sick list at this time.

E. H. Moore, of Academy, was in town last week with a fine line of notions and millinary goods.

William Curry bought twenty head of yearling cattle from the May Brothers, Anthoney's Creek.

Attorney H. M. Lockridge was on Knapp's Creek, last Saturday, on professional business.

Messrs Davidoit and Kenedy, representing drug firms, of Bristol, *Tenn., were guests at the Hunters*ville Hotel over Sunday.

Sheriff R. W. Hill was in this neighborhood, last week, collecting taxes and summoning jurors for the April term of Circuit Court.

J. W. Baxter, general manager of the firm of Taylor & McElwee, Academy, spent a day or two with us last week. Willis is a good fellow and we are always glad to have him with us.

George Johnson, D. L. Anderson and A. N. Thomas started from this town last Thursday, to go to the Hot Springs to trade horses. When they got there the last two concluded to put up at the Warm Springs for a season, and sent the horses back by Johnson.

Squire Grose was seen on the streets of our town very early Monday morning, his face beaming with a broad smile, grasping the hands of his friends with a hearty shake. These circumstances led some to belive that he was electioneering for some political office. It soon found out, however, that this was not the case, but that he was trying to collect the salary of Rev Mr Parrot. Bill knows how to get there when some one else has to pay the bill. ALFRED.

Good Health

is a bottle of the greatest of all blood purifiers—

Johnston's Sarsaparilla

QUART BOTTLES.

This great blood purifier and nerve tonic, cures diseases by removing from the system, the conditions which produce them. It expels all poison and impurity from the blood. It acts upon the nerves as a stimulant, particularly upon those nerves belonging to the great organs of the body; therefore, it causes the heart to beat with greater force, the lungs to take in more oxygen and to expel more carbonic acid; it induces the kidneys to send off more of the poisonous excretions from the blood; the bowels to have more regularity and healthfulness in their action; the sweat glands to throw out more impurities.

Our illustrated book of 96 pages will tell you what is the matter and what to do. Be first for the asking. Quart bottle, $1.00.

HOW TO FIND OUT.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; it it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What to Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root, the great kidney remedy fulfills every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold urin and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following the use liquor, beer, or wine, and over comes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists, price fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet both sent free by mail, upon receipt of three two-cent stamps to cover cost of postage on the bottle. Mention The Times and send your address to Dr Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The proprietors guarantee the genuineness of this offer.

New York News Letter.

THE weather in this city and vicinity has been very rainy.

The excitement about the blowing up of the Maine in Havana harbor has not subsided.

The newspapers—noticably the Journal and World—are rushing extras on the street every hour. The supply is soon exhausted.

New York City looks like war times. The bulletins are besieged. People push and shove their way nearer to the bulletin boards, and very unpleasant remarks are heard. The general belief is that treachery was done.

After the explosion, "Bill" Anthony—the marine orderly—saluted Captain Sigsbee: "Sir, I have to inform you that the ship has been blown up and she is sinking." This brave man stood at his post, amid flames, and calmly did his duty. What a hero he is! At any moment another explosion might have occurred or he might have sunk with the ship. Did he try to save his life? No. He attended to his duty, and did not leave the ill-fated ship until he received his orders from his superior. The Captain was hit by flying missels on the head, but was not otherer wise injured.

Latest reports this morning (Feb. 21) state that an examination was made on Sunday and the magazines were found intact. Now the question is: Was the explosion the result of a deep laid plan on the part of the Spaniards, either by a mine or a torpedo, or did the Cubans send out a torpedo to blow up the Spanish ship, Alfonso XII, which hit our ship by mistake, or did the Weylerites do it?

A searching investigation is being made. If it is proven that the Spanish Government did this thing—then there will be a deadly warm time and war will be declured and Cuba will be free.

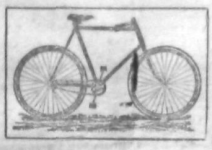
Two hundred and forty-eight brave sailor men were killed! If it had occurred in battle, there would have been the satisfaction of giving the enemy a stiff fight, but occurring as it did, 9.45 P. M., and every man asleep in his bunk or hammock, the thing is terrible. And our good ship Maine in a friendly harbor, where every protection should have been afforded!

The Spanish ship Vizcaya arrived in this harbor Saturday evening. Every protection was given it. Police boats surround it, and Government tugs are guarding it from possible danger. This is the way a decent, up-to-date Government does.

By the way, this Spanish man-of-war is a beauty. It is equal to any of our modern ships. The officers and crew express great sorrow over the terrible destruction of our own boat, and say: "No Spaniard would stoop to do such a dastardly act."

The dog show is now on at Madison Garden. Over 1500 high bred dogs are on exhibition. Prizes, blue ribbons, etc., are offered for the best exhibits.

Ted Sloane, the famous American jockey, was out ridden at Oakland, California, last week, by an unknown colored jockey on a 30 to 1 shot.



Sombre, the actor, died in a sanitarium at White Plains, New York last week, from paresis. He had been sick for six years. He was the author of the world-famed song, "Pork-a-boo, I see you." He composed over 1000 songs and made a fortune, but spent it as he went along. As was was his custom, he gave his wife a princely allowance each month. She saved the money and spent the greater part in caring for her husband. She did not miss a day in not seeing him while he was sick, and did all she could to relieve him. This man was 45 years old, but of his locks turned and acted like an old white haired, infirm and lame little boy. Many a time I have listened to his sweet voice and watched his actions. He played in Little Jakey, and was at the top of his profession. May his soul rest in peace. Geo. H. Sanford.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

Whereas, It has pleased God, in His power and wisdom, to remove from our midst our beloved brother, C. Harvey Maupin, and,

Whereas, The lamented deceased was an active and efficient member of the Epworth League, and its respected and beloved President, as well as a Christian whose influence was sensibly felt in the community in which he resided:

Be it therefore Resolved, That the Epworth League of Marlinton, West Virginia, deeply deplores its misfortune in losing one of its most active members and its beloved leader.

Be it further Resolved, That this most unfortunate event has removed from the community one of the brightest and most consistent representatives of Christianity therein.

Be it further Resolved, That the Epworth League of Marlinton, W. Virginia, extends its warmest sympathy to the bereaved family of our beloved brother, whose heads are bowed down in grief on account of the tragic and untimely calling away of the husband and father from that home.

Be it further Resolved, That copies of these resolutions be sent to The Baltimore Christian Advocate, The Pocahontas Times, the Secretary of the Epworth League of Marlinton, and to the widow of the deceased.

MOLLIE MAY SMITH,
LILLIE M. FRIEL,
S. B. SCOTT, JR.,
Committee.

Message of Condolance.

Marvin Chapel Epworth League, M. E. Church South, sends condolence to her sister league at Marlinton. Words cannot express the deep sympathy we feel for you at this time in the great loss you have sustained in the death of your worthy and highly appreciated President. May the kind Father, who is too wise to err and too infinitely good to do wrong, be your stay and solace in this your sad hour; and we commend the relatives of the deceased to the care of Almighty God.

F. C. MOORE, President.
LEE V. RUCKMAN, Secretary.

OBITUARY.

Mrs Dorilla Clendennin Burner.

Beloved wife of James S. Burner, (of Travelers Repose), departed this life Friday morning, February 18, 1898, after a brief illness of eight days, aged 25 years.

She was the second daughter of Mr and Mrs John W. Cutlip, of Craigsville, Nicholas County. Her father, two sisters, two brother, her husband and infant son survive her. Dorilla was converted in the M. E. Church South at the tender age of 13 years, and has always proved herself a worthy, faithful, and devoted christian, and was ready at all times to bear her part in all her christian duties. In Sunday school she was ready for every good work, and, being of a cheerful disposition, her influence was felt wherever she chanced to be.

She often repeated, "It is all right whether I live or die." She bid her husband good bye in these words: "I am going straight on to Heaven." Her death coming so unexpectedly was a great shock to the entire community and a grievous affliction to her husband, (to whom she had been devoted for the period of fifteen months), and many friends; but we do not mourn as those without hope, for we know she sleeps in Jesus.

Asleep in Jesus! Blessed sleep,
From which none ever wakes to weep,
A calm and undisturbed repose,
Unbroken by the last of foes.

* * * * * * *

Asleep in Jesus! Peaceful rest,
Whose waking is a supreme blest;
No fear, no woe, shall dim that hour
That manifests the Savior a power.

A FRIEND.

In Loving Remembrance.

On the morning of February 11, death entered the home of Mr and Mrs Willie Shrader and took from their fond embrace their infant son, aged 2 months and 27 days. His death sickness (croup and pneumonia) was short, yet his sufferings were intense. All that loving hands and medicak skill could do, was of no avail. While the parents mourn their loss, they are troubled their loss is his eternal gain, for a loving Savior said, "Let the little ones come unto me."

The mortal remains were laid to rest in the family graveyard at Mr Abram Sharp's, in the presence of a number of sympathizing friends. While his little grave was being filled with earth, Mr Shrader's little boy, called Kip Tingler, said: "I am glad I am pleased. It would be if all present could be there to hear the sweet response that will be given when the name of little Charlie McKinley is called, for now it is to the utmost desire of

VI.

IN the afternoon of the first day at Prattville, Weston had walked out to the crossroads where the capture of his father had taken place, and he was none the wiser. He was impressed with the thought and could well believe that the thirty years had made but little change in the surroundings of that neighborhood. He had no difficulty in locating the little stream where Harvey had stopped while his father rode on to be swept along with the soldiers. His plans were very vague and indefinite. He had been firmly impressed that Harvey would leave word in the neighborhood if he was inclined to deal fairly with his young partner, and that he might possibly have communicated after the war was over with some one in the neighborhood.

Now that he was on the spot, Weston felt a diffidence in broaching the subject to anyone which was almost impossible to overcome. He returned to the hotel, and after a good supper enjoyed a night's sleep, and determined to wait around in the neighborhood without telling his business and he would decide what to do next. He remained there ten days. During that time he was the subject of a vast amount of speculation. His explanation that he was taking a holiday did not explain. Arguments were held on the store porch and in the sewing circles.

It was suspected that he was a detective; a defaulting cashier; an escaped convict; the murderer of a Chicago millionaire for whom a reward of $50,000 was offered; that he was a mineral prospector; and, finally, it was generally conceded that he was thinking of starting another paper in Prattville.

The Editor and Proprietor of The Weekly Blast heard it and passed a sleepless night. It was the terror of his life—that haunting fear that someone would start another paper to make two bites of a cherry in dividing the newspaper patronage. Next morning he approached the stranger with a proposition to sell out to him, and Weston, who was not without guile entered into the spirit of the thing and told him that he thought it would be more interesting to have a rival for public favor. He lifted a load from the mind of the hardly worked and poorly paid man by assuring him finally that he had not enough ambition to run a newspaper.

On the second day of his stay in the village, hearing the church bell ring and seeing that people were gathering in the church yard, he inquired as to what was going on, and was told that it was the funeral service of a young man who had been killed by his horse backing his buggy over a high embankment on the road over Piney Mountain. He was driving thro' the country alone, and on his way up the mountain he had met two strolling Italians with a trained bear. A short curve in the road brought the horse face to face with the bear. He had started to turn, was held in by the driver, and backed the vehicle over the embankment. Down the hill-side a hundred yards the man was found lying under his horse, dead. He had had been crushed against a tree in falling and he had been saved the agony of being pinioned by the horse, which had worn away the soil in semi-circles with its feet in its efforts to get up.

The remains carried the body to a near-by house. A doctor was summoned, and every attention paid. Now the funeral was to be conducted by the charity of strangers. The undertaking equips of being well to do only a few dollars were in its pockets. The country people gathered in their decent Sunday clothes to pay their respects to the dead. Promptly the procession came in sight. The undertaking outfit in front, and the hearse was a farmer wagon with a long pine box. Then came the people in carriages, on horseback, and on foot. There were no mourners, but all seemed in sympathy and fully aroused to the melancholy of the occasion. Sorrow for the friends, who must by this time know that the young man was dead, in the pride of his health and strength, predominated.

We must note the exception.

While several hundred yards from the town, a surrey being driven rapidly came up. It contained three men and a negro driver. An elderly man was on the front seat with the driver. They were city bred, and only such can see a funeral procession and not be moved. It is a daily sight with them. They are none the better for their callousness.

"Some poor devil shuffled off this mortal coil," said the elderly man flippantly. "Drive up, Buck, and pass them at the broad place in the road."

"I doesn't like ter do hit, boss."

"Well, give me the lines and I will."

The surrey passed the procession rapidly, and the incident marred the decent observance of the funeral march in the minds of those forming the procession. Without a sigh of sensibility the three white men whirled by and drew up at the village hotel.

When the wagon containing the body of the stranger arrived at the church it was carried into the building and the congregation quietly assembled. The minister preached on the uncertainty of life and the certainty of death. He made good use of the tragic circumstances attending the death, and drew a graphic picture of the distress of the dead boy's family. He gave the facts concerning the identity, which could be gathered by letters in the pockets of the dead man.

When the sermon was over the preacher announced that the congregation could pass before the coffin and see the features of the dead. This was done and the procession formed anew to go to the place of interment.

Weston and others in the village did not wish to go to the grave and he went back to the hotel. Here he found the three strangers occupying chairs on the front porch. It was quite evident that they had had enough liquor to make them feel comfortable, and they were criticising the rural funeral.

A little old Irishman came by. He was in his second childhood. Old and bent, he walked feebly by, with the tears running down his cheeks. The elderly stranger noticed him.

"Well, Uncle Mike, who gave you an invite?"

"Oh the poor young man! The poor young man! And what will his poor mither say when she hears it!"

"Was the dead man a stranger in this neighborhood?" asked the elderly man of Weston.

Weston related the circumstances, and added that the name was Henry H. Longman, of Baltimore.

The man grew as pale as death, and after making a few inarticulate sounds, arose and rapidly walked to overtake the procession.

One of his companions said hurriedly to Weston:

"Before God! I believe it is the funeral of his only son."

When Mr Longman arrived at the improvised hearse, his friends and Weston were by his side. He seemed to be unable to speak, and Weston explained to the undertaker who was in the wagon that the gentleman was believed to be the father of the dead man, and suggested that the coffin be opened. This was quickly done. Mr Longman was seated in the wagon, gave one look at the pallid features, and with a terrible groan fell on the stove beside the coffin, stricken.

He was removed to the hotel and the funeral was completed without other special incident. The father afterwards recovered. The facts of the case were that he organized to meet his son at that place, and the young man was a few days ahead of his time. They had come there to close out a land deal. Mr Longman afterwards sought out the friendly people who had cared so well for the body of his boy. He had the good sense not to attempt to offer them money, tho he was a very wealthy man. As a mark gratitude he spent thousands of dollars in rebuilding and remodelling the church, and making it a marvel of a church for a country neighborhood.

New York News Letter.

ANOTHER War scare!

The Spanish Government the other day requested the recall of Consul-General Lee from Havana. This request produced great excitement. President McKinley answered the request with an emphatic NO! Spain later has backed down and withdrawn her little request. In the meantime Spain is getting all her ships available sent to Havana. This country is doing the same. In the opinion of a great many war is not far off. The sooner the better. The Spaniards are aching for a scrap, and it will not take long to show the whole world how we can polish them off in great shape.

In the event of war, it is said that General Lee will take command of our troops in Havana. The Cubans will fall in under his orders. The scrimmage will be a short and decisive one.

Representative Cannon (who is very close to the President) yesterday introduced a bill for a grant of $50,000,000 to strengthen our coast defense. This bill will be passed. [illegible] and ammunition this move is a good one, and will show Spain that, notwithstanding we are a nation of "shopkeepers," we have money to burn and mean business.

General Lee said the other day at his hotel: "If we are nonpersona grata to Spain, all she has to do is to say so and we will get out. But I want you, gentlemen, to understand that when we do leave we will go out with a brass band and the American flag at the head of the procession."

Another warship of Spain has arrived at Havana, called the Aquendo. She is larger than the Vizcaya. The Spaniards go wild with excitement when their ships arrive. Captain Sigsbee of the ill-fated Maine is reported as saying "that it would take about fifteen minutes' fun to shoot their engine-rooms to pieces." What called forth this criticism is the fact that these two Spanish ships are built too much out of water, and they will make fine targets. Our ships are lower in the water and consequently do not act as mere targets.

The entire commanders of the National Guard of the State of New York were summoned before Governor Black to have a war conference on March 7. Regimental commanders have told their men to see to it that their marching kits are in repair. Regulation cartridge belts have been issued by the Quartermaster-General. Each militia man has been instructed to furnish to his commander a schedule of his hours, telling where he may be found at any hour of day or night. All these hurried preparations have the appearance that there is something in the wind.

The American Line steamship St. Louis, of our auxiliary fleet, it is rumored has been ordered from Newport News, Virginia, where she has been undergoing her annual overhauling, to the Brooklyn Navy Yard to be filled out as a cruiser. She has taken a full supply of coal.

The Brooklyn Navy yard is full of business. Recruits are coming in by the score. The yard rumor has a lot of boys recruiting. As soon as men join they are put through the different manœuvres.

The month of March came in like a lamb—not a cloud in the sky. Gentlemen came out with their spring overcoats—ladies in their figure. There is where humanity is foolish—that is the way to contract pneumonia, la grip, and all the ills. On the 2d of March, the weather changed and towards evening we were treated with wintry weather—snow, sleet and rain. This month hereabouts is very trying for those suffering with weak lungs. We are on the sea coast, the air is very strong and weather changs are very sudden.

DURING the excitement of the blowing up of the Maine, the French liner, La Champagne, with some 450 souls on board, was reported over due, and attracted little attention. This ship should have arrived at this port in the neighborhood of the 18th. It seems that the tail shaft broke and the ship had to cast anchor. The storm of a week ago came up, and she was blown hither and thither. Each moment the passengers thought was their last. Things became so desperate that ten of the ship's crew volunteered to go in a life boat and seek aid. These brave men, after a number of days, were picked up, half-frozen to death, by the Rotterdam. The Champagne signaled, burned rockets and search-lights, but passing steamers went on their way and never turned a hair to help them. To make a long story short, the La Champagne was towed to Halifax by the Warren liner Roman. The passengers immediately got up a handsome purse of 5,000 francs to be distributed among the life boat's crew. The Roman will get a large amount of salvage money, as the cargo was [illegible] and the ship represents a fortune. In all probability this ship could have been picked up as soon as the accident was discovered, but the captains of these ships naturally wait until the last moment and try to save salvage. They do not consider the passengers' feelings or those dependent upon them.

The war talk is still on, but what is to be done is a secret, as the President is waiting his time. Any way, in my way of thinking, Cuba will be free and it is only a matter of a short time that the Stars and Stripes will float over the Island of Cuba.

General (Butcher) Weyler petitioned the Queen Regent of Spain and asked her to demand from the United States an immediate apology from our President. He claimed that he had been insulted grossly. The Queen turned him down.

The other evening I visited the Armory of our National Guard. Instead of two companies drilling each evening, half the regiment was being put through drill. Orders have been received at the Armory to keep things in readiness in case of an emergency.

This war talk has been the means of bringing in more recruits to the National Guard. Young men filled with patriotic fire have been swarming to the National Guard, the Regular Army, the Navy and the Marines. When these young men's ardor cools some what they will be praying for their five years to end.

The Board of Inquiry is still probing for facts about the Maine disaster. The hearing will probably take another week. It is reported that the Board have some pretty cold facts to present to President McKinley. Our interests are being looked after all right by Consul-General Lee. He is the right man in the right place. He cannot be bluffed or frightened in fear enough to pull the wool over General Lee's eyes; he can read them like a book.

Baseball—the best of outdoor games—will soon start in. This is a game where science is displayed. It is a clean game and is becoming more popular every year. Occasionally, when the umpire gives decisions that do not suit the players, "kicks" occur, and the player is fined and the game goes on. When the player loses his head and keeps on kicking he is put out of the game. There is talk of having two umpires to a game—one behind the catcher and the other covering the "bags." This is an excellent idea, because it is impossible for the umpire at home plate to make a fair decision when a man slides to second base. There is usually a cloud of dust around the baseman and the runner. When the umpire covering the bases is there every thing is serene. Dirty ball-playing must cease, or decent people will not support the game. The New York Base Ball Club will finish this year either first or second. This is a prediction. The Brooklyn Club will do a little better than last year. They have signed some very heavy batters, and good batters save a game at a critical moment.

The Lenten season has started in. The society people are now [illegible] and these days they need it. What a hardship is their's! They have to go to the theatre, to the balls, to the different shows! They have to do this to keep in society. They have to attend every thing that is called "swell." If not, they are branded as common folk. They spend small fortunes for their dresses, etc. (A good many of them have not paid for their tailor made outfits and are guessing where they will get the cash.) But that is their funeral. We can all thank God that we can go to bed at 9 or 10 and wake up and eat a good, solid breakfast and keep healthy. These so-called society people die young. Nature cannot stand the strain of keeping up all night, night after night. The private sanitariums are filled with them. But it is fun for them while it lasts, and it is nobodies business but their's, if they pay for it by losing their health.

The bicycle season has started up very briskly. The trade reports increased sales over last year. The streets of New York and Brooklyn are mostly made of asphalt and riders can be seen by the hundred skimming along like the wind. They generally cross the ferries, or the Bridge and make for Coney Island, or take lovely rides through Long Island. Tandems these days are quite numerous. The chainless bicycle is becoming very popular.

Entertainments are constantly being held for the Monumental Fund of the Maine. The New York Journal is working like a beaver in gathering in subscriptions. The people are subscribing anything from a penny up. This paper is also getting up a Carnival of Sports. Those entering the Carnival are giving their services free. A great amount is expected from this source. As I understand it, the Monument is to be placed at the mouth of the harbor. It is a grand idea and a patriotic one.

It is said that New York City is absolutely safe. No foreign ship could get past the Narrows as the harbor is a perfect network of mines, the different forts and concealed batteries and system of [illegible] the city fall protection. But if they ever should get past, what a target this city would be with its tall buildings, the Brooklyn Bridge, etc., etc. Why, in a short while the city would be laid low.

At last we gave her Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and after taking three bottles, the cough was cured. PERSONAL MENTION.

Mrs E. I. Hill, of Academy, is able to be up and about.

Miss Rolla Clark is teaching for her sister, Mrs Mann, this week.

Mrs Flora Maupin moved this week to the home of her father, Lee Barnes, of Travelers Repose.

Blake King went to Lewisburg for his father, E. D. King, this week.

B. A. Rankin, one of Locust's enterprising men was in town to see his lawyer Monday.

Forest Hill, deputy sheriff, has gotten well enough to attend to his duties.

Mr and Mrs Alvin Clark came up Monday to visit their daughter, Mrs Andrew Price.

William Sharp, of Edray, made a contract last fall for the sale of his cattle for two years.

HUNTERSVILLE.

One day last week a stranger appeared at the home of Mr and Mrs Joe Guth, in the person of a ten pound boy.

Rev M. Thurston Turner, of the Episcopal Church, will hold services Friday evening, March 18, at 7.30, in the Presbyterian Church at Huntersville.

Andrew Oliver, who has been down to Academy on very important business, passed through our town last Monday on his way home.

Mr Johnson, who represents the Albert Block Clothing Co., of Cincinnati, Ohio, was in town Saturday and registered at the Huntersville Hotel.

Miss Lucy Kincaid, who is teaching in the family of Col Levi Gay, accompanied by Miss Lynn Gay, paid her friends of Huntersville a welcome visit last Saturday and Sunday.

Col D. O'Connell, of Loury's Mill, was in Huntersville Saturday night. The Colonel looks straight down his nose and with a smile says 'they say the Greenbrier River will have the railroad for a while now.' We say let it come, it will make the Greenbrier Valley flourish like the green 'bay tree' and blossom like the rose.

A congregational meeting was held here last Sunday to act upon the tendered resignation of Rev W T. Price as pastor of this church. Upon due consideration thereof, it was unanimously resolved not to accept the resignation, as they did not desire to dissolve the relationship heretofore existing between them. It was further resolved to retain him as their pastor.

We promised not to say anything more about the rail road, but since the engineers went down the river in a boat, and the 'White Sulphur gang' has gone up Salt River, as a matter of curiosity, we would like to know how long Greenbrier River will have the road. For the past two years we have been promised that in ten days the matter would be definitely settled as to the route and as ten days has been the measure of time, we hope that the railroad will stay on the Greenbrier for that time, at least. Whilst it might be better for some to have the route settled at once, still that would deprive a great many people of their ten days' pleasure. We, therefore, do not disapprove of the idea of changing the route as often as possible, so that all our people may, for a season, though short, may enjoy the pleasures of living on the railroad. We predict that after all have participated in the hallucination that they are living or have lived on the favored route, there will be a lull for, say, ten days and then the rail road will come as a thief in the night, and we will awake to the fact, when too late, that is not on our location, but built where we least expected it.

TOP OF ALLEGHANY.

Charley and Dave Varner left for Dorris, Monday.

A. F. Varner who has been down with the rheumatism for so long is convalescent.

The school on Buffalo Mountain, taught by Charles Spencer, has closed.

Mr and Mrs W. L. Wilmoth are visiting relatives at Travelers Repose.

Paul Grimes' school closed with a rousing good time recently. Mr Grimes made many friends while here and leaves with our best wishes.

James Phillips has returned from the Dorris lumber camps where he has been working for some time.

When the railroad comes, it will not take a letter over a week to reach Marlinton. Under the present dispensation it takes about two weeks.

FROST.

J. H. Lantz's school is progressing profalgently.

All is quiet in town and the farmers are making "lasses" out of rain and snow water.

A little colder than we expected it to be after Sweeker visited our town with his "wire-tongued bed-springs."

Mr Harry Gwin seems to know a good deal in regard to the Curry verb and pronoun.

The football players a few nights ago turned out to be 'moonshiners' —little pitchers are easy filled.

Dr Gwin says he has had a severe attack of "the devil" and is improving rapidly.

The Gwin Firm has moved to the Bussard situation on the corner block.

We thought it rather queer of Sherman gibson putting a "King, Hester" in his sitting room; but we fully understand it now.

Billy Bussard thinks that some of the folk's tongues are about worn out, and he is going to undertake a job of turning out wooden tongues shortly, which he knows will accommodate many of his friends.

Plenty of cattle and sheep buyers. Just two years ago the farmers had to solicit buyers; but not so under McKinley.

We are sorry to hear that J. A. Moore accidentally killed his dog which his girl admired so much; but we are assured that she admired him more than his dog.

M. F. Herold is being urged by his many friends as a candidate for matrimony; but Millard fears he is rather young to assume the responsibilities of this important position. Watch out, Millard, and don't let the girls see your teeth or they will tell how old you are.

The Cove Hill correspondent says he is as much in the dark as that family was when the light went out; for he does n't know any thing about that paragraph below his letter a few weeks ago. He thinks that if some person don't look after the Editor in the near future he will be lost in verbal profundity.

Yours for granted,

Primers in Their Gizzards.

Our chickens have been dying from some cause we knew not what until last Saturday evening when a nice young pullet seemed almost dead, and had been acting as tho she were crazy or drunk for some three or four days. We concluded we would kill her and see if we could detect the disorder. Upon examination we found in the gizzard twenty five Winchester primers, one large shoe eyelet, one small one, and a tense ring about the size of a small object button only very narrow. This aroused our suspicions and caused us to look after the others that had died, of which only one could be found. This one had eighteen primers and a ring just like the one described before. The primers were all once used, taken from the shells and swept out the house into the yard. About half were Winchester and the most stubborn grower. This may serve to warn poultry keepers who are also speculators to be careful of the old primers. The last one that died was the fourth chick we have lost from this cause.

Respectfully,
E. E. McCLURE.

DUNMORE.

Fine weather to plow, make sugar, and set hens.

Elihu Gum and family are off on a visit to Highland County, Va.

The late war has raised the price of corn at Dunmore to 75c.

S. J. Payne sent up last week a load of roller flour. Sid is like the Dutchman's flea—he is every where Miss Sallie Susan Taylor has gone to Edray for a few weeks.

Patrick H. Meeks and his sons are building of a mill for Jim Cassel on the Leatherbark.

The time o' year will soon be here to set the woods on fire and kill snakes.

Price Moore was in town last week following the railroad survey.

Peyton Moore was up Friday to see his honey and gather steam for his sawmill.

Sid passed through town today enroute to Webster to Gooseman's.

Howard Armstrong and Miss Ella Jones, of Doe Hill, Virginia, are out on a visit.

Major J. C. Arbogast spent part of last week in Marlinton.

Mr B. Ferguson has gone to Marlinton to clerk in the Golden Store.

Quite a number of the Marlinton youth took in the exhibition at the close of Miss Annie King's school at Green Bank.

Mrs S. C. Pritchard, Mrs L. E. Campbell, Mrs C. B. Sweeker, Mrs A. H. Moore, Harvey Nottingham, Miss Arbogast, Mrs Noona Carpenter, Mrs Sallie Carpenter, Mrs J. B. McCutcheon, who have been on the sick-list, we are glad to note are all improving.

A auctioneer Sweeker made a very successful sale at Allen Gulford's, deceased, on Saturday. Everything brought war prices. He will make a big sale of goods for Sol Davis at Green Bank Saturday the 19th; will close out J. F. Hively the 24th; then blow his horn at Marlinton April 5 and 6th.

Since the railroad did not come the people of Dunmore have come to the conclusion to have a hog law, which is badly needed. Hogs should not be allowed to run at large in any town, to root up the sidewalks and church lots. (Some sidewalks have been put in along Court-house Street.)

A few nights ago Bob McLaughlin killed a mountain cat five feet long with a tail six inches long.

A debating-litirary society has been organized at Dunmore. Columbus and Washington will be discussed there Saturday night. Let all attend.

William Freeman will erect a gun mill in the near future on top of the Alleghany Mountain on the Staunton and Parkersburg road.

Saturday will be general trading and selling day at Green Bank for goods, horses, and cattle.

Arthur Noel left today for Saint Williams.

Poor Pete has come.

A. F. Carpenter is off for Ronceverte this week.

DRY BRANCH.

The weather is fine at this time.

Miss Leana's Caplinger's school closed March 1.

H. L. Lindsay is on the Branch today. We was glad to have him among us.

Mrs George Beaty, of Mingo, broke her thigh three weeks ago. She is mending slowly.

Miss Laura Blankenship has been missing for three weeks. We fear she has killed herself playing football.

Mr Arthur Mace is going to leave the Branch. We are sorry of it for he is one of our best neighbors.

Granville Brady has made one pint of molasses and is still going on with his sweet work.

Mr Willie McCloud is stepping around as big as a judge. He says as soon as he raises his acre of tobacco he will marry Mary Hoover. We wish Willie good luck with his tobacco.

D. C. Lindsay got his finger tore off the other day in a hay-cutter. He got Dr Cameron to fix it, and it is doing as well as could be expected.

There will be a match game of football played at Mingo Saturday between the Mingo and Point Mountain teams, with Eff Sweeker and Guy Marshall for fullbacks.

BUCKETT.

W. W. Tyree & Co. turned out a fine wagon for J. C. Gay this week. A man misses it who buys a factory made wagon while this firm builds such wagons.

LETTER FROM Mr PETER DOW.

BALLARD, WASHINGTON,
February 19, 1898.

Editor The Pocahontas Times:

Dear Sir,—For the satisfaction of a few friends that I have in the beloved State of West Virginia, and especially in old Pocahontas and Greenbrier counties, I wish to impose on your time and space with this short letter.

After my financial failure in Webster County, brought about by a combination of unavoidable misfortunes, together with sickness and illhealth of myself and family, I decided to come to this coast with the hope of getting my head above the waters of adversity and rebuilding my shattered health.

It seems because I did not go around to worry body I owed and owe them a doleful story that I could not pay, and sit down and wait for something to turn up, that certain mail-tongue persons have started the report that I had swindled them out of large sums, and scooped with a sum of money varying from nine to twenty thousand dollars. The parties claiming to have been swindled out of the largest amounts are in every case irresponsible to the law for their statements, and to whom, in fact, I owe not a cent either by account or bond. To all such persons, who try to blame their own failures and bad breaks on the innocent, and make statements calculated to injure others, regardless of truth and right, I will leave the public to judge between them and me as it pleases, comparing the record of all of us for honesty, truthfulness, and prompt payment of honest debts. But if the Bible be true, (which I doubt not in the least), and God be just, there will be a score to settle in the final wind up in which falsehood and attempted injury to our fellowmen will not be allowed to pass so easily.

To those who have been true to me, even in most dire distress, and have proven themselves friends in prosperity and adversity, I will say from the depths of my heart that tongue nor pen can express the sincerity of my appreciation of your friendship. The noble boys and men who worked for me, from old Pocahontas and Greenbrier, true to the last, even tho the prospects for pay were poor,—to you I say, even tho I am on the Pacific Coast, I have not forgotten you. My reason for coming here was to make money to pay you. I confidently hope to be able to pay all I owe on labor inside of eighteen months. I am not done with West Virginia and will be back if I live.

I landed here with less than $400, after selling my household stuff, not one dollar of which came from the Hardwood Job. The money which brought me here and which I landed with having come from the Custis Siding job and was obtained for me by Mr James Dunivan, the man who had charge of that job. This money would not have paid my debts, and had I paid it out, it would have left me in a condition to do nothing in the future to pay out. At that time I had hope of getting the $4000, or at least a part of it, out of the Hardwood Company.

And so you, Mr Editor, after my best wishes, I will say that I will try and write you another letter soon, giving you some news about this country that will possibly be of more interest to your readers than this. Respectfully yours,

PETER DOW.

Why One Colorado School Was Closed.

Mary Matthews, a nice little girl, lived so far from the school house that she rode a little spotted saddle mule to the hall of learning. The teacher thought it unwise to allow the animal to graze about unharmed, so he attempted to ride it away. The story is told in these expressive little lines:

Mary had a little mule,
It followed her to school;
That was against the rule.
The teacher, like a fool,
Had behind the mule
And hit him with a rule.
After that there was no school.

Tuesday, April 5th, 1898,

the following tract of waste and unappropriated land which is sold for the benefit of the School Fund, to-wit:

Forty Acres of Land lying in the Little Levels District of Pocahontas County, W. Va., and on the waters of Greenbrier River, adjoining the lands of T. F. Gibson and others, and being a portion of the lands conveyed by the Auditor of West Virginia to the Commissioner of School Lands by deed dated the 3rd day of March, 1897, and recorded in the Clerk's office of Pocahontas County in Deed Book [illegible] page [illegible].

Terms: Cash for costs, and one-third purchase money, the residue in six, twelve and eighteen months.

ELIJAH.

WHILE delayed by a storm, pleasant moments were passed reading and transcribing the following sentiments taken from Dr William E. Munsey's lecture on Elijah.

"Elijah received the highest compliment that any person can receive when the widow of Zarephath said of him: 'I know he is a man of God and that the word of the Lord in his mouth is truth.'

"To be pronounced a finished scholar, a consistent philosopher, a profound metaphysician, an erudite theologian, a logical eloquitionary preacher, a successful lawyer or physician, the consummate statesman and diplomatist, are indeed true compliments, but to be truthfully pronounced a man of God is higher than all of them, and such was Elijah's character.

"The Bible is a rare old book and teaches in many ways, by declaration, explication, and exemplification. The exemplification of its teachings by the living characters who walk along its pages is its most successful mode of instruction, and cannot be adverted to attentively without profit. Every peculiar age has developed its peculiar spirits; especially men raised up by the providence of God, adapted in their characters as teachers and exemplars of virtue to the peculiar necessities of the ages in which they lived. Noah, Moses, David, and Paul were the men for their times.

"Especial and peculiar times have demanded especial and peculiar men; especial and peculiar conditions of the church have demanded especial and peculiar types of religious character. Elijah was, emphatically, the man for his times. His life marked out the line where the red fiery beams of Sinai and the mellow rays of Calvary meet and blend. Behind all the finger-posts along the road of the world's historic travel pointed back to Sinai; before him all the finger-posts pointed forward to Calvary. Like Moses and Christ he stands out in the living light as the type and inaugurator of a respective dispensation. And when all the post-diluvian dispensations were to be united into one, Moses, Elijah, and Christ, the union on Mount Tabor making as the subject of their communion, the basis of such union the death of Christ.

"Like Moses and Christ, Elijah fasted forty days and forty nights, and like them he left no tenanted grave that men can mark. When the time of his departure came, Elijah and his companion Elisha stand on the margin of the Jordan. The old river rushes down its steep and rocky bed as it did when Joshua, five and a half centuries before, smote its waters, and a nation passed over to its inheritance dry shod. Elijah folds his mantle and smites the flood and the waters roll hither and thither, and in like manner they pass over on dry ground. They ascend to the other bank and walk on in sweet conversation. The royal deputation from heaven descending like light flashes along down the ranges of the milky way, passes the sun, and is in sight. They look up and behold a point of light rapidly nearing, when they see steeds of fire shod with meteors and wings of speed, whose quivering manes drop golden frost, and whose nessings were as the morning light. Behind them a chariot of fire whose wheels of flaming ruby singing upon their axles down heaven's blue pavement struck lightning.

"Elisha falls back overwhelmed; and Elijah, flinging down his mantle, mounts the woodrous car, and, disappointing death and the grave, waves 'good-by' to earth, and straight turning wheels above the constellations, and hies away to the City of God. But a moment elapsing till the fiery rims of his chariot wheels are flying through the portals of the heavenly city, welcomed by the thunder anthems of heaven's orchestra, and the thunder shouting of heaven's hosts. I wonder if his chariot will ever come for us."

The Kansas Jack Rabbit Ahead.

An Emporia man heard a disturbance in the night, and, on getting up to see what was the matter, found his bulldog engaged in a desperate struggle with a jack rabbit. Concluding that it was dangerous to interfere, he went back into the house and shut the door. In a short time the outside struggle ceased, and looking up he was surprised to see a jack rabbit looking in over the transom of the front door. In the morning he went out and found the bulldog dead in the front yard, with marks of rabbit feet all over his person, bearing mute testimony of his brave and desperate struggle.—Emporia Republican.

SPRING-TOOTH HARROW.

The frames are made in one piece of steel angle bar, and formed to withstand all strain without buckling or warping. The teeth in this harrow are so spaced that they will not trail each other, Pulverizing the ground thoroughly. The steel pipe tooth bars are mounted in malleable boxes secured to the frame, and will not bend or break. The peculiar shape of the teeth curling two-thirds about the bar gives the greatest amount of spring possible without straining the bolts, and because of their shape and "fastening are stronger than used on any other harrow. By the levers the depth of work can be regulated while the harrow is in motion. The draft is steady and direct as the harrow has no side motion.

That was against the rule.
The teacher like a fool,
Got behind that mule,
And fell him with a rule.
After that there was no school.

ELIJAH.

WHILE delayed by a storm, pleasant moments were passed reading and transcribing the following sentiments taken from Dr William E. Munsey's lecture on Elijah.

"Elijah received the highest compliment that any person can receive when the widow of Zarephath said of him: 'I know he is a man of God and that the word of the Lord in his mouth is truth.'

"To be pronounced a finished scholar, a consistent philosopher, a profound metaphysician, an erudite theologian, a logical elocutionary preacher, a successful lawyer or physician, the consummate statesman and diplomatist, are indeed true compliments; but to be truthfully pronounced a man of God is higher than all of them, and such was Elijah's character.

"The Bible is a rare old book and teaches in many ways, by declaration, explication, and exemplification. The exemplification of its teachings by the living characters who walk along its pages is its most successful mode of instruction, and cannot be adverted to attentively without profit. Every peculiar age has developed its peculiar spirits; especially men raised up by the providence of God, adapted in their characters as teachers and exemplars of virtue to the peculiar necessities of the ages in which they lived. Noah, Moses, David, and Paul were the men for their times.

"Especial and peculiar times have demanded especial and peculiar men; especial and peculiar conditions of the church have demanded especial and peculiar types of religious character. Elijah was emphatically, the man for his times. His life marked out the line where the red fiery beams of Sinai and the mellow rays of Calvary meet and blend. Behind all the finger-posts along the road to the world's historic travel pointed back to Sinai; before him all the finger-posts pointed forward to Calvary. Like Moses and Christ he stands out in the living light as the type and inaugurator of a respective dispensation. And when all the post-diluvian dispensations were to be united into one, Moses, Elijah, and Christ, the union on Mount Tabor making as the subject of their communion, the basis of such union the death of Christ.

"Like Moses and Christ, Elijah fasted forty days and forty nights, and like them he left no tenanted grave that men can mark. When the time of his departure came, Elijah and his companion Elisha stand on the margin of the Jordan. The old river rushes down its steep and rocky bed as it did when Joshua, five and a half centuries before, smote its waters, and a nation passed over to its inheritance dry shod. Elijah folds his mantle and smites the flood and the waters roll hither and thither, and in like manner they pass over on dry ground. They ascend to the other bank and walk on in sweet conversation. The royal deputation from heaven descending like light flashes along down the ranges of the milky way, passes the sun, and is in sight. They look up and behold a point of light rapidly nearing, soon they see steeds of fire shod with meteors and wings of speed, whose quivering manes drop golden frost, and whose nostrils were as the morning light. Behind them a chariot of fire whose wheels of flaming ruby singing upon their axles down heaven's blue pavement struck lightning.

"Elijah falls back overwhelmed; and Elijah, flinging down his mantle, mounts the wondrous car, and disappointing death and the grave, waves 'good-by' to earth, and straight turning wheels above the constellations and hies away to the City of God. But a moment elapsing till the fiery rims of his chariot wheels are flying through the portals of the heavenly city, welcomed by the thunder anthems of heaven's orchestra, and the thundershouts of heaven's hosts. I wonder if his chariot will ever come for us."

The Kansas Jack Rabbit Ahead.

An Emporia man heard a disturbance in the night, and on getting up to see what was the matter, found his bulldog engaged in a desperate struggle with a jack rabbit. Concluding that it was dangerous to interfere, he went back into the house and shut the door. In a short time the outside struggle ceased, and looking out he was surprised to see a jack rabbit looking in over the transom of the front door. In the morning he went out and found the bulldog dead in the front yard, with marks of rabbit teeth all over his person, bearing mute testimony of his brave and desperate struggle.—Emporia Republican.

from which Consumption and all other Physical Miseries arise, in variety and quantity prescribed by the use of A. Whitmer's Eureka Liver Medicine Remedy. Read Carefully. Act Promptly.

CONSTIPATION DEFINED.

"Constipation—Stagnation of fecal matter or action in over-acting the bowels; the inability of the bowels to act, or to expel the excrementitious or fecal matter when remaining in the bowels and duct."—Webster.

When the active and poisonous matter remains in the bowels it poisons and contaminates every drop of blood which it comes in contact with.

It comes in contact with the Stomach, Liver, Heart, and Vital Organs.

How does it do this? The blood becomes poisoned, and in its circulation through our system, which is one continuous flow from food, either sweet or sour, to every organ and tissue in the body.

Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Sick Headache, Loss of Appetite, Foul Tongue in the Mouth, Coated Tongue, Kidney, and Bladder Diseases, and Nervous Prostration or Exhaustion Are more or less developed by continuing to suffer with the above diseases. Nothing is wrong with the blood but what can be corrected by Cautioning Among Long Usage and Consumption.

New York News Letter.

THE Montgomery is anchored in the harbor of Havana. She is near the wreck of the Maine. Spanish cruisers surround her. God help Spain if an "accident" happens to this ship.

The President has sounded all the European nations, and has found that to a unit they will stand by the United States in the stand we intend to take to free Cuba.

President McKinley will shortly send a message to Congress, it is said, recognizing the independence of Cuba. The Spaniards will fight for all they are worth to save Cuba but it is only a question of time before the the Stars and Stripes will wave over the Island of Cuba.

Five of the Maine's survivors arrived in New York on March 9th, and a hearty welcome was accorded them. They were sent to the Brooklyn Navy Yard, and boarded the receiving ship, Vermont. The veterans recruits looked them over with loving eyes. They lined up before the Captain of the Vermont and saluted. Master-at-arms Lond stepped out and said: "Just come aboard from the Maine, sir." The survivers are anxious to be assigned to other ships, and their one thought is a chance to man a gun or handle a cutlass against Spain.

Here is the record of the $50,000,000 bill, appropriated for national defense:

Reported to Senate.....12.13
Passed the Senate.....12.26
Signed by Vice-President.....3.00
Signed by President.....4.40

This was quick work, and it goes to show the whole world that when the American people get started they do things in a united, shoulder-to-shoulder manner.

It is said that in a comparatively short time we can raise an army of 10,000,000. We could not do a dress parade or go through the different maneuvers, but we can fight to a man and fight to win.

Poor Corbett and Fitzsimmons! They have been entirely overlooked these stirring days. But as excitement ceases their names are coming before the public. From now on they will have their little say. Corbett is a past master at talking, and Fitzsimmons is becoming a famous orator. "Kid" McCoy has claimed the championship of the world; inasmuch that six weeks ago he posted with the Police Gazette $5,000 to meet Fitzsimmons, and informed "Lanky Bob" that if he didn't fight in the specified time, all honors were his. Now he has a standing offer to meet all comers.

The New York Baseball Club has gone into training at Lakewood, New Jersey. You will remember this is the fashionable winter resort now-a-days, where Tammany Hall made its state for the last election, where George Gould and all the other millionaires have palatial residences. This is the place where our Giants will get into shape for the season. The Brooklyn Baseball Club is training in the vicinity of Lakewood. Being a ball player these days is no slouch. They have to exercise, play ball games, basket ball and, in fact, do any and every thing that will bring the muscles into play. Their expenses are paid for the season, and they receive good pay, ranging from $1,000 up. Star players have been known to receive as high as $10,000. The pitcher is the man who, nearly always, receives the best salary. Their season is about seven months of playing on the field. The rest of the year is devoted to keeping in shape.

The Military Athletic League will open up on Monday evening, at Madison Square Garden with a military tournament. This tournament will consist of tought, fancy and trick riding by light artillery. Even the sailors will strive for prizes. All the regiments and forts will be represented. The affair will be a kind of a carnival of sports. The larger portion of the proceeds will go to the Gen. Fitzhugh Porter Monument Fund. So that some of the proceeds will be turned over to the Maine Fund.

Another very gentle exhibition will be held in Madison Square Garden in April. It will be the annual Electrical Show. Electricity in all shapes and forms will be shown. As electric lights are made in all colors, the effect is truly beautiful. Lectures upon electricity will be given by our foremost electricians. This show is looked forward to by a great many.

The weather since the commencement of March has been lovely, and if it keeps on at this rate trees will be budding. Grass plots here and there are looking up. In Central Park the birds are singing and the animals seem to be perfectly happy—in fact, everything is taking on a spring look. A few fools of men are running around without overcoats and hats without wraps. This is a sure way to get laid up and pile up a fat doctor's bill, and in some cases an undertaker's.—J. O. W.

Out on Long Island, in a town called Rockville Centre, the body of a beautiful 3½ year-old girl baby was found the other day in a hen coop. The hen coop belongs to a doctor. The doctor went out to feed his chickens and discovered a little white mitten. He thought the discovery was strange, and, upon further examination, was horrified to find the nude body of this beautiful girl baby. Her mouth was eaten away by some powerful poison administered. A further seach in the nearby shrubbery revealed a bottle, labled carbolic acid. Still farther searching brought to light the different garments, belonging to the child. This is one of the most dastardly murders ever perpetrated. The country about here is worked up to a high state of excitement and if the fiend or fiends are caught, Judge Lynch would have his way. Every clew is being followed. The "Journal" reporters are daily ferreting out this terrible crime, and it is to be hoped that the mystery will shortly be solved. The electric chair is too easy a death for the authors of this crime. They should be torn asunder, or be treated the way India treats its criminals: be made to lie on a block and have an elephant stamp the life out of them. Our mode of killing murderers is too easy. In the first place, a murderer is given a trial, fed to the queen's taste and made a sort of hero. When convicted, his lawyer appeals, and gets a stay of execution nine times out of ten. When a death watch is placed over him nothing is too good for his palate. Cigars are showered upon him; everything is done for him, and his "last words" are heralded in the extras of our hustling newspapers throughout the country. When he is executed the papers state that he showed "great nerve and never flinched." Even the sentimental women send him books, etc., to while away his time.

The picture of this beautiful girl is in all the papers, and is being kept in print, with the hope of some reader recognizing the photograph.

It is said that John Wanamaker will run on the Republican ticket for Governor of Pennsylvania. You no doubt know this man. He was Postmaster General of the United States during Harrison's administration. Mr Wanamaker is one of the largest merchants of the country, having the largest store in Philadelphia and also the largest one in New York City. His store in this city is where A. T. Stewart did business for years: corner Broadway and 9th and 10th streets, taking in the entire square block. He is as honest as the day, and is called "Honest John." For instance: If he advertises a mail order article at a certain figure and by the time your order reaches his store the said article has been put at a still lower figure, you will get the benefit and change will be returned. He treats his employees like human beings and pays living wages.

Every one in this locality wants to fight for his country, with the exception of the Wall Street gamblers. It is not the country's honor they are after. They are after the almighty dollar.

FOR nearly two weeks, Weston could not find any one who remembered, or who had ever known, that a young man named Weston had been captured in that neighborhood, the second year of the war. He had talked war talk to a number of old soldiers who dearly loved to give their experiences, but they led the talk to scenes in camp and at places very distant from that part of the world. He had related the incident of the separation of the two men, but if a man named Harvey had ever lingered in that neighborhood seeking to rejoin his partner, no one seemed to place him. When asked why he wanted to know, in a blunt manner by an old man whose privilege it is to be inquisitive with young people, it would seem, he said that Harvey had owed his father money, and that if he could find him it might result in his recovering what was due his father.

In speaking of his quest to a young minister, who lived in the village, and who had a great hankering after the legends of the locality—the unwritten history that pertains to every region—the minister suggested that those most apt to have remembered such an occurrence would be the women of that community who had lived there during that period. He had noticed that they could tell more of the local happenings than the men. Those men who stayed by their fire sides were mostly old men who had since died. There were many men, he had found, who had felt outraged at the utter uselessness of the war, and who knew that it was a case of offering up the lives of the private soldiers for principles which could not affect the real interest of the country. They felt that the South had done wrong in beginning the fight and the North was equally wrong in not allowing that part of the country to go and work out its own social problems. Time proved them right, for not all the greatness the country can obtain will wipe out the stain of that fierce and uncalled for war. The survivors are with us, all honored, and a part rewarded. The horrible part is that a million of men, nearly all young and in their prime, were sent to give an account for their deeds in this world before their time. We cannot realize what the war was to that part of the army which is underground.

But whether a man thought he ought to expose his life for a cause not worth it, or not, but few able bodied men remained at home. The actions of the enemy roused the passions of most. Others had to go or their friends would make it uncomfortable for them at home. It took a very useful and necessary man to remain at home in West Virginia, and his usefulness had to be generally known and conceded, but what he was required to go, whether he had a substitute or not.

Weston took the hint and suggested to his old war cronies that it might be that some of the old ladies in the neighborhood might remember. One of them suggested "Ole Mis' Casey" as a "powerful hand at recollecting things. She was a Bunkirk fore she was married and the Bunkirks never forgit nothin'."

Weston inquired where she lived. He was told that she had lived near the famous cross-roads during the war, but that she had moved to the "Beaver neighborhood" after her husband died, about five miles from Fraziervile.

The directions given were to note. "You go up the pike about a mile and take the first right hand road, and keep that for a mile and a quarter till you come to a good sized run, where a road jerks off to your left, but don't take that, but keep straight on across a glade, and in about a half a mile the road forks at a gate-way. Go through the gate and through a field and you pass the lane at the far side, and keep on up a kind of a bridle path until you come in sight of a school house, and turn to your right till the path forks and then turn to the left ergin, and keep on for about half a mile until you come to a dug road. There you turn to the right and the second house you came to is Ole Mis Casey's."

"Is that a near cut?" asked Weston desperately.

"No, it's jest plain sled road all the way. If you're walking you kin go right over that mountain, and git there sooner." But as the mountain indicated was in the direction of where he knew of the illicit distillery, he immediately decided that the sled road was the one for him.

"Is a sled road the same as a wagon road?" he asked.

"Not exactly," it was explained. "When the folks of that neighborhood come to town in a wagon they drive around by Jenkins store at the river. It's about ten miles that way."

"Well, I suppose there are people living on the road between here and there?"

"Nary house, Mister, that you kin see from the road."

"Maybe if you could point in the direction it would help me."

"See that bald knob over yander. Well, Ole Mis Casey lives right at the foot of that there mounting."

Just after the noonday meal Weston set off in the direction or bald knob. As he walked along he saw that he was going into a more mountainous region than he had yet seen.

He missed the gateway of course but he had not gone far until he came upon a pioneer and his whole family planting corn in the clearing. The ground had been stripped of its growth of timber the year before. The land was steep, but the soil was loose and black. No horses were ever used on this farm. The persons dropped the corn from a pocket, first having dug a hole for it, and covered it up. The corn was hoed several times. Several crops would some times be taken off the same ground successive years, then wheat would be dug in, grass seed sown with it and the pioneer would not cultivate it again. It would take a plow and team to break it up. He attacked the forest, burned the logs, and had another field, whenever he chose, which could be worked by the hoe. The slant of the hillside made this work practical, for the dirt was always hoed down hill.

This was the way the fields were cleared on which large cities now stand. The uptodate farmer and farm hand must be as much of a machinist as many who work in the shops. The hoe has been superseded and the knowledge of how to use it will soon be a forgotten art. Once the genius who could make a hoe of the right quality was able to command the highest wages and lived like a prince in any part of America. The art of making steel for the finest swords has been lost, and in a few more years there will not be an artisan in all the country who can make a decent hoe.

Weston was put right by the hillside farmer. He retraced his steps and finally came to the "dug road," i. e., a road which has been graded along the side of a hill, and which had to be dug. He passed the two houses and drew near to a substantial looking log house. It was a story and a half high and had a long porch the whole side of the house. It was built as one large room, and a big fire place at one end. The other end of the room had been cut off by a plank partition, and this room was divided by another such partition running at right angles to the other, and formed two bed rooms. A stair case went up on the out side of the porch. The whole of the upper part of the house was one large room with the rafters and shingles forming the overhead part. This is the architecture of a typical log house of West Virginia.

As he approached he saw a hale, hearty old lady coming from the house to the road, or though to speak to him. She had a determined air. Weston saw just as she climbed down from the porch, and saw a pretty girl appear in the door.

"Oh, grandma, for goodness sakes, don't!" Weston heard her say.

"I will, Eliza Jane! Now stop your foolin'! I aint goin' to have him breakin' down the fence and lettin' all the stock in on the wheat."

She insisted, it seemed, but the old lady came on in a dogged way that denoted that she was going to do something unusual. The girl withdrew and peeped out the window. Weston came up and saluted the old lady, who was Mrs Casey. Before he could introduce himself, she said, sternly:

"Young man, did you see any thing of an animal as you come up the road?"

Weston to think whether he had seen anything special in the way of animal life, but nothing had caught his eye. He imagined the old lady must be a little crazy, but he was a gentlemen and saw no cause to smile. "What kind of an animal?" he asked vaguely.

"Why, er-r-r, a cow-beast?"

"I did not see any cow that I remember."

"I don't mean a cow, young man er—just the opposite!"

"Oh, I believe I did see the animal you mentioned in the wheat field just out of sight down the road. If you will allow me I will drive him out."

We will be mighty thankful, for they aint any men folks about the house. If you would just put him in the barn yard and shut the gate you would be doing us a big favor. And please lay up the fence."

As Weston drove the big Hereford bull to the barn yard, he fully appreciated the situation of the old lady. A big drove of cows had just come to the gap and the wheat field with its wavy green blades was far ahead of any on nearby farms, and a dozen cows would have played havoc with it. To Mrs Casey's ideas of propriety, it had been a very painful task, and, if she had not been in mortal terror of the "animal," she could never have brought herself to have appealed to a stranger. This false delicacy, so prevalent among the people of the section of which we write, if an error, is on the right side, and thought it has been deplored by many writers, yet after all it does not matter very much.

When Weston appeared at the house and made known his business, the old lady seemed never to have seen him before. She was intimately acquainted with the man whom Weston was hunting, but all the information she gave must go over to another chapter. Weston had walked as far as he cared that day, and he asked if he could stop with them overnight. The five miles he had walked seemed like twenty to him. Grandma Casey told him he could stay if he could put up with their way of living, and immediately set to work to plan a supper. When he had arranged to stay, the door was darkened—or rather brightened—by the form of the pretty girl whom the old lady introduced as "my granddaughter Eliza Jane Casey."

One delightful feature of a visit to a home like this is the one fireside in which the fire never goes out from one year's end to another. When a stranger is bid to stay he sees all that are in the house, and there is no such thing known as the task of "entertaining the guest." All come and go freely, and the poor traveler who is forced to impose upon the hospitality of strangers does not feel that his presence has divided a once happy household.

New York News Letter.

THE child murder mystery is at last solved. Central office detectives located the murderess—the child's mother. The mother has told the whole story. It is the same old story. The father of the child deserted and left for parts unknown. The woman secured a place as a domestic in a private family, receiving $16 per month, and boarded her baby with a cousin. Lately the woman struck up a friendship with a man which turned her head. The baby stood in the way of her getting married, and one cold, snowy night she took the little innocent and boarded a train for Rockville Centre, Long Island; gave the baby some carbolic acid in a secluded place, which killed it. Then she stripped the body of its clothing and threw it in a hen-coop. She told her story in a cool manner. What with this woman is either two things: be put te death in the electric chair or imprisonment for life. Most likely the latter punishment will be given her. How a mother could have done such a crime! A beast takes care of its young and protects them with her life. But this woman, this mother—well. Form your own conclusions.

The military carnival starts in tonight—March 14—and promises a success financially and otherwise.

The weather was so mild Sunday, March 13, that about 10,000 persons journeyed to Coney Island and strolled along its beach. One or two hotels were open and they did a flourishing business. What a change from 10 years ago, when we had that memorable blizzard March 22, 1888. The snow was up to the second story of houses in some streets. The cold was bitter and many lost their lives through exposure.

A large and disastrous fire occurred in the Bowery Sunday night. The building was known as the Bowery Mission Lodging House. Eleven men were burned to death, six of whom were recognizable. This mission was run by the proprietor of the "Christian Herald." The cause is supposed to have resulted from the stump of a lighted cigarette being thrown into a heap of rubbish. The unfortunates will be buried at the expense of the proprietor of the Mission.

There is a man living at Binghamton, N. Y., who has the suicidal mania. This poor fool has tried to kill himself 20 times in 24. At present he is walking around with a bullet in his brain. He has even been run over by a railroad train, taken paris green, and hanged himself several times. He had better give it up and die a natural death.

Here is what William J. Bryan said the other night about General Fitzhugh Lee, at Alanta, Georgia, before an audience of 10,000:

"Within the last two weeks we have had an illustration of the unity of the American people in front of a danger which was possible and probable. This danger they have met as one man, declaring their readiness to die in defense of their country. If so happened that the representative at Havana were the Confederate uniform, and yet Fitzhugh Lee has discharged his duty with such courage, such prudence, such patriotism, that you can not find in all the north land one man who would suggest his removal."

The cheering here became deafening.

Sarah Bernhardt, the famous French actress, has a pet in the shape of a tiger cub. This is the second one she has had. The first grew to be such a size that her friends persuaded upon her to send it to the Paris "Zoo." She says she has always regretted the fact that she took their advice, and furthermore says that she intends to keep the present one, even should it grow as large as an elephant. Parisians say it is a strange sight to see Mrs Bernhardt out walking with the tiger cub trotting on behind. The maid has the job of feeding the lovely animal.

What a shame it is that in this enlightened age so many people actually kill themselves through the use of cocaine, morphine, etc. Some of the smartest men and women of the day take these drugs to quiet pain; after awhile the habit grows, and before they are aware of it they are slaves to their use. The sale of opium, cocaine, morphine, etc., should be very strict and covered by law. The druggists make a fortune selling these drugs.

A Chinese wedding took place in the City Hall on Tuesday, March 15. The names of the contracting parties were Sam Ping Lee and Show Quay Chinn. These Chinese belong to the 400 of Chinatown. Alderman Geagan made them man and wife. The bride's age was put at 19. The groom at 34. The papers describe her as a pale faced woman. She was covered with jewelry. A large diamond shone at her throat, rings of gold incased with diamonds and rubies, covered her fingers; on the back of her hair was seen a funnily-shaped tiara, ornamented with diamonds, the pendants made of pearls, the whole affair falling over her neck and shoulders. Heavy earrings adorned her ears. The bride had on a lilac-colored silk, smeared over with black to give it a good effect, with a profusion of heavy braid at the waist. The brides-maid had a costume of olive green, yellow and black, and a small-sized jewelry store was strung on her. The party consisted of about 150 Celestials and they all came in carriages. After the happy couple were married the Alderman shook hands with Mrs Sam Lee Ping and made a motion as if to kiss the bride, but it was no go, as the Chinese do not believe in promiscuous kissing. By the way the groom is a very wealthy man, being an official of the Central Pacific Railroad. [The men folks of Marlinton will not care about this item, but the ladies are always interested in these events.]

Mr Moody, the evangelist, is in New York City again. He addresses three meetings daily—10, 3, and 8. He holds his hearers. All classes come to hear him—the newsboys, the poor, the rich,—every body. When the audience sings and he has an idle that they are not singing loud enough he calls out: "More power!" Then he takes another tack and says: "Now let the ladies show the men how to sing." "Do it alone ladies." At the 3 o'clock meeting something like 5,000 people were gathered to hear this most wonderful man.

A sixteen months' old child climbed to death the other day in Brooklyn. It seems that the mother of the child cut an apple in quarters but forgot to peel it. The skin got lodged in the windpipe.

FOOTBALL.

Frost, 4; Oak Grove, 1.

A lively game of football was played at Frost Saturday. Frost won the toss and chose the east goal. Oak Grove forced the playing for about five minutes, when Frost settled down and carried the ball back. The most terrific rushing of the whole game was now engaged in, and Upton Sharp was the man who made the lucky shot for Frost. This was the only goal scored on either side in the half.

Shortly after recommencing play the visitor's goal keeper fumbled a hardly pressed ball and C. Sharp drove it through. A. Sharp was the next man to score for Frost.

The Oak Grove men stood the contest very well, notwithstanding some of them were completely knocked out and had to call on substitutes. Now C. C. Sharp after a magnificent run through the backs scored goal no. 4. Desultory play was then indulged in, and this time the home goal fumbled an easy one, the final score standing 4—1.

Oak Grove—Jim Sutton (goal) Ezra Woodsell, Blake King (fullback), Sandy Sutton, Harrison Sheets, Jesse Hudson (half backs), Ed Hudson, C. John Galford, Chris Dilley, Ward Hudson, Craig Galford (forward).

Frost—Sherman Gibson (goal), Grant Dilley, Butler Sharp (fu back), Sherman Curry, Holmes Sharp, George Sharp (half backs), C. C. Sharp (C. Upton Sharp, Ason Sharp, Warwick Shinaberry, Charles K. Moore (forward.)

G. S. W.

Blake King went from Marlinton to play his position with Oak Grove.

The Frost team can very well lay claim to the championship of Pocahontas for 1897.

It is very necessary to the life of the game that the goal keeper sometimes fumble the ball, public opinion to the contrary notwithstanding. Otherwise few points would ever be scored.

The Pen or the Sword.

The Marlinton school, taught by Misses Lillie Friel and Rella Clark closed its sessions last Friday. At night pleasing elocutionary display was made of reading, recitation, and debate, aided by the members of the famous "literary society." N. C. McNeil and N. B. Price made speeches on the affirmative, and S. B. Scott, Jr., and J. H. G. Wilson supported the negative. By a rising vote the nays had it, refuting the proposition, "Beneath the rule of men entirely great, the pen is mightier than the sword."

They talk about Triple Alliance,
And the might of the pen and the sword;
But if Spain sets the States at defiance,
We'll chuck the whole thing overboard.

An Invitation.

THANKS to those who have called since our last invitation through The Times. We have had a rush, which we enjoy. Now, we extend the invitation indefinitely, hoping to have many callers and that our dealings may be agreeable and profitable. We on our part, promise to do our best to give you good value for the money you spend with us. Come in while at Court. Yours, for bargains in high grade Saddles and Harness goods,

R. M. Yeager has returned from Grafton.

George Bandstick, of Dilley's Mill, was in town Monday.

John S. Moore has moved from Mill Point to Captain Smith's place near Edray.

John Adam McNeel, of Lewisburg, was in Marlinton last Friday, having spent a few days with his friends in Pocahontas.

HUNTERSVILLE.

Dr. J. B. Lockridge, we are happy to note, is able to be out again.

George Beverage, of Buckhannon, a traveling salesman paid our town a visit this week.

Patterson Hamilton, who has been in Webster County for several months, came home Thursday.

Mr Hoge, one of the oldest tobacco drummers in the State, called on our merchants Saturday.

G. W. Wagner is busily engaged in papering his house. O. E. McKeever is assisting him.

Lee Gum, of Highland, was a pleasant guest at the Huntersville Hotel this week.

T. M. McCorkle, the tobacco drummer, who travels for F A Davis, Baltimore, was with us one day last week.

The auction here last Saturday was largely attended. The goods sold very low. C. B. Sweeker auctioneer.

Messrs Jake, Cam and Harry Beard and Forest Hill, of Academy; C. B. Sweeker, Sam Sheets and Cliff Noel, of Dunmore, were here on business this week.

John Adam McNeel, who moved from this county to Rockbridge several years ago, was in town last Friday. He says every thing is quiet and no news of importance.

T. J. Williams, of Frost, registered at the Huntersville Hotel Thursday. He was on his way to Hot Springs to get samples, as he expects to travel for a tobacco firm this summer.

S. J. Boggs, who has been to Baltimore buying goods, returned Thursday. He says business is a little dull at this time in the city, on account of the anticipated war with Spain.

Our Assessor Joe Buzard and his mule have undergone a change in the last few days, and are now ready to begin their yearly round of listing personal property in the county. Both are nicely trimmed up and it is hard to tell which barber deserves the most credit: the one who shaved Joe Buzard, or the one who shaved Joe, the mule, as the work in both cases was nicely done.

The Browns Mountain school, taught by Miss Nola Shrader, closed last Friday evening with a spelling *bee in which Miss Lillie Gab*ert proved herself champion speller. They then decided to further celebrate the occasion by having a social, and the hospitable home of Mr Mac Irvine was selected as the place. Soon all were assembled in the cozy parlor and every thing went as merrily as a 'marriage bell.'

ALFRED.

LOBELIA.

Warm, fine growing showers and vegetation springing forth nicely.

About 250 people attended the funeral services yesterday.

H. L. Caseholt sold about $2,000 worth of cattle, to a north western man, to be delivered next fall.

Joseph Snedegar, of Loverage, will move to our county this year. We give him a hearty welcome.

Miss Mintie Taylor, of Friars Hill, is still with her sister, Mrs W. B. Hill.

Rev A. R. Snedegar, son of J. C. Snedegar, of Jacox, was married recently.

Some of the boys are trying to get a saw-mill to saw some timber to build a church at Lobelia.

Mrs Ann Walton, who left here about four months ago in search of a man, has found him near Parkersburg and has married again.

We learn by letter that Mrs D. W. Hill, of Illinois, has married a doctor. She is a sister-in-law of W. B. Hill.

Rev C. M. Fultz arrived on Saturday, and preached two able sermons on Sunday; also a funeral on Monday. Two of the Hills started to Frost to day for his household goods.

OBSERVER.

KNAPP'S CREEK.

Rev Adamson will have charge of the Frost circuit. We welcome him in our midst. An able preacher and a fine man.

The Frost debating society closed for the season Tuesday night, the question was, "Resolved: that the world is growing morally better. This society has been instructive as well as entertaining.

Dr Lockridge has been kept busy attending to professional duties, and we are sorry to know he is quite complaining from the effects of grippe. The Doctor has had some surgical work to do recently. He removed a bony tumor from the leg of M. F. Herold, Esq., which commenced to grow when a child and recently had been giving him considerable trouble. He also performed a surgical operation on Joe Sharp, Esq. The trouble was caused by his falling backward on a locust peg, lost so twelve years ago, which resulted in a running sore similar to fistula. Both operations have been successful. The Doctor is well equipped with a fine set of instruments and a handsome operating chair given him by his uncle, Dr F S. Moore, of Iowa.

BILL AND JOE.

Keller and have some for sale at A. B. McCoach's Huntersville.

J. W. Beard & Bro.

BUCKEYE.

Farmers are busy plowing and preparing to sow oats.

Otis Morrison and Jim Beverage are home from camp.

Mrs Sarah Jane McNeill is no better. Mrs Catherine Kellison is improving.

Miss Maud Kee attended the wedding at Academy last week.

Mrs Killingsworth of Marlinton, has been visiting her father G. W. McKeever.

Mike Myers came home from camp very sick but is about well again.

The debate is still progressing. Last Thursday night the program was as follows: Reading by Miss Laura Overholt, recitation by Miss Grace McNeill. Question: resolved that we owe more to Washington for defending the United States than to Columbus for the discovery of it. To affirm D. T. McNeill, to deny R. E. Overholt, Earnest Weiford, and Harper Adkison. Messrs William and Winters McNeill were the judges, and the affirmative got the decision. Taylor's colleague's were absent but he produced argument enough for all.

Porter Kellison started for home to-day. OBSERVER.

GREEN BANK.

R. B. Kerr, of Gillaspie, was on the streets one day last week.

L. O. Beard says he can plow ten acres a day now—if is a boy.

Miss Bertie Beard is teaching a subscription school at the academy at Green Bank.

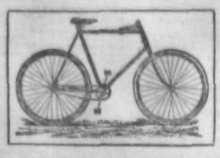
HOW TO FIND OUT.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What to Do.



There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root, the great kidney remedy fulfils every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold urin and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following the use liquor, beer, or wine, and over comes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists, price fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet both sent free by mail, upon receipt of three two-cent stamps to cover cost of postage on the bottle. Mention The Times and send your address to Dr Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The proprietors guarantee the genuineness of this offer.

BIOGRAPHIC NOTES.

John Webb, Revolutionary Veteran. An Irish, Branchless Tree.

JOHN WEBB, the subject of this biographic article, is a character about whom it may be said as was said about Melchizedek, he was without father or mother, so far as any biographical purpose can be served. His Milesian brogue and his habit of saying not foolish things, and never doing any thing very wisely, tended to corroborate what he always averred that he was of Irish nativity. He had the papers showing that he was an honorably discharged soldier of the Revolution, and as a pensioner received ninety-six dollars a year. How he ever came to Pocahontas is simply conjectural; but from the fact he he chose his place of rest near Mt. Zion, he must have had some acquaintance with parties that may have been in the army when he was.

This Revolutionary veteran, tho he exposed his life for independence, never owned any land and never married. Yet he wanted a home of his own, a place where he could lay his head and feel at home,—which was very commendable in him. He received permission of William Moore, son of Pennsylvania John Moore, to use without rent as much land as he might want for a cabin, garden, and "truck patch." He built himself a cozy cabin, opened up two or three acres where he produced corn, vegetables, and poultry. On this he subsisted, with the assistance of his pension and such wages as he could earn in harvesting and haying for the farmers on Knapp's Creek. This spot was on the place recently owned by Ralph Dilley, and now in the possession of William Moore, son of the late James C. Moore.

One of John Webb's favorite places to work in harvest and haymaking was at Isaac Moore's. At this period late in the teens of this century making hay was a long, tedious industry. One morning quite early as the hands gathered in the meadow, when Webb, to use his own expression, came up missing. It was surmised that he had worn off his "wire edge" on the hot sun day before and was about to give it up for the time being, and so the hands went to work. Between nine and ten o'clock they heard his jovial brogue in the direction of the apple cellar, and upon looking in that course Webb's head was seen, "red as a beet," peering over the comb of the cellar roof. He inquired in the most impassioned manner whether any one would like to have a "dhrink ave cither." It seems Webb knew where to look for the lost "wire edge," and had indulged his thirst until he was so much exhilerated as to climb the roof with nimble feet and willing hands and from his lofty perch invite others to share with his jovial comforts that he had been finding for the past hours in "dhrinkths ave either."

This Revolutionary veteran had one of his arms very curiously tattooed between the wrist and elbow with the initials of his name and emblematic characters like anchors and arrows, whose significance was not known. This was done while he was in the army, and several other soldiers were tattooed at the same time. The chemicals used disabled them so much that a regimental order was issued prohibiting the practice. Tattooing seems to have been a fad among soldiers and sailors. If any thing should happen their personality might be identified and assistance obtained from some guild or fraternity. At least, this was the supposition. He never disclosed to any one what the characters symbolized; the initials of course could speak for themselves. It is commonly believed now that he served with the troops from Augusta County under General Mathews.

In the later years of his life John Webb was very piously inclined and was demonstrative of his religious emotions, and was long remembered as the life of many "meal meetings" at old Mt. Zion, Frost, and elsewhere. He would frequently have "big jerks," which was such a feature in the revival services so common in the rolling and uncouth parts of the late and present centuries. As long as he lived he would always have a spasmodic jerk as he repeated the Amen, even when asking a blessing on his meals.

This phenomenon that characterized the religious services of most of the denominations a hundred years ago in Kentucky, Tennessee, and Virginia, has been attentively considered by mental experts as one of the curiosities of the emotional faculty of the human race. What surprises them in their investigations is to find some of the most pronounced examples of its influence among the Mohamedan Dervishes in the East and in the West it seems to have been the most striking feature in the Indian Ghost solemnities but a few years since. The Dervishes furiously deny the existence of the Holy Ghost, as a fiction of Christianity; and American Indians have never so much as heard that there is a Holy Ghost. Max Nordau, an eminent Jewish scientist, thinks he has found the explanation to be a disease of the nervous system, that is so highly infectious as to sweep the whole round of humanity at recurring periods.

John Webb remained in his bachelor home until he became disabled by the infirmities of advanced age. Then it was the late Martin Dilley, of revered memory, took charge of the old veteran. He built a very comfortable cabin for his use in the yard near his own commodious dwelling and cared for him until the old soldier "fought his last battle" on the borders of the unseen world. This building is standing yet. His "silent tent" is in the Dilley graveyard on the line between the Andrew Dilley and John Dilley lands. Here in this quiet spot unheeded o'er his sleeping dust the storms of life may beat in pitiless rage.

He will not always remain so however; for just as certain as Christ lives he is going to descend with a shout, the voice of the arch angel and the trump of God, and the dead in Christ will rise first. Then we who may be alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord will be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air, and so shall we ever be with the Lord. Wherefore let us comfort one another with these words when we think of Martin Dilley and John Webb now resting in their lowly graves so near each other. W. T. P.

LOST!

Have You Seen Him? $100,000.00 Reward, Dead or Alive.

A Lean Fat Boy With an Ingrowing Nail on His Romanesque Proboscis.

GREEN BANK, W. VA., March 31. —Missing from this place about the 6th of next month, 1893, a tall, complexioned young man about 5 feet 16 inches of age and in height about 37 years. He had on when last seen a pair of swallow tail seal skin trousers with wienerwurst stripes; double barrel frock coat lined with bean soup calico, and water tight canvass boots with patent-applied-for leather tops. He also wore a Mechanic's Delight Pfug Hat and a crosseyed standup collar, and was accompanied by a dude dog with a split tongue and crysses in its pants. The young man is badly pockmarked at the back of his head and has a slight impediment in his looks. He wore a Grecian Bend on his upper lip, which he often uses as a receptacle for schooners and jerked tripe.

He carried an empty carpet bag in one hand and a wooden bag in the other, the latter containing several screw steamers, three railroad tunnels, and four lunchcakes, and a safety razor marked "Dangerous." At first it was supposed he had walked off on his ear while laboring under a hypnotic or jimnastic spell because being born before his younger brother; and he furthermore claims that his mother was present when he himself was born.

His mind is easily influenced. When asked to take something at the bar he rarely refuses, and always drinks his liquor through a straw in order to take it straight—as he was the sole support of seven pet theories advanced by his deceased grandfather.

When last heard from he was shoveling wind off of Ebeler ridge at 5c a minute to supply vacancies in the stonepiles occasioned by Sweeker's sentence. If said boy fails to comply with the above contract he will be shot before Billy B. Wooddell and prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law by Attorney P. L. Rhobera, and after words rode on a rail to Point Look Out. Address all communications to detective C. L. Keener, Point Lookout, West Virginia.

The Osborne
SPRING-TOOTH HARROW.

The frames are made in one piece of steel angle bar, and formed to withstand all strain without buckling or warping. The teeth in this harrow are so spaced that they will not trail each other. Pulverizing the ground thoroughly. The steel pipe tooth bars are mounted in malleable boxes secured to the frame, and will not bend or break. The peculiar shape of the teeth curling twothirds about the bar gives the greatest amount of spring possible without straining the bolts, and because of their shape and fastening are stronger than used on any other harrow. By the levers the depth of work can be regulated while the harrow is in motion. The draft is steady and direct as the harrow has no side motion.

ALL THESE FEATURES COMBINED HAVE MADE THE OSBORNE CELEBRATED.

MRS CASEY remembered Harvey perfectly. He had called at her house the day he had been separated from Weston's father. She was the first one to give him news of what had happened. Her husband was a Southern sympathizer, tho' he was too old for active services. Besides he was a physician and it was absolutely necessary that he should stay at home and attend to his practice. At the time we speak of, a raid had been made into that neighborhood and several regiments of Union troops occupied a strong position on the turnpike, prepared to check the advance of any Confederate troops who might use that road. With such a force of troops present, the home guards disbanded, and went into hiding.

To fully understand the situation of the country, the reader must remember that in West Virginia, especially in the central sections, the people were divided against themselves. There were no courts and no law. The rule was very much like Rob Roy's, that those might take who had the power, and those might keep who could. It was still Virginia, and the section around Prattville, the majority of citizens sided with the South. The men who stayed at home were in a state of excitement and the worst passions showed themselves, and many terrible things happened because of the war, that were not of the war. The home guards were good to harass a luke-warm patriot when the regular soldiers were at a distance, but at the first sign of hostilities they crawled into the woods, and came in home at nights for some thing to eat. They belonged to the south because they said they did, not because they sided any particular cause.

On the side of the Union were those bands which necessarily arose when the police regulations of the States amounted to nothing. They were those who shunned regular service, and went in gangs, armed, and under the polite name of independent companies, but who never having been mustered in, could not after the war claim anything in the bountiful distribution of pension money. The regular armies found them in every locality. They moved in the border lands and did effective duty as scouts. In the absence of either army they kept up their quarrels with the home guards. A man was marked for death, and it was accomplished by lying in ambush and shooting him before he knew an enemy was near. They helped many a man to the kind of death mentioned in the following lines:

"With ruthless tread death comes on And
No plea, no prayer delivers him.
From amidst busy life's unfinished plans,
With sudden hand it severs him.
And ready, or not ready, no delay,
Forth to his judges bar he must away."

Scouts, refugees and adventurers formed these companies, and there were deadly feuds between them and the home guards. They were on the order of desperate guerillas, young, active, adventurous.

The home guards were soldiers in a very mild and harmless form. They, too, were accused of "bushwhacking," but such violence was not often to be attributed to the home guards. The rebel bushwhacker was a criminal who killed by himself for the love of killing and plunder. The "swamp dragoon" as the independent companies were called, went in organized bands and had hiding places carefully concealed and guarded, until the presence of the scary mule there held and they were sent about through the country as scouts to gain whatever information might be useful to the commanding officers.

The events of that day in 1865 in which the carefully laid plans of the two union generals to get to Catawba were frustrated because known after the war.

Lige Jacobs was the captain, or rather head-man, of the desperadoes, who had seized the opportunity of the war to act as they pleased with other people's lives and property. He was watching for signs of any advance on the part of a large force of Confederates who were camped forty miles south of the Federal forces. One evening he saw an officer in the Confederate uniform ride up to a farm house and dismount. His horse was put in the barn to be fed, and Jacobs got it out shortly after dark and rode it away. He collected a half-dozen of his men and lay near the road all night, in ambush for the young officer. In addition to the dispatches which the young man carried, Lige wanted his life, as he did every one who wore the uniform, and he hated all such enemies with the blind and unreasoning hatred of a savage.

Dawn beginning to show in the east, the men left their place of concealment in some low bush on the roadside, and went on a mile or so where the road wound round the base of a steep rocky mountain. On the top of a cliff the men lay down and waited. Soon after dawn the courier appeared in the distance. He had after a night's delay secured another horse. He came in a long swinging trot.

The morning sun was just tinting the tops of the hills. Jacob's command was that no one should fire but himself. With his long mountain rifle resting in the crevice between two great boulders, he felt the same thrill of excitement the hunter experiences who sees a deer coming for a long distance, straight to the muzzle of his gun. For fifty yards, Jacobs has had the gray coat in his rifle sights. As he comes closer he changes the aim to the head and when only a few yards from him, he gives a slight cough. The courier instantly stops, as does the deer at an unexpected noise, and the rifle in the hands of Lige Jacobs rings out with a sharp report on the morning air. Jacobs, who could "center" a shot at that distance, has found the mark an easy one. The form of a man lies in the road, shot through the temple, and the riderless horse gallops back to its home in an hour; the owner remains gloomily that Lige Jacobs has been at his work again, but does not investigate.

The group of men rifle the body. They look for the dispatches and find them. Having come prepared the body is carried some distance into the woods and buried, every shred of clothing having been taken. The gang then reach their horses and start to ride into camp, where they will make a report to the Colonel, in their simple, unvarnished way, and the Colonel will think what innocent unsophisticated boys these are. They have made him believe that they are as honest as the day is long. He feels like he ought to tell them that they might help their horses to a feed from some rich farmer's crib, whether they have the money or not, but desists.

As they are speeding swiftly, they meet the young cotton planter riding a mule. They hustle him along with them. In five or six miles they turn up a grassy hollow and arrive at the home of one of the bush-whackers. The horses are fed here and the woman cooks them some fat meat and corn bread. Jacobs had been exercising his ingenuity to give a satisfactory account of how he had got the dispatches without getting the man. He attempted that in vain, and he had to lie as he had never lied before when the officers at headquarters, who all had a profound conviction that he had bush-whacked his man and robbed him at leisure, cross-examined him at great length. He was indisposed to risk such another soul searching experience, even with the guileless old Colonel at camp who though him such a good, honest scout. When he captured the stranger on a mule, he saw a safe way out of the difficulty. He would just put on the clothes of the murdered officer, and instead him to successfully in as a prisoner of war, and delivered the dispatches.

Harvey came to the home of the Casey's that evening. Doctor Casey had been out hiding the horses. Mrs Casey told him of having seen such a man as he described riding by with some of Lige Jacob's gang. There was no telling what they had done or would do with him. Mrs Casey remembered that Harvey had spent a year or two in that neighborhood, but did not know what had become him. While he was pursuing his inquiries, Weston spent most of his time at the widow Casey's. It was not remarkable that he became an inmate of the family by simply walking up to the house one evening on a matter of business. He was in a country where a man might ride up to stay all night and make it his home for years.

NEW YORK NEWS LETTER.

THE Kentucky and Kearsarge were launched March 24 at Newport News, Va. The Kentucky was christened by Governor Bradley's daughter with a bottle of pure spring water, but before she reached the sea the superstitious sailors and the majority of the 500 Kentuckians present broke hundreds of pint-bottles of prime old Kentucky whiskey over her bows.

Lieut. Jenkins' body has been recovered. It will be sent to Key West. This brave fellow could have escaped but he lingered in hope of securing important papers. He did his duty. Will the murder of the 257 brave American sailors and 2 officers ever be avenged?

Two Maine hunters were trampled to death by an infuriated moose. Both skulls were fractured and the skin stripped off of their faces. A bull moose is a terrible animal when cornered and fights to the death.

A well-known society woman in New York has tired of fashionable life and has started a typewriter office. She has made a success, business increasing to such an extent that four assistants are necessary. Her name is Elizabeth Markoe Marquand, and she is a very wealthy and religious woman. May others follow in her footsteps.

Madison Square Garden this afternoon and evening (March 25) will be the scene of the "Journal's" Grand Carnival of Sports, gotten up for the benefit of the Maine Monument fund. Over 3000 have volunteered their services. John L. Sullivan, who fought every body for 12 years hand-running, will speak for three minutes on Spain. Jimmy Michael, the great bicycle rider, will ride a record-breaking race. Bob Fitzsimmons will give an exhibition in bag-punching. Yousouf, the Turk, wrestling champion of Europe, will wrestle with the American wrestler Ernest Roeber. Col W. F. Cody, (Buffalo Bill) will ride. In fact every notable in the sporting line will be on deck to help swell the fund. In the evening Pain, the world famous fireworks man, will set off set pieces, sky rockets, Roman candles, colored fire, etc., etc., from the roof of the Garden. But he will eclipse anything he has ever done in a pyrotechnic way, at the conclusion of his fireworks display, in the shape of the battleship Maine. The Garden holds thousands and the receipts will be very large. Price of admission for afternoon is 50c. In the evening a trifle higher.

A thief, while trying to effect his escape on the house-tops the other day, fell down an air shaft to the distance of 5 stories on to a stone pavement and was killed instantly. It is needless to say that the policeman who was chasing him did not follow, but came down the usual way by the stairs.

BIOGRAPHIC NOTES.

John McLaughlin—Pioneer of Jacksons River.

FOR the past seventy five or eighty years the McLaughlin name has been a familiar one among our people. For this reason the relationship so long identified with our county history deserves special mention therefor. This relationship may be considered in groups as it is so numerous and widely distributed and derived from a varied tho related ancestry.

John McLaughlin, the ancestor of several Pocahontas families of that name, was a native of Ireland, and settled on Jackson's River, seven or eight miles south of Monterey, and was one of the pioneer settlers of that vicinity previously to the Revolution. The lands he settled were lately in possession of his son, John McLaughlin, Jr.

His family consisted of six sons and five daughters. In reference to these persons the following particulars have been mainly learned from Mrs Morgan Grimes, one of the descendants by the third or fourth remove.

Margaret McLaughlin became Mrs William Carpenter and lived on Deer Creek, near Green Bank.

Nancy McLaughlin was married to John Carpenter and lived on Thomas Creek, near Dunmore, where Peter Carpenter now lives.

Jane McLaughlin became Mrs Alexander Benson, and settled in Illinois.

Mary McLaughlin was married to John Beverage and lived on Straight Creek near Monterey.

Susan McLaughlin became Mrs Kyle Holcomb, and went to West Virginia.

Abigail was married to Thomas Galford and lived near Dunmore on lands lately owned by J. Hervey Curry, Esq.

Major Daniel McLaughlin upon his marriage with Mary Carpenter, settled on Deer Creek, opening lands now held by the Oliver brothers. In reference to his family the following particulars are in hand:

His son, the late David McLaughlin, married Jane Wanless, daughter of William Wanless on Back Alleghany, and settled on lands lately occupied by his sons Joseph and James. [Special mention of this family in the Wanless sketch.]

Abigail became Mrs A. Jackson Moore, on Back Alleghany.

Mary Elizabeth was married to George Sutton and lived near Green Bank.

John M. McLaughlin married Mary Jane Moore, daughter of W. D. Moore on Elk. John was a Confederate soldier, taken prisoner, and died at Camp Chase, Ohio.

Margaret Jane was married to Morgan Grimes, Esq., and lives near Mount Zion in the Hills.

Major Daniel McLaughlin was much respected. He was a very hard working man and almost wore himself out clearing lands. He was a major of the militia and was a fine-looking officer on the parades that came off annually.

Hugh McLaughlin, of John the Irish immigrant, married Sally Grimes, daughter of Arthur, of Grimes, daughter of Arthur, of Felix Grimes the pioneer. He lived near Huntersville on lands now owned by Dr Patterson and J. J. Beard. Mrs Mary Hogsett, J. A. McLaughlin, on Brown's creek, and Lieut James Hickman McLaughlin, a Confederate officer who perished in the war, were his children. He was a popular and prominent citizen.

Samuel McLaughlin, another son of John the early Jackson River settler, married a Miss Wright and lived on Jackson's River. There were two children, Mary Jane who was married to Martin Sharp and lives on little Back Creek, near Mt. Grove. H. P. McLaughlin married Amanda Bird, daughter of the late George Bird, Esq., Valley Creek, Va. He lives on Brown's Creek, near Huntersville. He was a Confederate soldier. Our readers have seen some of his letters in The Times describing the dangers, privations and hardships that a true soldier had to endure in the war between the States.

Robert McLaughlin, another son of John the pioneer, died in early manhood. He is reported to have been a young man of much promise.

James McLaughlin settled in Illinois soon after his marriage. His wife's name is not remembered. He was enthused by the gold excitement of 1849 and crossed the plains to California in search of wealth. He was in a measure successful. It may be said too to his credit he was not so very hard to satisfy, and so he returned to his family and settled in Missouri.

John McLaughlin, Jr., married Sally Hamilton and spent his days at the homestead on Jackson's River, Highland County. His children were Ewing, Ada, Sally, and Letcher.

John McLaughlin was widely known for his jovial ways and amusing expressions, and was also somewhat eccentric in his ideas. When about to be overcome by disease and the infirmities of an advanced age, he pointed out a spot overlooking his dwelling that is well nigh inaccessible and gave positive orders to have his body buried there. He seemed to abhor the idea of being trampled upon and appeared to feel that his head would be secure from such indignity if he could have his grave in a spot almost impossible to reach, and so steep that erect posture would be impracticable. It was his boast that when he was alive he generally came out "on top," and so he seemed to wish to be on top when not alive.

His friends saw to it that his wishes should be complied with to the very letter. A more unique burial scene never witnessed in that region. The pall-bearers on their knees and holding to the bushes and rocks with one hand and the coffin handles with the other, and the procession following on all fours, compose a scene the like of which may never be witnessed while the world stands. Here an illustration of the ruling passion strong in death.

We close this paper hoping ere long to prepare one or two more in illustrating the McLaughlin relationship.

How Then Regard the Oft-Engaged Girl.—Edward W. Bok writes of the importance of the betrothal with characteristic force and earnestness in the April Ladies' Home Journal. An engagement to marry he considers one of the most serious compacts in life, as sacred as marriage, and only the most extraordinary circumstances would warrant the being broken. Only one other agency—a cowhide—is responsible for more broken hearts and wrecked lives than broken betrothals. Mr Bok frankly says that a man looks up on an oft-engaged girl as he does upon a peach with much of the bloom rubbed off.

Bald heads are becoming the fashion among the middle aged. This can be prevented by the timely use of Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer.

The West Virginia University now has the highest enrollment ever made in its history.

Drs. Maybe and Mustbe.

You choose the old doctor before the young one. Why? Because you don't want to entrust your life to inexperienced hands. True, the young doctor may be experienced. But the old doctor must be. You take no chances with Dr. Maybe, when Dr. Mustbe is in reach. Same with medicines as with medicine makers — the long-tried remedy has your confidence. You prefer experience to experiment — when you are concerned. The new remedy may be good — but let somebody else prove it. The old remedy must be good — judged on its record of cures. Just one more reason for choosing AYER'S Sarsaparilla in preference to any other. It has been the standard household sarsaparilla for half a century. Its record inspires confidence — 50 years of cures. If others may be good, Ayer's Sarsaparilla must be. You take no chances when you take AYER'S Sarsaparilla.

Anglo-Saxon Union.

The London Mail, under the caption of "A Voice from the West," prints a poem by Alfred Austin, the Poet Laureate, which is based on the idea of co-operation between Great Britain and the United States.

"What is the voice I hear
On the wind of the Western sea?
Sentinel, listen from out Cape Clear,
And say what the voice may be.
'Tis a proud, free people calling loud
To a people proud and free.

"And it says to them, Kinsmen, hail,
We severed have been too long;
Now let us have done with the wayward tale,
A tale of an ancient wrong,
And our friendship last long as love doth last
And be stronger than death is strong.

"Aware ye them, sons of the self-same race,
And blood of the self-same clan,
Let us speak with each other face to face
And answer as man to man,
And loyally love and trust each other
As none but free men can.

"Now fling them out to the breezes,
Shamrock, thistle and rose,
And the Star-Spangled Banner out-toss with those,
A message to friends and foes,
Wherever the [illegible] are seen,
And wherever the [illegible] blows.

"A message to bond and thrall to wake
For wherever we come, we [illegible],
The throne of the tyrant shall rock and quake,
And his menace be void and vain,
For you are the lords of a strong young land,
And we are lords of the main."

Deafness Cannot be Cured,

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflamation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

instructed to put his field into a condition to absorb nitrogen from the air. This can be done by planting clover, peas, beans, or any other leguminous plant with corn or wheat crop. These plants having an affinity for nitrogen drink it in, as it were, and when the crop proper is gathered, the peas or clover is ploughted under and the nitrogen retained. About 80 per cent. of the atmosphere is nitrogen, hence the supply is inconceivable as to abundance, and there is no real difficulty about that so long as clover, peas and beans can be had.

The average yield of corn is about 27 bushels. Last summer a gentlemen in Kentucky, sowed a one land in the blue grass region that had yielded 40 bushels to the acre. He analyzed a pinch of the soil. It was found to be rich in phosphoric acid, fairly supplied with nitrogen, but there was an evident deficiency in potash. He bought two dollars' worth of potash and scattered it over an acre of the forty bushel territory, and at husking time the cut put was ninety bushels of corn. Such information, coming from such a body of scientific gentlemen, is very suggestive of the marvelous results that await the intelligent letters of the ground. S. C. R.

DILLEY'S HILL.

The health of the neighborhood is good at this writing.

O. B. Sharp held singing at Mt. Zion Sunday.

A. W. Fertig is off to Millboro this week.

Squire Grose attended the Hively sale.

Mr Wamsley, of Randolph, is visiting at W. H. Dilley's.

J. F. Hively has gone to Pendleton.

Miss Nola Shrader has closed her school on Browns Mountain.

The football game resulted in several cracked heads and legs and several disabled bodies. Frost is still the champion.

Fine weather still continues with lots of rain falling out. Farmers have been making good use of the late warm spell.

It has been said that March grass never does any good, but we can say that it has been a great benefit to the sheep this season.

James Reed rented J. F. Hively's farm. The community is much pleased to have him in our community.

A large chestnut tree, near the gate of Mr Morgan Grimes, was struck by lightning in February. Another one, not 75 yards from the first, was struck in March.

Elmer and Lanty Moore passed through this part on their way to attend Prof. Barlow's school at Edray. Elmer Moore taught a successful school this winter, and he means to qualify himself for a first class teacher.

A large crowd attended Mr J. F. Hively's sale. Although it rained all day, the people did not seem to mind it and everything sold well. The oil of joy seemed to get the best of several, and the "Silver Tongued Orator" was jollier than usual and made the crowd laugh, whether they felt like it or not.

YOUNG TRULY.

SUNSET ITEMS.

D. W. Dever has moved to Prof. Lentz's.

J. A. and Peyton Moore have been to The Levels for flour.

W. G. Ruckman and William Kelly have been getting in sawlogs.

Miss Wooddell, who has been visiting at Asbury Hiner's has returned to her home on Elk.

Miss Hively, from The Hills, is making her home at P. M. Harper's.

Several lots of cattle are being fed on the creek and some hay hauled off and still some farmers have an abundance.

Messrs Goodett and William Harper expect to hide some hay and take it to the depot.

Ellis McCarty, Esq., recently put up a handsome monument for his father, brother, and sisters in the Harper graveyard. Who will follow his example? This burying-ground has been long neglected.

Born to Mr and Mr and Mrs J. W. Lentz a daughter. Also to Hy Bennett and wife, of Pendleton County, a daughter.

DRY BRANCH.

Arthur Mace moved to Canaan the other day.

W. H. Brady is talking of extending the telephone line to his house.

Dick Sweeker, of Valley Head, was on the Branch looking after the interests of his electric light plant.

Evert Moore takes his umbrella with him when he goes coon-hunting.

Forest Hill was around asking for money and telling men to come to Court.

Edmund Hall was on the Branch looking for a housekeeper yesterday.

It is right amusing to see John Sharp spreading his mouth all over his face simply because it is a girl.

We are having quite a wet spell now, but the grass is still coming and sheep are doing well.

B. B. Earnshaw, Esq., is putting up a new house. The carpenter work is being pushed on by J. McAlpin.

Our good old friend G. C. Hoover, of Linnwood, gave his friends a call recently.

We wonder what Branch Beal is going to do? He has blacked his mustachioos. Look out for the old rooster.

There is quite a time moving in our neighborhood. As soon as one family leave a house another comes in before the first moves out.

J. D. Miller, our horse trader, is going to put J. C. Beal's place in corn this spring. That's right Joe, we love to see the good work go on.

It is quite inspiring to see our friend M. Crummett plowing diligently, with his whiskers flowing in the wild, free air of Valley mountain.

We are glad to note the improvements that are about to be made. J. M. Ware and others are going to run a telephone line from the Forks of Branch to Capt Marshall's for their own personal convenience to save four miles walk when he wants to talk with the captain. The office will be kept at J. F. Ware's.

J. D. Moore is out moving Mack Wood to Egypt. CODY BILL.

DUNMORE.

And it snowed again.

Miss Lizzie Grabill, of Virginia, is visiting at Mr Pritchard's.

Slavin, the tinner man, was in town Friday night.

Mrs L. E. Campbell spent last week in Highland.

Miss Lucy Siple spent a few days in town lately.

Surveyor Baxter did a lot of surveying in the neighborhood last week.

Sid wants to know why good church men can not haul whiskey as well as other men.

C. O. Arbogast bought a wagon load of chairs and rockers from the Dunmore Furniture Shop.

Mr P. D. Yeager is at home from Baltimore, greatly improved in health.

Miss Alice McLaughlin spent a few days at home. She has been in the Sinks so long that she looks like some lady's bear.

If any one wants to lie, let them get one of the Bed Springs, manufactured at Sweeker's shop, and they can lie with ease.

Col S. C. Pritchard is going to have his mill repaired by Ed Mullenfix. Mr Mullenaux is considered the best mill-wright in the State.

Auctioneer Sweeker got wound up at the Boggs sale of goods and before he ran down it took 6 people to get the goods to him.

Rev Caldwell has come back from Kentucky much improved in health and has taken charge of his pastorial work. He preaches at Baxter church every two weeks at 3 P. M.

B. M. Yeager was in town Sunday and reports that the railroad surveyors will commence work this week at the forks of the river and survey down.

There will be a general sing at Green Bank Sunday the 10th at 2 P. M. All come out bring your singing books and Easter Eggs and have a good a time.

Sweeker says he hopes that the devil and the two wool blankets that were stolen from him at the Hively sale will keep the fellow warm the balance of his days.

Some of our Frost correspondents are like unto the Jew. They get hot — quick sad. One of them speaks of the good times this spring and the hunting up of cattle, etc., but he forgot to mention that there is a war breeding fast.

LOBELIA.

Snow and mud. This is hard on the setting hens.

George Smith, of Lewisburg, is working for H. L. Cauchbelt.

Ben McMillion is working for N. S. Clutter.

Some of the boys went to Renicks Valley Saturday.

Rev Faits was up to day looking for eggs to set some hens.

Rurel McCoy came home from Braxton on Sunday, and says that peach trees are in full bloom there.

Some of the people are making molasses. W. E. Hill made seven gallons today, and says he will continue all summer if it profitable.

OBSERVER.

GREEN BANK.

Quite a number passed through town Monday enroute to Marlinton to attend court.

Railroad news again. We wonder if it will blow off as usual.

Rev J. M. Eavey returned from Conference last week. We are glad to have him back.

Prof Cal Gay was seen passing through Green Bank Saturday. He must have a "beard" in his eye—he was wearing glasses, any way.

Rev R. M. Caldwell returned from his home in Kentucky, and filled his appointment Sunday morning. His health is somewhat better.

The weather is quite cold, but the farmers are still plowing. C.

PINE GROVE.

We are marching right along with the rest of the world in this part.

There was a large crowd at singing at Old Hamlin Church yesterday.

Ernest Moore, of Green Bank, and Lee Moore and wife, of Mill Point, have been visiting relatives in this section.

The County Normal is progressing finely under the management of Professor Barlow. Aron Sharp, of Frost, and Forest Houchin, of Wanless, enrolled as students on Monday. In last week's items should have read Misses Annie Sullivan (of Jacox) and Mamie Silva (of Mill Point.)

One cent invested in a newspaper will afford the purchaser from thirty minutes to three hours entertainment. What investment is it possible to make that will give anything like equal returns?—Printer's Ink.

The item fails to note the fact that some preparation is necessary to enable a man to purchase a newspaper for a cent and be entertained thereby. We must take into consideration the labor, time, and money required to fit the man for the enjoyment of that luxury. Other luxuries man takes to as a babe to its mother's breast, but to be a newspaper patron he must undergo the tortures of the damned as a boy to force into his unwilling and non-receptive brain the rudiments of reading and writing.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Ligon Marshall, a medical student, has returned from Baltimore.

Hon M. J. Cook, a Republican candidate for Congress, is in town. He hails from Hinton.

Hon C. P. Jones has recently been made the presiding officer of the board of visitors of the University of Virginia.

Sheriff E. M. Arbogast, of Highland, is in Marlinton. He has recently cleared several thousand dollars handling mountain land in this county.

R. D. Herold, of Kiowa, Kansas, who left this county about twelve years ago, came back to attend to some business matters at our April Court. He is a successful merchant.

T. S. McNeel, of Mill Point, a recent graduate of the University of Virginia law department, has been in Marlinton for several weeks preparing his legal matters for April Court. His friends here will be sorry to learn that he does not intend to locate in his native county, but has in view Clay Court house. He will go there before the May Court to determine finally whether he will chose that as his field of practice.

Is the Sunday School Degenerating?

Sunday school was begun at the church last Sunday. The prospects are good for interesting pleasant sessions of the same during the summer.

Edward W. Bok, a well-known social scientist, in the Ladies' Home Journal writes at length about the Sunday school. He says the movement is degenerating, is half dead; and that the great need is for cultured, magnetic men and women as teachers, especial care being used to fill the responsible office of superintendent. The Advocate, Richmond, prefers to think that the Sunday school is half alive and growing in usefulness; that the officers generally are earnest men, and while confessing imperfection, they do their best.

It is certain that in rural communities, where preaching service is rare, the attendance of Sunday school largely prevents idle visiting and conversation on the Sabbath,—if nothing more. Not so long ago the lesson consisted in teaching children to spell words of three letters from McGuffey's old blue back. Now Sunday school literature is prepared with the most painstaking care along lines of modern Christian thought.

The Dickey in Front.

The Marlinton stores have on exhibition an article of apparel which afforded Charles Dickens infinite delight in ridiculing. It appears under the name of the economical shirt-bosom, but is nothing more nor less that the "dickey" of Dickens' time. The object of this invention is to replace the shirt-bosom when it becomes soiled, and to prolong the life of a shirt four or five weeks between washings. It strikes a deadly blow at the laundryman. When they were in use before an amusing affair occurred at a meeting in western Pocahontas.

A young swell attended preaching on a hot summer day. At the end of the services his sweetheart accepted his company home, but his hated rival, who was bigger and stronger than he, brought him into disrepute. He ran up behind him and stripped off his coat and vest and the people saw that he had on no shirt or undershirt, but the starchiest of economical shirt-bosoms was held in place by an ingenious arrangement of twine.

That was about the last appearance of the "dickey" until they turned up again this spring.

A Pocahontas Wildcat.

The largest wildcat ever seen in Pocahontas County was killed on Deatharn's Creek recently by R. H. Warren and George Dunkel, two noted hunters of Cumberland Valley, Penn. As related by them the cat was from six to eight feet long and fought desperately in the capture, killing two dogs, and had to be shot thirteen times with a 44-40 Winchester before it was dead. The killing of this cat rids the neighborhood of a great nuisance, as it has been known, it is said, to have killed and carried off over year-old steers. For captured nearly a sterling tale about the capture, one of them stating the cat had great long whiskers, just like Captain McCormick. We do not vouch for the truth of this story, but simply relate it as it was told Captain A. E. Smith by the celebrated hunters, whose well-known reputation for veracity will convince all our readers of the truthfulness of the story.

An Invitation.

THANKS to those who have called at this office and invitation through The Times. We have had a visit which we enjoy. Now, we extend the invitation indefinitely hoping to have many others and that our callings may be agreeable and profitable. We do our part, promise to do our best to give you good value for the money you spend with us. Come in when you are in town and if you are not in town send in your orders. Our facilities are high grade and our prices low.

MAIL CARRIER DROWNED.

Unacquainted With the Dangerous Stick of the Ford Below Mt. Grove. He ventured in and His Feeble Mail-Horse Was Swept Over the Falls Below the Ford.

A tragic story of the drowning of a mail boy comes from Mt. Grove. Frank Coyner, a youth of twenty, came from Parkersburg to carry the mail on the route between Mt Grove and Warm Springs, a distance of thirteen miles. He made daily trips leaving Mt Grove in the morning and returning there in the evening. He crossed two swift, dangerous streams in going and returning, Back Creek and Jackson's River. Back Creek could well be dignified by the name of river as it is nearly as large as Jacksons River.

There had been a heavy rain Monday night, and on Tuesday, March 29th, he left his boarding place with every prospect of high waters to cross. He placed a letter he had written home behind the clock, remarking that if he did not get back the people could write to his father that he had found a watery grave. This was not an unnatural remark under the circumstances.

He made the trip and had got back to the ford on Back Creek, two miles below Mt Grove, where he was drowned. There were no witnesses of the accident.

Tuesday evening John Landes, who lives near the ford, went there for the express purpose of warning the mail boy that the creek was dangerous, knowing that he was a stranger in the country. He got there a few minutes too late. When he arrived at the ford he saw below it some distance a horse on an island near the shore with its foot hung in the bridle. He waded in and brought it out. He recognized the horse and took it to Mt Grove, where it was surmised in all probability the mail carrier was drowned. A party went there immediately but no trace of the body could be discovered. Mike O'Farred who was riding a powerful horse attempted to cross but was obliged to return.

The ford is at the lower end of an eddy, and immediately below the water dashes down a steep declivity forming frightful rapids. When the stream is high the water appears smooth above, but in reality it has a terrible suck. The mail boy rode a weak horse which was tired from its long journey.

The fate of the boy was known when the party reached John Darnell's house situated about a mile below the ford. His daughter was watching the rising waters and saw the mail-bag float by. She ran to the house with the news and returned in time to see the body of the unfortunate boy. First a hand was thrust high above the surface of the water, and then the knee appeared.

A large party searched the creek for the body and found it Friday. First the overcoat, then a boot, and then a vest were found. The mail-bag was lodged in a drift-heap two miles below the ford. The mail was damaged but the letters were readable. A postal card received by the writer which had been submerged shows little sign of damage. It was nothing like our Lewisburg mail in ordinary wet weather. The first two days the searchers did not go down the stream far enough, but on Friday at a point nearly three miles below the ford they found the body on the rocks on the edge of the stream.

In all probability the boy's foot hung in the stirrup and this would account for the body floating at a considerable distance behind the mail-bag. Also for the fact that the overcoat, coat, vest and boot were stripped off. The stream runs with almost incredible swiftness from the ford to the place the body was found. It is in the gap where Back Creek breaks through the mountain to flow into Jacksons River.

Railroad Matters.

A change has been made in the plans of the rail road engineers. Instead of starting at the forks of the river and surveying down to Marlinton, the corps, with Captain Bartholemew at the head, will arrive at Marlinton Thursday or Friday and survey from this point to Rosecrantz.

W. M. Yeager sent teams from Travelers Repose to Beverly this week for the purpose of bringing in the engineers and these teams will come on to Marlinton.

William Sigle, John Yeager and Henry Smith have been engaged to work on the survey.

There have been numerous reports printed lately concerning the work being done on the Pocahontas extension of the Chesapeake & Western. The contractor recently bought 200,000 ties. The object of this road is to reach the coal fields of West Virginia, and will cross Pocahontas from east to west.

Primary Election

The Executive Committee of the Democratic party met in a full session April 5th. It was decided to hold a primary election June 1st, 1898, and a convention June 2nd to nominate delegates to the State convention. Full call next week.

HUNTERSVILLE.

William Irvine, of Marlinton, was in town Friday on business.

The Sunday School was reorganized here Sunday.

Col D. A. Fisher was on Knapps Creek on business last Saturday.

Henry Mascomb, who was taken suddenly ill several days ago, is able to be around again.

George Buzzard, who has been working in the Webster lumber camps, came in Sunday.

Dr Harry Beard, of Lewisburg, is spending a few days with his parents, Mr and Mrs J. J. Beard.

Considerable rain and snow have fallen lately, and farming has come to a stand still. Mud is plentiful.

Any person desiring to know what became of the man in the hearse who was selling Hite's Pain Killer, can call on A. B. McComb and he will gladly give the desired information.

The case of Lauty McCarty vs Henry Gum was heard before Squire Grose last Saturday. After hearing the evidence and argument the Justice decided in favor of the defendant. H. M. Lockridge represented the plaintiff and H. S. Rucker the defendant.

Messrs J. Willis Baxter and G. R. Curry, of Academy; L. M. McClintic, W. A. Bratton, S. B. Scott, N. C. McNeil Uriah Bird, A. E. Smith, and Dr Cunningham, of Marlinton; I. B. Moore, L. W. Herold and D. B. McElwee, of Knapps Creek, and D. T. McNeil, of Buckeye, were welcome visitors at our town last week.

Our esteemed fellow townsman, George W. Ginger, is adding very much to the value and appearance of his property on Main Street. He has been engaged for the last month building a picket fence in front of his residence, and has nearly finished putting in the posts. He is very anxious to complete it this season. O. E. McKeever says the reason the work has not progressed more rapidly is because Mr Ginger had some trouble in borrowing the necessary tools. Do not be discouraged, George, as you may yet finish your fence before Capt Apperson completes his job of sawing for John Grogg in Hickory hollow.

Everybody is talking of war.

ALFRED.

A Heartfelt Tribute.

One of the finest meals we have eaten this side of Philadelphia lately, we took at T. T. Hodges', last Tuesday. Talk about clever people and good livers, but no people ever lived who can make you feel more at home than you will feel in the jvalley of plenty home of T. T. Hodges.—Calhoun Chronicle.

Verily the editor of the Chronicle chronicles his downsittings and his uprisings. The writer has often felt like proclaiming the excellence of a friend's cuisine, but we did not for we were not able to convey all we felt. If the editor of the Chronicle were to come to Pocahontas and visit around for a few weeks he would have his hands full for his experience would give him three realistic, luscious, throbbing locals a day.

Notice to Tax-Payers.

Notice is hereby given to all persons who owe back taxes that I shall expect them to settle them in full, at my office in the Court House, at the April Term of Court. HOW TO FIND OUT.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What to Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr Kilmer's Swamp Root, the great kidney remedy fulfills every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys liver bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold urin and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following the use liquor, beer, or wine and over comes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists, price fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet both sent free by mail, upon receipt of three two-cent stamps to cover cost of postage on the bottle. Mention The Times and send your address to Dr Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The proprietors guarantee the genuineness of this offer.

OUR WILD WATER FOWL.

Game Birds Seen on Greenbrier River—Some Unique Specimens.

With the 1st day of April the local sportsman lost his right to shoot wild fowl on the Greenbrier River and see the dead bodies float away on the swift waters. It is now the close season under the act of 1897.

Every winter for a season wild ducks come down and sojourn on the river. The shellback, the butter duck and the dubipper are the local names of the most common species which may be seen here at most seasons of the year, but in the spring we have all the larger species of ducks.

For many years a duck called the summer duck made its nest in a hollow sycamore tree near the big island above Greenbrier bridge.

There is another duck which nests here, and is one of the most remarkable of natatorial birds. It is the wood duck, a large red-headed member of tribe which builds its nest sometimes as high as thirty feet from the ground in the hollow of a tree. Every one who has been much about the river in the summer has seen the mother duck with her brood around her. The hunter who declared he killed the duck he had bought, in a tree, would have to fall back on the West Virginia wood duck to give his tale a semblance of truth.

The wild goose which occasionally comes down to swim in our waters or eat in the wheat-fields in early spring, is not the gray goose of the old world. Our domesticated goose is from the gray goose, and not from the wild goose of America, which flies above our heads in as regular formation as a company of soldiers traveling to the musical "honk." Over a year ago a wild goose dropped down on the waters which encircle our town on a Sabbath morning in February. It was too much for the sporting blood to stand and was killed by a citizen of the place with a 38-calibre rifle. It made a good dinner.

Swans are very rarely seen here but there is one very notable instance of a black swan being killed on the river below the bridge about twenty years ago. The common wild swan is white. There is only one species of black swan and it is found in Australia. The most plausible theory advanced for the presence of a black swan in these waters is that it was a bird which had been brought to America in captivity and afterwards escaped.

One of the most interesting birds of America is the loon or diver. It is rather common on the river stopping with us temporarily. It is supposed to nest inside the Arctic circle. Tho able to fly great distances it has much trouble rising off the water, and we have heard it said by local naturalists that it climbs up a bank and launches itself in the air from an elevation. Its feet are adapted to swimming and in its long dives it also uses its wings. It can hardly walk, and from this it gets its name, loon being from the same root as lame. It has a cry which resembles that of the wolf and is supposed by the superstitious to forbode misfortune to those who are unlucky enough to hear it. When shot at it submerges its body and moves swiftly in the water, and it takes a most remarkable shot to hit its head with a rifle. Its flesh is very unpalatable.

This is a review of some of the known species of water fowl which occasionally visit us, and we propose to wind up by an account of the killing of a strange aquatic bird under most extraordinary circumstances.

In the fall of 1899 a party were deer hunting on Williams River. The driver took the hounds out on Tea Creek Mountain and near the top started a fine buck. He saw the deer give a jump or two and he sat down to wait, on a log at the very top of the mountain, which has an elevation of 4000 feet or more. As he listened to the hounds running an object caught his eye about thirty steps from him. He was never sure as to whether it was a bird or not until it spread its head. It was a large, long-necked bird with webbed feet. In size it was about as large as a wild goose. He took careful aim with his Winchester and shot its head off. It was said to be rarely met with, but was able to give it a name. A member of the party was certain he had seen a like bird in British Columbia. It was as fat as could be, and when cooked was found to be finely flavored. It has never been classified but remains as a solitary instance of a water fowl killed on the top of one of the highest peaks in the eastern part of the United States.

THE MENDING HABIT.

Humorist Burdette Points Out the Danger of Becoming a Confirmed Cobbler.

"Let a man once fall into the habit of pottering, of tinkering at his house, his body, his character, and always there is danger that he will become a confirmed cobbler," writes Robert J. Burdette of "The Mending Basket," in the April Ladies Home Journal. "Where he should rip off a rotting roof from ridge to cornice, he will stick in a shingle, a piece of slate, a scrap of tin, amid ever-increasing leaks, dry rot and general decay. He braces and bolsters and patches walls and fences until his farm looks as tho it had a combination of Saint Vitus' dance and delirium tremens. He tinkers at his poor perishing frame with cure-alls and lotions, pills and plasters. He braces up his decaying virtues with good resolutions, and poultices his vices with good intentions. He fences his follies with certain—or rather uncertain—limitations. And, after all, he is the same old man. Decayed and decaying, weak here and warped there; out of plum, disjointed and covered with patches that do not renew him nor mend him at all, but merely emphasize his degeneration."

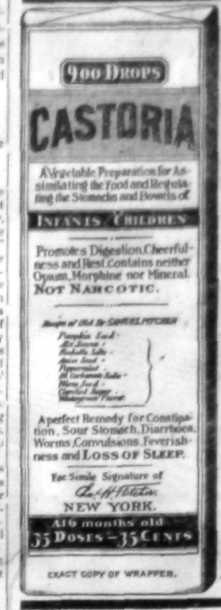
The Greatest Monument to Man's Handiwork.—"The greatest structure ever raised by the hand of man," writes William C. Jordan of "the Greatest Things in the World," in the April Ladies Home Journal, "is the Great Pyramid of Cheops, founded 4000 years ago, and measuring 746 feet square on the base and 449 feet high. It took 20 years in construction; 100,000 men working for three months, and being then relieved, were succeeded by an equally large corps. The massive stones were brought from Arabia, 700 miles away. The cost of the work is estimated at $145,000,000."

WE seem to be on the verge of war. An army officer remarked the other day that those outside of army circles had no idea of the warlike preparations that are being made.

ADMIRAL SICARD, of the Atlantic Squadran, has been relieved from duty on account of physical incapacity, and Captain Sampson, the oldest captain in the navy, takes his place.

OBITUARY.

Miss Lucy Hill aged 18 years died near Lobelia, of lung trouble, after suffering three months of untold agony. She was the daughter of Wesley and Elizabeth Hill, one of twins—her sister died when about three years old. She had been a member of the Methodist church for several years, and was a very pious girl and loved by all. Her mother, three sisters and two brothers remain. While we can not always understand God's works of providence, we would say to all prepare to meet her on the other side of the river, where her pains are felt no more, where no more farewell tears are shed, nor broken hearts to bind up.



Courage, our souls, on God rely,
D liverance soon will come;
A thousand ways has Providence
To bring His children home.

"'TIS the skeerce season of the year," remarked Grandma Casey, as the loud squawking of a hen was heard which ceased with a thalf choked sound that suggested that Miss Eliza Jane had got her thumb and finger on the neck of the bird. "I do think that May is the skeercest month in the whole year. Folks has ginerally eat up what they put up for winter and it aint time for any garden truck."

The sound of the old hen in distress would have been full of significance to Weston if he had been experienced in coming to country houses unexpectedly, but this was his first visit of this kind. As it was, it suggested a change of subject. He asked innocently enough, "Do you raise many chickens?"

"There's severals about the place. I hope to goodness Liza Jane has n't killed any hen what's settin'. It do appear to me that gals has got less gumption these days than they ever had."

The old lady busied herself about the fire place. She was cooking in a Dutch oven, that standard diah called "sweet pone," which can not be produced except by the open fire. The oven was set on a bed of coals and the lid was covered with them. The product is a kind of corn bread that looks as hard and compact as marble. Presently Liza Jane brought the dis*severed members of the unfortunate* fowl, which the company should not have heard, and part of the fire in the fire place was transferred to a cooking stove that shouldered itself into the corner of the big fire place, and Liza Jane rolled up the sleeves of her fair arms and mixed up some dough for biscuits. A pot on the hook was bubbling away, cooking pota*toes, and the old lady poured a* handful of coffee into a rag and making a bunch of it pounded it on the smooth hearth. It having been pulverized to a certain extent it was put in a coffee pot, and the supper was cooking in full blast. The table was set, and, in addition to the necessary dishes, a dozen kind of preserves were placed upon it at different places to complete the spread.

The hired man, Bill Kendall, coming home with a load of meal from the mill, Grandma Casey gave the word.

"Lift the supper, Liza Jane," and the supper that was lifted up was to Weston a glorious insight into the bountiful food which has put an additional heighth, and breadth and thickness into every generation of mountaineers until a man is not tall unless he can carry two sacks of salt (400lbs) from the store porch to his wagon.

That supper was a revelation to the city man. To the wonder of his hostess he refused to have biscuits twenty times. He was enjoying a new dish—sweet pone. Potatoes, and fried chicken, and ham, and good butter and milk were destroyed. The old lady mystified him very much by asking him if the milk was "rampy." Now it was not, and besides it was milk from cows which ate blue grass, and drank pure limestone water, and which had been set in a pan in a cold stream of water, issuing from the base of the hill, in volume almost enough to turn a mill, and it had a taste that he had never known in milk before, and he recognized that it was the first real milk he had ever drank. He had a vague idea that the old lady was led to know whether the milk suited his taste, and he said:

"Yes"

"For the land's sakes, Liza Jane, have them pesky dows been eatin range oats? They 're just eatin 'em till a body is nearly plum drove distracted. Let me throw it out."

"You must excuse me, Weston, but I see I have misunderstood you. I have never tasted milk as good as this."

Bill, the hired man, explained that the cows in the spring were apt to eat a plant that looked like a lilly, which was a species of garlic, known as ramps. Cows were very fond of it in the spring and it was good for their constitutions, but the milk that they gave was the most repulsive fluid that could be imagined. The butter was just as bad, and the housekeeper had to be on the alert during the spring months to keep the cows from eating it and to detect the taint in the milk by continually tasting it.

"I tell you what, Mister, if you want ter live on nothin' e tall fer a week or two, you jist try drinkin' rampy milk."

"Now, we're poor folks ter wait on er body," said the old lady, "so you must jest reach and help yourself."

And their guest reached and reached until he reached the limit, and he made himself popular with the old lady by destroying so much of her good supper. The two younger persons at the table may have "looked, and looked until the wonder grew" that one small form could hold all that he ate, but in spite of it they would not have liked him not to have eaten. With Liza Jane, she would have had him eat wheat bread, and Grandma Casey could not understand why he preferred milk to coffee. After supper he and the hired man went down to the milk gap, smoking cigars from Weston's case, and helped Liza Jane with the calves and the milking.

Bill said he "didn't see nothin' of airy hoss in the barn," and wanted to know where Weston's was. Weston, realizing that he must get a horse or he would not be able to keep his friends, immediately told his friend that he must buy a horse, as he needed one badly.

When bed time came, he was very politely shown to his room "in the loft," by the hired man, who seemed noways disposed to leave him. Weston was tired and as he prepared for bed by the light of the tallow candle, Kendall gave him some of the inside facts concerning Grandma Casey and her pretty granddaughter. The old lady was well off—owned that farm and a lot of other land, and was powerfully opposed to Liza Jane marrying the young man of her choice, a certain school teacher who had taught the neighborhood school a year or so before and who had boarded with the old lady. The old lady had loved that Liza Jane should never marry none of the Cassidy blood while she was there to stop it. According to Kendall, the young school-teacher represented a new generation of the Cassidy's, and, having to construct his own fortune in the world, he had been making a good start on the road. Cassidy had been elected county superintendant at the school election a week or two before, but that had not helped matters at all. Kendall was of the firm opinion that it did not do any good for the old folks to interfere with the young folks, and he believed that it made the girl harder to manage in this case. As she would be the sole heiress of all the old lady's property, the disposition of her hand in marriage was a matter that gave many people great concern.

By this time Weston was in the softest of feather beds. The sweetest smelling linen surrounded him. He could see a star through the shingle roof. The hired man walked off with the light. In the absence of a man of the house, he had performed this attention to the guest, of waiting until he had disrobed and taking the light away with him. To let company go to bed by themselves would be a most inhospitable act. Weston went to sleep to be wakened by the piercing scream of an owl, which was a means of letting him know how well he fared. He woke just before sunrise and saw as he lay the bald knob towering up above him. In a moment it was yellow with the morning sun, and he lazily watched the sunlight creep down the side of the mountain. He was not dressed, that was no proper term made for nothing like how he awoke. Supposing it would be all right, he got in his clothes, and was greeted by Mr Kendall as he descended the steps with the invitation, "Have a wash?"

Weston assented, though he saw no water to perform the feat. The hired man took a large sparse towel and led the way to the spring. From a small cave there rushed a stream strong enough to supply a city. For a few feet it dashed over a rocky bed, and just as it was to fall over the rocky sides, down two or three feet, a spout caught enough to fill a wooden trough with an ever changing supply of the cleanest, purest water in the world. The thick leaved trees over hung all. The stream flowed through a dairy built on its rocky bottom. Into the trough the young men plunged their hands and bathed. We cannot describe the beautiful springs which abound in the mountains, and especially the one we have in mind. We can only tell of a man who once came into that shady nook of rushing waters, on a hot summer day, to drink, and who a year later when sick of fever in the great city of New York, constantly cried out in his delirium to be taken to that spring, and to be left there alone. If a man in torment would call for a drop of wa*ter, what must the memory of such* a place be to him.

But all mountain homes do not have the facilities of such a spring as Weston learned later. He was traveling and he came to a place where everything was very uncomfortable. The house was dirty and the food repulsive. The next morning the man of the house took an old milk pan much rusted and din*ged, and, partly filling it with wa*ter, led the way to an old stump in the yard, upon which he placed the pan. All the men about the place some four or five gathered with solemn faces about the stump, looking as though they were going to perform a solemn rite, to which they were not too well accustomed. The signal, "Dip in," was given and each right hand went into the pan, was withdrawn with a little water and the other hand rubbed vigorously. Then the face was treated to a like performance, and the result was a damp polish. There was no precedence—all should begin and end together and each should wipe with the one towel when ever he could get a section of it for himself. On this particular morning, the several men made short work with the little water in the pan, but as they were returning to the house, they met a towheaded youngster about ten years old, who came running out shouting, "Pap, did you leave any water in the pan?"

CALL FOR PRIMARY ELECTION.

Rules Governing Election.—Commissioners of Election, Etc. Call for a Convention.

At a meeting of the Democratic Executive Committee of Pocahontas County, West Virginia, held at the office of the undersigned chairman on the 5th day of April, 1898, pursuant to a call, a primary election was ordered to be held on the

to nominate a Democratic candidate for member of the House of Delegates, County Commissioner and County Superintendent of Free Schools, and member of the Board of Education, and such other district offices as may be vacant; and at that time and place the following rules were adopted:

1.—All Democrats are entitled to cast their votes in said primary who will be legal voters at the general election.

2.—The voting shall be by ballot, and the names of all candidates for offices to be voted for shall be on a single ballot, the candidates for each office to be grouped together under a heading specifying for what office they offer. The voter shall erase all the names on the ballot except those for whom he casts his vote, but no voter shall vote for more than one candidate for each office, and in such case the voter shall be considered as having rased all the names of the candidates for said office.

3.—The place of holding said election shall be at the voting places established and used in the general election of 1894, and at the same buildings.

4.—The polls shall be kept open from sunrise to sunset.

5.—The primary shall be conducted at each voting place by three commissioners hereinafter appointed. Said commissioners shall be sworn by some one legally authorized to administer an oath, to conduct the primary election in fairness and impartiality and in accordance to these instructions. Said commissioners shall keep a list of persons voting, and when the polls are closed, and not before, open the ballot box and count the votes. They shall make a statement of the number of votes cast, and for whom, and shall sign and give said return, together with tally sheets and ballots sealed in a separate package to one of the members of the Democratic Executive Committee of this county, and lay the same before the Committee, which is hereby called to meet, to canvass the returns of said primary election, on the 11th day of June, 1898, at 1 o'clock, at which time they shall ascertain and declare the nominees selected by this primary. A quorum of said meeting shall consist of four or more members. The said sealed returns may be mailed to the Chairman or Secretary, to be presented to the Committee at this meeting.

6.—The candidate receiving the largest number of votes in the county cast for the office for which he offers shall be declared nominated. This committee, in event of a contest, shall decide said contest by a careful canvass and count of the ballots, and in case of a tie then the Executive Committee in full session shall decide between the two candidates as to which shall be the nominee.

8.—Every person desiring to be voted for in said primary shall forward to L. M. McClintic, H. S. Rucker, and Andrew Price, who are hereby appointed ballot commissioners to arrange for the printing and framing of said ballot, his announcement in writing, accompanied by the sum of $5 to defray the expenses of printing the ballots and holding said election, if he be a candidate for Member of the House of Delegates, County Commissioner, or County Superintendent of Free Schools, and $2.50 if he offers for a district office.

The said ballot Commissioners shall cause to be printed a sufficient number of ballots to supply each candidate with all that he requires, and shall forward to each voting place in care of one of the commissioners of election a sufficient number to supply the voters of said precinct. Said candidates must forward their names to the ballot commissioners on or before the 18th day of May, 1898.

9.—Any voter of the county may vote for county officers outside of the precinct in which he resides on his making oath or affirmation of the commissioners, before some one legally authorized to administer an oath, that he is a bona fide voter of this county and has not previously voted in this county primary.

10.—The following persons are hereby appointed to serve as commissioners to conduct the election at the precincts named:

Green Bank—John R. Warwick, J. F. Patterson, C. A. Lightner.

Dunmore—E. N. Moore, Jacob Taylor, C. E. Pritchard.

Travellers Repose—P. D. Yeager, Vanburen Arbogast, Amos Gillispie.

Huntersville—C. L. Moore, J. H. Doyle, Sherman Curry.

Frost—Wise Herold, C. W. Rider, J. A. Moore.

Marlinton—Thomas Courtney, G. M. Kee, S. B. Scott, Jr.

Edray—George S. Taylor, John Young, William Sharp.

Split Rock—A. C. L. Gatewood, Samuel Varner, Clark Sharp.

Academy—J. K. Bright, Dr J. A. Larue, George Clark.

Lobelia—J. B. Grimes, J. M. McClure, T. R. Vaughn.

Mill Point—Isaac McNeel, W. W. Ruckman, C. M. Wallace.

In event that any of these should refuse to serve as commissioners of election, the members of the executive committee of that district shall appoint to fill the vacancy, or in event the appointment is not made, then the Democratic voters present may select the commissioners necessary.

Resolved further, that a county convention be called to meet at the court-house of this county on to select delegates to the Democratic Congressional Convention and State Senatorial Convention, and to select a new Democratic Executive Committee.

Tuesday, June 21, 1898,

Every Democratic voter in the county is considered a delegate to said County Convention, and the delegates of each district of the county shall be chosen from and by the voters present from said district.
